Hitler Won't Deal With Poles, He Tells Daladier; Claims Corridor; Fear of War Rises in Germany; France Ready to Mobilize; Japan's Cabinet Falls

500,000 Flee Paris, Families Of U. S. Envoys Go to Brittany

By Taylor Henry.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Aug. 27.—Premier Daladier's office announced tonight that Adolf Hitler had rejected a proposal to negotiate directly with Poland.

The proposal was made by Daladier through his Ambassador to Berlin yesterday. The refusal was conveyed orally yesterday and in writing today.

In view of the Fuehrer's stand and Daladier's unusual action in making it public tonight, general mobilization was expected momentarily.

Earlier today the French government, itself already aware of Hitler's answer, issued an urgent warning to the civilian population to evacuate Paris.

500,000 Quit Paris

Transportation experts estimated that slightly less than 500,000 of Paris' 3,000,000 population had left "for the duration of the crisis."

Requisition of private automobiles and use of railroad lines for troop transport already had begun to reduce transportation facilities.

The communique disclosing the French-German exchanges said that Daladier in his message to Hitler "affirmed that no man with a heart could understand why a war should start without at least a new direct effort at a peaceful arrangement having been made between Germany and Poland."

Daladier offered his services "to make such an effort possible."

Hitler, in reply, according to the communique, declared he could not accept the proposition Daladier had suggested.

The communique declared Hitler yesterday afternoon informed the French Ambassador to Berlin, Robert Coulondre, of his flat refusal to undertake direct negotiations with Poland.

(Writing in the Paris newspaper Ordre, the commentator Pertinax said Daladier would reply to Hitler Monday.)

The German charge d'affaires at 8:15 (2:15 p. m., E. S. T.) handed the note to Daladier personally. He stayed with the premier only long enough to lay the note on his desk.

Bullitt Called In

Daladier at once called in United States Ambassador Bullitt. Within ten minutes the American Ambassador was closeted with his close friend, the premier, in the war ministry.

[The United Press said the German charge later called on Bullitt. —Editor's note.]

The text of the communique issued by Daladier's office read:

"August 25, 5:30 p. m., M. Coulondre, French ambassador to Germany, responding to a call, was received by the Fuehrer Chancellor Hitler.

"The chief of the German government requested our ambassador to transmit a declaration to the French prime minister.

"In that declaration M. Hitler made known that he could no longer tolerate such a situation as existed in Poland and that he would deplore for German blood and French blood to be spilled as a result of measures which he would be led to take to regulate the situation.

Fidelity to Pacts Cited

"M. Daladier, advised by M. Coulondre of this declaration, at once sent to M. Hitler a message in which he recalled France's profound attachment to peace as well as her fidelity to her publicly contracted engagements with other nations.

"He recalled also that no Frenchman had ever pressed harder than he himself to establish between the German people and the French people cordial relations and sincere collaboration for the maintenance of the peace of Europe.

"M. Daladier offered his personal guarantee of the disposition shown by Poland for a mutual recourse to methods of free conciliation.

"He affirmed that no man with a heart could understand why a war should start without at least a new direct effort at a peaceful

Hitler Death Plot Denied

London, Aug. 27 (UP).—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Warsaw today reported a radio announcement that a plot for an attempt upon Adolf Hitler's life had been discovered by the German Gestapo (secret police) in Berlin yesterday. The plot reportedly involved members of the military, the Reichstag and the Nazi Party.

Berlin (Monday), Aug. 28. The propaganda ministry today denied emphatically a purported plot against Adolf Hitler's life. "What amazing things a fertile imagination can produce," was the spokesman's comment.

Japanese Withdraw

Hongkong (Monday), Aug. 28 (UP).—Japanese troops are withdrawing from the northern border of this British crown colony, British authorities announced today. Seven Japanese transports arrived in Taishan Bay during the night and Japanese troops now are embarking on them. It was understood a skeleton patrol would be left to cover border points.

Soviet to Sell Arms

London, Monday, Aug. 28 (UP).—Diplomatic advices from Warsaw today say the Soviet Union has assured Poland that its pact with Germany will not interfere with Soviet shipments of war supplies and raw materials to Poland in event of war.

Berlin Attache Recalled

Berlin, Aug. 27 (AP).—Without an explanation, the official German news agency tonight announced the Soviet military attache in Berlin, Col. Gerassimoff, had been recalled.

Nazi Ships Told to 'Act'

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Radio Station WMCA here reported tonight intercepting a short-wave broadcast from Europe calling about 50 Nazi ships at sea by name and ordering in German: "Act on your special secret instructions:" It was believed this meant "return to Germany."

Train Service Halted

Warsaw, Aug. 27 (INS).—It was officially announced tonight that all railway service between Poland and Germany will be discontinued.

Pact Rejected

Bucharest, Aug. 27 (AP).—It was learned tonight that Rumania had refused a Hungarian offer to negotiate a treaty fixing the rights of the Hungarian minority in this country. The proposal was made by Hungary.

Gen. Abe Slated Tokyo Premier; Firm Anti-Soviet Policy Forecast

By Don Brown
Special Cable to The Post

Tokyo (Monday), Aug. 28.—Premier Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma this morning submitted to the Emperor the resignations of himself and all other members of his cabinet.

Prearranged formalities then were started that are expected to result in an imperial command this afternoon to Gen. Noduyuki Abe to form a new cabinet. Gen. Abe should be able to complete his list of ministers by tomorrow.

Domei understands the new war minister will be Lieut. Gen. Rensuke Isotai, chief of staff of the Kwantung Army, who has been largely responsible for the operations since May against the Soviets along the Manchukuo-Outer Mongolian border. He accepted the post yesterday.

For navy minister, naval leaders have selected Vice Admiral Zengo Yoshida, commander of the combined fleets, who is expected to continue the moderate views of Vice Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai. Yet to become known are the probable new foreign, finance and home ministers, who will help to determine the complexion of the new cabinet.

Hiranuma Takes Blame

In a statement announcing the cabinet's resignation, the premier assumes responsibility for the change in the situation brought about by the German-Soviet nonaggression pact and expresses belief a revision of foreign policy to tide over the emergency should be left to other hands.

As in the last two cabinet changes, the resignation of the cabinet was delayed until arrangements had been completed informally for the selection of a new premier.

Gen. Abe has been conferring for several days with veteran statesmen, government leaders and politicians, and is believed to have made up his mind about most of the names on his list of ministers.

The government banned any mention of cabinet crisis or change in the national press and in messages sent abroad, but the press managed to inform the public fairly well of what was going on with the emphasis it placed on the premier's "determination" and "renovation of the domestic system."

Problems Increase

Partially because of this phrase used by the newspapers to describe the cabinet change, the impression prevails that the change does mean renovation and that the circumstances make it a renovation in the direction of moderation.

As a result, considerable hopefulness is in the air, despite realization that there probably are more problems now requiring solution than before Germany entered into its agreement with the Soviet Union.

The second army premier since the Manchurian incident, 63-year-old Gen. Abe has been in almost complete retirement since he shared the fate of all the other members of the Supreme War Council, who were not imperial princes and had to resign in assuming responsibility

Duce Suggests 4-Power Parley Over Polish Issues to England

By William Hillman
International News Service

London, Aug. 27.—Great Britain tomorrow will reply to Fuehrer Hitler's proposals by categorically rejecting the Reichsfuehrer's demand Britain withdraw her guarantee to Poland that if Polish independence is threatened or Poland is attacked, Britain will fight.

Irrespective of what modifications are made in the final draft of Prime Minister Chamberlain's answer to Hitler at tomorrow's cabinet session, this will be contained in the British reply which Sir Nevile Henderson, ambassador to Berlin, will take to the Fuehrer tomorrow.

The British answer also will state that no concessions not fully acceptable to Poland would be considered. The answer will also point out that a new atmosphere, to be brought about by easing the tension can be opened.

[The government will propose a several months' "truce" in Germany's dispute with Poland, during which negotiations would be opened for a peaceful settlement, the United Press said.—Editor's note.]

Meanwhile, Premier Mussolini, of Italy, today submitted to the British cabinet his own plan for solution of the Danzig-Polish situation.

The cabinet considered Il Duce's plan, which is a compromise of the demands of Hitler and includes the suggestion of a four-power conference.

The cabinet decided tonight to submit Mussolini's plan and the British plan to Poland for consideration. No recommendation will

Solution Is Possible If Both Sides Willing, French Premier Says

By the United Press.

Berlin (Monday), Aug. 28.—Text of French Premier Edouard Daladier's letter to Adolf Hitler, to which the latter replied yesterday, was revealed here today as follows:

Dear Mr. Chancellor:

The French Ambassador to Berlin brought your personal message to my attention.

In the hour when you speak, the gravest responsibility which two statesmen may assume in certain circumstances, namely to shed the blood of two great peoples who only long for peace and work, I owe it to our two great peoples to say that the fate of peace still lies in your hands.

You can have no doubts of my sentiments toward Germany nor the peaceful sentiments of the French people toward your nation. No Frenchman has done more than myself to emphasize between our nations not only peace but also sincere co-operation in our own interests as well as in the interest of Europe and the world.

Unless you concede the French people a less high conception of honor than I am conceding the German people you cannot doubt that France will loyally fulfill her obligations to other powers, powers such as Poland, which I am convinced wants to live at peace with Germany.

These two conceptions are fully compatible with each other. Up to the present there is nothing which could prevent a peaceful solution of the international crisis with honor and dignity for all people, if there is an equal will to peace on both sides.

With the good will of France, I express that of all those allied with her. I, myself, guarantee the preparedness which Poland has always shown for mutual application of the procedure of free adjustment such as one could imagine between the governments of two sovereign nations.

With a clear conscience I can assure that there is between Germany and Poland, with reference to differences which have arisen on the Danzig question, no differences which cannot be submitted to such procedure for the purpose of a peaceful and just solution.

Upon my honor I can also bear witness that there is in the clear and sincere solidarity of France with Poland and her allies nothing which could in any way diminish the peaceful spirit of my fatherland.

This solidarity never prevented us, nor prevents us today, from keeping firm this peaceful spirit.

Europe in Summary

PREMIER DALADIER announced Fuehrer Hitler had flatly rejected his suggestion that Germany and Poland negotiate directly; general mobilization was believed near, and citizens were advised to leave Paris.

FUEHRER HITLER, angered by Daladier's statement, published his letter to the French premier, openly demanding for the first time not only Danzig, but the Polish Corridor; mobilization continued, transportation was virtually suspended, and ration cards were issued.

BRITAIN'S CABINET today will reject Hitler's demand that Britain withdraw her guarantees to Poland, and will declare no concessions not acceptable to Poland would be considered; Hitler's communication and Britain's answer will be published in London today. Britain believed sparring for time to permit Germany to realize fully the crisis.

JAPAN'S CABINET resigned, presumably as the result of the necessity for reversing its foreign policy after the signing of the Soviet-German nonaggression pact.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI was making intense new efforts to preserve peace, including a rumored plan offered to Britain and further telephonic consultation with Hitler. Page 4.

DANZIG EVACUATED women and children as a reported 20,000 troops, recently reinforced from East Prussia, manned rapidly growing border entrenchments. Page 7.

POLAND STILL HOPED for peace, but prepared for war, as some leaders said the only chance for averting hostilities was in the possibility of neutral intervention by some world leader. Page 4.

ATLANTIC SHIPPING was completely upset by the threat of war. Page 22.

CANADA'S PREMIER, Mackenzie King, received from Mussolini a pledge to do all possible for a "just" peace. Page 5.

GERMAN CITIZENS were reported leaving China in the face of Japanese "anti-German" incidents; Japanese were reported ordered to treat Americans and "other whites" more courteously. Page 5. Troops were withdrawn at Hongkong.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, a high Washington official said, will call Congress and invoke the neutrality act immediately if war breaks out. He gave up plans to go to Hyde Park.

GREAT BRITAIN moved further toward mobilization of financial resources by barring unauthorized sales of foreign securities held by Britons. Page 3.

War Expected to Bring Neutrality Act Into Effect

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt will proclaim the neutrality act in effect almost immediately if a European war breaks out, whether or not war is actually declared, a high official said yesterday.

The act leaves to the President's discretion determination when a "state of war" exists and in the absence of a formal declaration of war he would not nessarily have to invoke the neutrality law. It has never been applied to the Sino-Japanese conflict, now in its third year.

But, while Mr. Roosevelt has said repeatedly, the present neutrality act impairs this Government's freedom of action, highly placed officials said his course of action if war breaks out would be the following:

Call a special session of Congress at which the major task would be the discussion of new neutrality legislation.

Simultaneously invoke the existing neutrality act.

Issue all the executive orders called for under the act.

Officials made only one distinction. They said that the war must clearly be of great magnitude. Presumably what they had in mind was the possibility of a lightning war by Germany against Poland alone, with Britain and France refusing to come in. In that case, the act possibly would not be invoked.

It is believed here that if war comes, it will burst upon the world without a formal declaration, in order to take full advantage of the element of surprise. But it is also believed formal declarations of war would follow.

The proclamations necessary to put the neutrality act into force are drafted, at least in tentative form.

Germany Fighting 'For Right, Fuehrer Says, Giving Aims

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Monday), Aug. 28.—The letter which Adolf Hitler wrote to French Premier Edouard Daladied is dated Berlin, August 27, and reads as follows in English translation:

My dear Minister President:

I understand the misgiving to which you give expression.

I, too, have never overlooked the grave responsibilities which are imposed upon those who are in charge of the fate of nations.

As an old front fighter, I, like yourself, know the horrors of war. Guided by this attitude and experience I have tried honestly to remove all matters that might cause conflict between our two peoples.

I have quite frankly given one assurance to the French people, namely that the return of the Saar would constitute the precondition for this.

After its return I immediately and solemnly pronounced my renunciation of any further claims that might concern France. The German people approved of this, my attitude.

No Ill Feeling Held

As you could judge for yourself during your last visit here, the German people, in the knowledge of its own behavior held and holds no ill feelings, much less hatred, for its onetime brave opponent.

On the contrary, the pacification of our western frontier led to an increasing sympathy. Certainly as far as the German people are concerned a sympathy which on many occasions showed itself in a really demonstrative way.

The construction of the western fortifications, which swallowed and still swallows many millions (of marks) at the same time constituted for Germany a document of acceptance and fixation of the final frontiers of the Reich.

In doing so, the German people have renounced two provinces which once belonged to the German Reich, later were conquered again at the cost of much blood, and finally defended with even more blood.

I believed that by this renunciation and this attitude, every conceivable source of conflict between our two peoples had been done away with, which might lead to a repetition of the tragedy of 1914-1918.

This voluntary limitation of the German claims to life in the west, however, cannot be interpreted as an acceptance of all other phases of the Versailles dictate.

I have really tried, year after year, to achieve the revision of at least the most impossible and unbearable provisions of this dic-

Nazis Adamant Toward Warsaw; Doubt Peaceful Solution Likely

By Joseph Barnes.
Special Cable to The Post

Berlin (Monday), Aug. 28.—Nervousness over the possibility of war increased sharply here early this morning when the propaganda ministry issued the text of an exchange of letters between Fuehrer Hitler and Premier Daladier of France.

Although it is regarded here still as the side-show to the main decision, which hangs on London, the letters—peaceful in tone on both sides—have apparently served only to irritate the French and to anger the German chancellor.

The French are believed here to have resented the German chancellor's mention in the letter of Alsace and Lorraine, an illusion without open threat but with bad memories in Paris. The Germans are quite frankly angered over Premier Daladier's statement in Paris last night to the effect that Hitler had turned down his appeal for a peaceful solution of the Polish dispute.

Generals Stay an Hour

Signs of nervousness were apparent in Berlin at a late hour last night. At 11 o'clock, after a long day of conferences had ended, a large automobile, filled with high generals headed by Gen. Walter von Brauchitsch, commander-in-chief of the German army, swung through the gates to Hitler's residence and stayed for more than an hour. They left early this morning, but the handful of night owls watching the Wilhelmstrasse were agreed that the German chancellor's mood does not promise any long continuation of the present indecision in Europe's mortal crisis.

As it is seen in Berlin, this is the thread of the complicated maneuvers of the last two days between France and Berlin:

On Friday night the French Ambassador saw Hitler and heard demands identical with those which the British Ambassador took to London on Saturday morning. Instead of holding Cabinet meetings about them, Premier Daladier replied at once with a personal letter in which he appealed to Hitler as another man who had fought as a front-line soldier in the last war and declared his faith that a peaceful solution is possible.

Peace, On Germany's Terms

"If French and German blood is again to flow," Daladier wrote, "as 25 years ago, but in a still longer and more murderous war, then both peoples will fight with confidence in thier own victory. But the surest victors will be destruction and barbarism."

Hitler's answer to Daladier—presumably carried to Paris by airplane today—restated the familiar Berlin thesis that Germany wants peace—but only on German terms. It included the statement that "I see no way to move Poland, which now feels itself invulnerable because of its guaranties, to peaceful solution."

It was Premier Daladier's reference to this as a German refusal to consider peace negotiations which is believed here to have angered Hitler.

Hitler's mention of Alsace and Lorraine in his final letter to Daladier confirmed his earlier promises to respect French ownership of those provinces, but significantly included a phrase that they had been taken "with much blood" from Germany. Hitler further stated that German patience with Polish persecutions of the 1,500,000 German citizens living in Poland has reached its end.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Army officers are pretty peeved over the high cost of their new rifle . . . With its own limited tools and facilities, partly obsolete, the Army was able to manufacture a few rifles at $28 each, and naturally they expected the patriotic manufacturers, with high-speed facilities, would make 'em at $24 or $25.

Harlan Miller

So imagine the Army's surprise and indignation at being told that it would cost more than twice as much to buy them from the private manufacturers—by the thousands, mind you—as it cost the Army to make 'em. The figure quoted now is $80 per rifle, or roughly about the cost of two Ford motors.

NOW IT CAN BE TOLD: The canonization of Paul McNutt struck several grade-A New Dealers like the arrival of a hawk at a dovecote. One eminent FDR aide asked a Cabinet member to protest against the appointment and finally phoned the White House himself, so the story goes. The President with some surprise asked what the objection was.

'—a young, inexperienced governor'

"Well, look at his record with labor!" protested the New Dealer.

What did that have to do with Federal security, inquired FDR.

"Surely the President remembers that the Employment Service and the Unemployment Compensation Office have been switched to FSA?"

Well, what was so awful about McNutt and labor?

"Surely the President knows that he called out the militia on the slightest provocation against strikers, or without real provocation?"

Oh, yes. McNutt explains that. It happened when he was only a young, inexperienced governor, early in his term.

After a little research it developed that McNutt was in his third year as Governor when he mobilized the militia. The researchers pointed out that Frank Murphy had his difficulties with the sit-down strikes in Michigan the first year he was Governor.

* * * *

It's one of those political paradoxes—a Governor who's accused of being too quick on the trigger with the militia sits high in the Roosevelt Administration beside the Governor of a neighboring State who's accused of having been too slow with his militia; and both are Presidential possibilities, more or less.

DIPLOMATIC CHANNELS: Chatting with an American in Paris, Jules Henry, recently of the French Embassy here, revealed that he planned to stop in Washington on his way to Brazil, where he has been appointed ambassador.

"But you're really stopping in Brazil on your way to Washington, aren't you?" quipped the American.

Mr. Henry didn't object very strenuously. He is one of the long line of extremely popular, able French diplomats in Washington and is destined to be the French ambassador here before too long.

The Air Corps is gradually recovering from the strain occasioned when Senator Barkley, the majority leader, asked the Army for a plane to fly him to Kentucky to vote, during the final days of the last session. By some quirk the only planes available were single motor planes, and no one wanted the responsibility of sending such an eminent gent over the mountains in anything less than a multi-motored plane.

High officers tossed the buck back and forth. But the session lasted just too long to permit Barkley to make the flight. So the Army was saved from intrusting this precious cargo of human freight to a single-motored plane, and everyone breathed a sigh of relief. Peace hath its perils no less than war.

Dies Committee To Turn Inquiry To Silver Shirts

Operations of the Silver Shirts, a pro-Fascist organization, will be explored by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, when hearings are resumed today, Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, revealed last night.

Earl Browder, secretary general of the American Communist Party, was slated to testify today, but his appearance has been postponed until next week, because of his desire to attend a meeting of the executive council of the party at Chicago Tuesday, it was said.

Committee investigators will present evidence that the Silver Shirts have been busy spreading propaganda favorable to Germany and Italy, it was learned.

William Dudley Pelley, reputated leader of the Silver Shirts, is being hunted by committee investigators armed with a subpena for his appearance.

McNutt Turns West in Drive For Presidency

'Liberalism' There May Be Pivot for Success in 1940

By Kirke L. Simpson.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Developments of the McNutt-for-President campaign in the wake of the Pittsburgh Young Democrats' convention have caught political attention in Washington.

Reports from Indiana are that Frank M. McHale, McNutt's field marshal and Democratic national committeeman of that State, is busy with spade work in a dozen or more States of the Far West, Northwest and mountain region. Some politicians interpret that to mean McHale has concluded that Western "liberalism" may prove the pivot on which turns not only the Democratic national convention action in 1940; but of the November election itself. Out of that appraisal of the 1940 situation comes his effort to woo Western Democrats to support Indiana's Democratic favorite son.

Roosevelt Looks West

Nor can it be doubted that it is an appraisal with which President Roosevelt and his political followers agree. Mr. Roosevelt's Western trip, planned long ago but now threatened with delay or abandonment due to the crisis abroad, has that aspect. The trip promises, with or without his consent, to be the focus of a surge of third-term demonstrations.

The McHale sounding of sentiment among party leaders and key figures in the West on McNutt succession in 1940 seems an effort to exploit, in the area where it could do the most good, the McNutt liberalism declarations at Pittsburgh.

Further, McNutt headquarters has put out a formidable pamphlet on the "Labor Record of Paul V. McNutt as Governor of Indiana." It asserts that as Governor, he "gave Indiana labor its bill of rights" and pioneered in the sponsorship of "progressive labor legislation" as he also pioneered in the social security field.

Objectives Are Cited

In effect, the strategy of the McNutt organization is mapped to fit the slogan coined before the Young Democrats in Pittsburgh by Senator Pepper, of Florida. It made over the third-term drive into a "third term for the New Deal," whoever should be the 1940 Democratic nominee.

The most recent Democratic organization pilgrim to the Far West was L. W. (Chip) Robert, secretary of the national executive committee. After weeks spent roving in the Far West, he reported that Roosevelt sentiment was so strong west of the Mississippi that if the President did did not run again himself, any Democrat he indorsed for the 1940 nomination could count on strong popular support.

In contrast to that assertion, Franklyn Waltman, publicity director of the Republican National Committee, on his return from a similar Western tour, devoted his weekly "Looking Forward" column to asserting that Roosevelt popularity was on the wane. Waltman conceded that he had "undoubtedly" talked with more Republicans than Democrats on his trip, but added it did not "impeach" his conclusion since "the spirit of these Republicans" reflected sentiment in their home communities.

McHale's effort to make the Far West the first line of his campaign for McNutt delegates to the 1940 convention is further evidence that in his judgment that area is apt to hold the balance of power in the 1940 Democratic convention and in the election. It further emphasizes that virtually all active or passive candidates of both major parties for 1940 nominations are brushing up Western contacts this summer.

NYA Heads to Meet

Special Dispatch to The Post

Plans for a meeting of the national advisory committee of the National Youth Administration, September 6 and 7 in New York City and Hyde Park, in which President Roosevelt and Paul V. McNutt, Federal security administrator, are scheduled to take part, were announced yesterday by the NYA.

Charles W. Taussig, of New York, chairman of the committee, said that Aubrey Williams, NYA administrator and Mayor LaGuardia, of New York, would address the first day's meeting in New York. The President and Mrs. Roosevelt and Administrator McNutt are to take part in the second day's session at the President's home at Hyde Park.

Md. Legislative Council to Meet

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 27 (AP).—Maryland's new legislative council, set up by the last General Assembly to prepare and recommend needed legislation, probably will meet "within the next two or three weeks," in Annapolis, State Senate President Arthur Brice said today.

Under the law, the 14-member council's $20,000 expense fund for the next biennium does not become available until October 1. The first meeting is expected to give the members a running start on problems facing them.

Among these is a proposed recodification of the motor vehicles laws, which has regularly failed of passage in the Assembly because of its complicated nature. Also on the agenda is the problem of trade practices in installment selling.

Federal Resources Control For Conservation Is Urged

Necessity for Proper Utilization of Fuels, Power and Vital Metals Stressed In Report on Needs by U. S. Committee

Creation of a Federal agency to conserve the nation's resources of fuel and power for defense and recovery was suggested last night by the National Resources Committee.

The committee warned that, should regulation of utilities fail to solve the problems connected with them, "the problem may emerge in the form of insistent demands for public ownership and control." It was difficult, the committee said, "to envisage a national coal, petroleum or waterpower policy without . . . a national policy directed toward all."

Headed by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, the committee included the Secretaries of War, Commerce, Labor and Agriculture. It made public its exhaustive report—to Congress—on the nation's vast mineral and power resources.

3 Methods Proposed

After months of technical research, the committee said three major methods of effecting such conservation would be to:

Promote greater efficiency in production of fuel resources, from the standpoint of recovery.

Promote greater economy in the use of fuels.

Place a larger share of the country's energy burden upon lower grade fuels and waterpower.

To attain these broad objectives, the committee made the following specific suggestions:

Formation of a new Federal oil conservation board to administer the Federal interest in the oil and gas industry, and regulate production and commerce in oil and gas, to avoid waste.

Some form of Federal regulation of bituminous coal, since "the problems of that industry are too large for any one State to solve, and its intense interstate competition makes the industry's ills a matter of national concern and Federal responsibility."

Launching of an active public policy of multiple-purpose development of all water resources, in view of the pressing problems of flood control, public supply, stream pollution, irrigation and navigation.

Would Strengthen Nation

Such water development, the committee added, might conserve fuel, strengthen national economy and bolster the defense program "through assuring an ample supply of electric energy in time of war."

To correlate these related programs, and permit continuous planning in the future, the committee asked an advisory planning agency be established for all the energy resources of the United States, the report stated:

"It is difficult to envisage a national coal, petroleum or waterpower policy without also, in time, a national policy directed toward all these energy producers."

Our Mineral Position Better

Information released from the Bureau of Mines indicated that the strategic mineral position of the United States has improved in some ways since the World War, but that some gaps still block the Nation's self-sufficiency.

Dr. John W. Finch, director of the Bureau of Mines, in an address scheduled for today before the American Mining Congress at Salt Lake City, Utah, was to explain that the rapid increase in the use of alloys has made the Nation more dependent than ever on foreign sources of manganese, chromium and nickel. Aluminum manufacturers have obtained much of their ore from South American bauxite deposits since 1923. This country still depends on foreign supplies of tin, he reported.

Dr. Finch is hopeful the availability of reserves in this country which are not of immediate commercial value would be developed when abnormal prices made production possible. Dr. Finch said the United States is no longer dependent on Chile for nitrates, and now can supply all its potash needs. He listed other minerals in which the United States and its possessions are self-sufficient, such as vanadium, pyrites, molybdenum, sulphur and antimony.

Crisis Theme Song Of Diplomats Is: 'Get Out of Town'

Telephone calls to local offices of Europe's worrying powers were answered uniformly by doorkeepers and caretakers. Informed spokesmen had left for the day without saying where they were going.

FHA to Back $2,500 Homes At 5% Down

Monthly Payment on $2,000 House Would Be Less Than $17

By the Associated Press

The Federal Housing Administration yesterday announced a plan for financing construction of small homes which will require the purchaser to make only a 5 per cent down payment on a house costing no more than $2,500.

Stewart McDonald, Federal Housing Administrator, said regulations making the program effective September 1 already had been mailed to banks and other lending institutions. The FHA does not lend money itself, but insures construction loans made by private institutions.

The new plan will be limited to low-cost homes—none financed under it may cost more than $2,500—and will not affect the present FHA program of financing higher-cost homes on basis of a 10 per cent minimum down payment and a 4½ per cent mortgage, plus a one-half of 1 per cent insurance premium.

Lender Pays Premium

Under the new plan, loans will be made at a discount rate of $3.50 per $100 borrowed. Officials said this figured slightly higher on a true interest rate basis than the interest rate on present FHA-insured mortgages. The plan requires, however, that the lending institution pay the insurance premium of one-half of 1 per cent per year of the face value of the loan, instead of passing this charge on to the borrower.

The borrowers under the new plan also will be required to pay off the loan in 15 years, whereas, under the regular FHA program loans may extend for a maximum of 25 years.

An official explained that the shorter time limit was decided because requirements as to neighborhood and zone restrictions would not be so strict as for higher-priced FHA-financed construction.

The requirements under the regular program are aimed at preventing a loss in the value of the home because of changes in the neighborhood which would make it a less desirable residential community. This safeguard, an official said, permitted loans for a longer period than is contemplated under the new program.

$17 a Month on $2,000 House

The FHA said families with incomes ranging from $900 to $1,500 annually should be in a position to take advantage of its new financing plan. Monthly payments on a home valued at $2,000, it said, would be a little less than $17 a month, not including taxes and fire insurance.

"Its greatest use," the announcement added, "will probably be found in the smaller cities and towns and in those places where land values are relatively low."

An official added informally that it was expected the program would be particularly well received in the South and in other sections where building costs are relatively low because the climate permits construction without the insulation and more expensive heating systems necessary where the winters are severe.

Burglar Sneezes And Runs Away

Perhaps it was the cooler weather, or perhaps it was a touch of hay fever. Whatever caused that sneeze in his bedroom at 2631 Twenty-eighth street northwest early yesterday morning, Francis B. Waters doesn't know. But it wasn't his sneeze, and, when he turned on the light, he looked into the eyes of a colored man who had gained entrance by lifting the latch of the kitchen screen door.

The housebreaker fled down a fire escape emty handed. Waters described him as about 35 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing about 160 pounds. He was wearing a khaki shirt and dark trousers.

U.S. to Receive First Pension Claims Oct. 1

912,000 Believed Eligible for Payments Beginning Feb. 1.

By the Associated Press

The Security Administration will begin receiving claims October 1 from 912,000 men, women and children, who, it estimates, will be eligible in 1940 for $144,000,000 in old-age insurance and survivor benefits.

Payments for January, the first benefit month, will be made February 1, said John J. Carson, director of the Old-Age Insurance Bureau.

He estimated that from 30,000 to 35,000 claims would be filed in the first month by retiring workers, wives, widows, dependent children and dependent parents. The number of recipients will increase each month, he said, as more become eligible.

In preparation for the distribution of benefits, the administration is enlarging its field force to provide 400 offices at strategic centers, supplementing them with 200 traveling field assistants.

Compilation of forms and regulations, Corson explained, will complete the machinery for this phase of the administration's gigantic social-insurance undertaking.

He added that the field force has handled 1,517,000 claims for lump sum settlements since April, 1937, and estimated that the volume of business in January would be only about 30 per cent heavier than formerly.

The Administration, he said, hopes to reduce to a minimum the time needed to return checks to claimants. Including the mailing time between Washington and the Pacific Coast, he said, the average time consumed in handling a claim from there now has been whittled down to 20 days.

The Social Security Board estimates that next year claims for payments will be filed by 485,000 workers retiring at 65 or over, 125,000 wives 65 or over, 200,000 widows, 78,000 young widows with children, 194,000 dependent children, and 10,000 dependent parents.

German Expert To Talk on Rails At American U.

Dr. Ludwig M. Homberger, German railroad expert, who has just finished a year of study of American railroad problems, will be visiting lecturer on transportation problems at the American University Graduate School in the coming year, it was announced yesterday by Chancellor Joseph M. M. Gray.

Dr. Homberger, who has lectured many times in the United States and is author of a book on American railroads, is a former executive vice president of the German National Railroad Co.

Dr. Clyde B. Aitchison, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, will lecture on interstate commerce and commercial law, and Dr. Charles S. Morgan, assistant director of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles, will lecture on transportation economics, the announcement added.

Other lecturers at the school will be Dr. Walter M. H. Splawn, on ecorporation finance, and Dr. William H. S. Stevens, adjunct professor of economics.

World-Girdling Japanese Plane Lands in Alaska

Nome, Alaska, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Japanese round-the-world plane Nippon arrived here from Hokkaido Island at 11:02 a. m. (5:02 p. m. E. S. T.).

The seven Japanese aviators and newspapermen aboard received a civic welcome. The Nippon left Tokyo early yesterday on a projected 30-day flight to include most of the world's major cities.

Security Act Changes Boost U. S. Aid for Blind and Aged

Federal Contributions to Pensions for Both Groups Raised to Maximum of $20 Monthly on Matching Basis With States

By the Associated Press

Do the amendments to the social security act make any extensive change in Federal unemployment compensation provisions?

No, although certain changes are made with respect to the wage base on which the Federal tax is levied and in coverage.

What are the changes affecting taxes?

Taxes are now levied on "wages paid" as in old-age and survivors' insurance, instead of on 'wages payable;" and the employer now pays taxes only on the first $3,000 a year paid to an employe instead of on his total pay roll.

Bank Employes Included

Is there any change in the occupations covered by the unemployment insurance plan?

Employes of banks, building-and-loan associations and members of the Federal Home Loan Bank system will now be brought under State unemployment compensation laws if the States wish to.

What is the status of insurance agents?

Insurance agents exclusively on a commission basis are now specifically excluded.

Do the amendments make any changes affecting the administration of unemployment compensation and the other Federal-State programs?

One significant change has been made—that requiring State administrative agencies to set up merit systems for their employes by January 1, 1940. Most States already have begun to put such plans in operation and in all States the administrative agncies have authority to set up such systems without legislative action.

Aid to Aged Increased

Have any important changes been made in provisions for aid to the needy aged, the needy blind, and dependent children?

The amendments increase the amount of Federal money available to match State expenditures for all three public-assistance programs.

How does this operate with respect to old-age assistance?

The maximum for Federal matching has been increased from $15 to $20 a month for each recipient, beginning January 1, 1940.

Then if a State puts up $20, the Federal Government contributes a like amount?

Yes, the recipient would have an allowance of $40 from combined Federal-State funds.

Must the State put up this much?

No. The amount paid by the Federal Government depends entirely on State action. If the State pays a needy old person less than this maximum, the Federal Government contributes half; if it should wish to pay more, the amount in excess of $40 would come from State funds.

Child Program Extended

What about aid to the blind?

The maximum for Federal contributions has also been increased to $20 a month for each recipient under this program.

How are State assistance payments for aid to dependent children to be matched?

The Federal Government will pay one-half—instead of one-third as under the original plan—of the State's assistance payments under this program.

Was the maximum changed for aid to dependent children?

No. It remains the same—$18 a month for the first dependent child and $12 for each additional dependent child in the same home. Of course, the State can pay more out of its own funds if it wishes.

What changes do the amendments make in the three maternal and child-welfare programs, and in those for public health and vocational rehabilitation?

More Federal money is appropriated for grants to the States to enable them to strengthen and extend these programs.

Long-Range Forecasting of Weather Sought

R. H. Weightman, Bureau Veteran, Is Directing Study

Through a maze of 16,000 statistical calculations, scientists at the United States Weather Bureau have been breaking a trail toward a new kind of weather forecasting, the kind that would tell this summer what next autumn's weather will be.

The 16,000 calculations are the record of six years of statistical research, led by R. H. Weightman, a veteran of 38 years in the bureau and now its chief meteorologist.

His figures represent Weightman's belief that accurate, mathematical relationships can be established between the weather in one part of the world one season and the weather in another part the next.

Hopes for Ready Formula

Once these mathematical relationships are fixed accurately, Weightman hopes they will give forecasters a ready formula to tell in advance whether next season's temperatures and pressures in any section of the country will be normal, above normal, or below normal.

The method Weightman is seeking to apply to long-range forecasting in the United States has been used by other investigators, he said. One was Sir Gilbert Walker, director of the meteorological department in India, who reduced atmosphere pressure in South America, rainfall in Zanzibar, and rainfall in Java, to a formula for forecasting monsoon rainfall in India.

Accuracy Is Cited

Weightman said another investigator had found correlation between the atmospheric pressure in Lagos, Nigeria, and at Midway Island in the Pacific one summer, and the temperatures in the American plains States the following spring. The codeficiency of correlation between two sets of weather conditions was .78, Weightman said.

Codeficients of correlation are the mathematical springboards from which the Weather Bureau hopes some day to launch regular long range forecasts. Weightman explained that a "correlation coefficient" of .80 is needed to insure that a forecast shall be accurate four out of five times. So far most of his 70,000 computations have produced coefficients around 50, or below.

To indicate one factor that may have blocked the way, Weightman cited the progress in short-range forecasting. He said that for many years the daily weather forecasts of the bureau had been based entirely on observations taken at ground level, offering a "two-dimensional" kind of information. Within the past few years, airplanes and weather balloons have made "high air" observations, and daily forecasting has moved into three dimensions, he said.

Lack of Records a Handicap

In all his investigation into possible long-range forecasting, Weightman and his staff have been forced to work with nothing but two-dimensional figures. Even the "two-dimensional" information has been disappointing since only a few weather stations in the world have records dating back far enough to give a long-time picture of past weather conditions.

In the recent progress with short-range forecasting, Weightman sees the most hope for establishing a sound basis for long-range forecasts. Now he is bringing together the result of his own investigation and reports of similar work by other scientists for publication late this year.

Later, he plans to push ahead from simple to complex correlation studies, toward a forecast that will give farmers, industrialists and others the advance information about weather they want.

Japanese Cabinet Falls Over Axis

for the army rebellion of February, 1936.

There never has been any suggestion that he had anything to do with that affair.

He was vice minister under Gen. Kadushige Edaki, in the Hamaguchi cabinet, 1929-'31, and is known as the leading figure in his faction, which the element under Gen. Jindaburo Mazaki and Gen. Sadao Araki deprived of influence at the time of the Manchurian incident. The assent of the army to his selection as premier seems to show that the moderates within it have a voice in decisions.

Abe is especially qualified because his inactivity in the last three years has disassociated him from the anti-Comintern pact, the negotiations for an alliance with Germany, and the military-political operations in China.

He does not go into office, however, with complete freedom to reshape national policies. The general principles for disposal of the China warfare remain as they were fixed at the end of last year, with imperial sanction.

The biggest question is Japanese-Soviet relations. General Abe is credited with favoring a moderate policy toward Moscow. He was war vice minister in 1929 when China and the Soviet Union had a minor war in North Manchuria, and must have had a part in determining Japan's neutrality, which at the time was regarded as a sign of friendliness towards the Soviets.

Conditions have changed considerably since 1929, however, and predictions about Japanese policy toward the Soviet Union must await fuller knowledge about what the present political situation means in the army and the foreign office. On the surface, General Abe's moderation may be offset by the new war minister's reputed leaning toward a strong policy regarding the Soviet Union as seen in the military operations along the Manchuko-Outer Mongolia border.

King George Goes To Church to Join In Peace Prayers

London, Aug. 27 (AP).—King George VI bowed his head in prayer for peace today.

Leading his people in response to an appeal by the Archbishop of Canterbury for intercession "that even now the crime and horror of war may be averted," His Majesty slipped quietly into Westminster Abbey for morning service and knelt unobtrusively in the choir stalls. Accompanied by his brothers, the Dukes of Gloucester and Kent, and three secretaries, and occupying a secluded corner seat, the King joined in a fervent "Amen" as prayer was offered "for all those to whom the tremendous responsibility of government has been committed, our King, our prime minister and foreign secretary and all who are working with them for the peace of the world."

The King's intention to attend the morning service had been kept secret and few in the crowded church recognized him.

Russia Speeds Ratification of Pact With Berlin

Moscow, Aug. 27 (AP).—Soviet Russia, now in much stronger position against what she considers her only potential foe—Japan—will speed ratification tomorrow of her nonaggression pact with Germany.

Members of the Grand Council or "Parliament" of 1,143 members streamed into Moscow today from throughout the Soviet's vast territory, some coming by air.

Premier Foreign Commissar Molotoff is expected at the council meeting to explain Russia's new foreign policy, which in effect is one of strict isolation from Europe's disputes.

Unofficial reports that the Soviet might now follow up her agreement with the Reich by improving relations with the latter's axis partner, Italy, were seen in the disclosure today that Italy has an official delegation attending the huge agricultural exhibition in progress here.

Radium Gun May Find Clew To Earth's History in Pacific

D. C. Scientists to Take Ocean Bottom Samples 6 Miles Beneath Surface; To Study Area as Big as U. S.

With the aid of a huge "deep-sea gun," Washington scientists will search for deposits of radium on the bottom of the Pacific Ocean that are expected to throw light on the earth's history.

The expedition, it was announced yesterday, will be sponsored by the National Geographic Society and the University of Virginia. It will sail for the South Pacific on the U. S. Coast Guard cutter Hamilton September 19.

Ocean bottom sediment will be brought up by the gun, which can be fired at a depth as great as six miles. Developed by Dr. Charles S. Piggot, of the Carnegie Institute of Washington, the mechanism is the largest piece of equipment to be carried. Together with sampling apparatus, six miles of steel cable, and a 100-horsepower hoisting winch, it weighs 12½ tons. Dr. Piggot will accompany the expedition.

Although the radium deposits believed to exist on the ocean bottom are not expected to be of commercial value, they are thought to hold energy that has influenced formation of ocean basins, development of the earths crust, that affect geological processes going on today.

The gun, which already has been tried out successfully in the Atlantic Ocean and Caribbean Sea, found radium on the bottom there. Lowered to the bottom by cable, it is fired automatically, the explosion driving a hollow metal tube into the mud. A cross section of the sediment, 10 feet long, is thus brought to the surface.

The expedition will be led by Prof. Wilbur A. Nelson, of the University of Virginia, and will spend a year at sea and at South-Central Pacific Islands, "covering an area half again as large as the United States."

150 CCC Boys Baptized Here In Pool as Spirituals Ring

"Wade in the water . . . wade in the water . . . wade in the water . . . God don't trouble the water."

Perched on the diving towers and lining the sides of the outdoor swimming pool at Francis Junior High School, Twenty-sixth and N streets northwest, 500 spectators yesterday afternoon chanted, hummed and swayed to revival songs, as 150 colored CCC boys were immersed in the "saving waters."

Garber in khaki shirts and breeches, the candidates stepped timidly into the shallow end of the pool, where the rubber-booted and gowned chaplain of the Washington area camps, Capt. William B. Marsh, waited with his aide, the Rev. J. E. Morris.

"That Old Time Religion"

"My dear brother, upon the profession of your faith in Jesus Christ, I baptize you in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost," cried the chaplain. Raising his arm, he and his colleague thrust the convert backward into the water.

"Give me that old-time religion . . . that old-time religion . . . that old-time religion . . . It's good enough for me," burst out the throng, as one convert's head bobbed up from the water, and he wiped his dripping face. Garments clinging to his skin, he sped to the dressing rooms to change, as another lad came forward.

"Shall we gather at the river?" began a young colored man near the knot of candidates. Others picked up the tune, and soon the crowd joined in the chorus. "Yes . . . we shall gather at the river . . . the beautiful river . . . gather with the saints at the river . . ."

Boy Led in Singing

One lad, bare to the waist, who had stood for a half-hour awaiting his turn, was led into the pool singing softly . . . "I'm gonna try on my long white robe . . . down by the riverside . . . I ain't gonna study war no more . . . I ain't gonna study war no more." As he climbed into the CCC trucks for the journey back to camp he was still humming the tune.

The young men, who came from Fredericksburg, Cabin John, Gettysburg, Beltsville, Brandywine and other camps, have been converted through sermons preached by Capt. Marsh. He explained early in the service that while many of the lads would join the Baptist Church after the ceremony, some would affiliate with other denominations. Baptism meant the acceptanace of Christ, he said, giving them freedom to join a church of their choice.

One white man, Archie Spangler, recently converted at the local Gospel Mission, who is assisting Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Evans in C. C. C. evangelistic work, also was immersed.

Social Democrats Laud Peace Steps, British Report

London, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—The British Labor Party said tonight it had received a message from the outlawed German Social Democratic Party, sent from an unnamed place, condemning Nazi Germany's European policy.

The message praised the recent "peace appeal" sent by the British Labor Party to the "German people" and the peace moves of President Roosevelt. The message described Hitler's understanding with Soviet Russia as "appalling treachery" to the German people and urged Germans to join with Britons in destroying the German Nazi Party.

Brig. Gen. Ellerbe Carter, commanding National Guardsmen on duty in adjoining Harlan County since last May, following mine disorders, said at Louisville 50 troops would be sent immediately to the scene of the shooting.

Language Guide For Soldiers Sold On Polish Border

Beuthen, Germany, Aug. 27 (AP).—Book stores in this German-Polish border town are selling pamphlets full of phrases written in Polish, in phonetics and in German called "The Soldier's Language Guide."

The first phrase is "Good day, Mr. Mayor." In a foreword, Lieut. F. Sulzberger, the author, says, "always use the word 'please.'"

Under the caption, "further necessary phrases" are:

"You have nothing to fear."

"If you lie, you will be shot."

For soldiers on the march are such phrases as "houses out of which shots are fired will be burned to the ground."

Britain Takes Over Control of Foreign Shares

Britons Must Obtain Permission to Sell Holdings Abroad

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 27.—Great Britain tonight began mobilizing the vast foreign security investments of her nationals for possible war needs.

It was the fourth financial step of importance taken by the government since the European situation Bank of England's rediscount rate became acute last Wednesday.

The others were doubling of the to 4 per cent, the fixing of minimum prices for gilt-edged securities and the freeing of the pound from government market support to conserve gold.

Tonight's action, under the emergency powers bill enacted last Thursday, required holders of marketable foreign securities to obtain permission of the British treasury before disposing of them.

It applied to securities "of which the principal interest or dividends are payable in the currencies of the United States, Canada, Argentina, Belgium, France, Netherlands, the Dutch East Indies, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland."

The security owners also were directed to make a report to the Bank of England of their holdings within one month.

The financial community interpreted the step as a precautionary step to an emergency in which the government would take over such foreign investments for itself. In the World War the British government acquired the dollar securities of her nationals in exchange for treasury notes. The British government at that time transferred the dollar securities to J. P. Morgan & Co., as banking agent for gradual liquidation as might be required to make foreign purchases of war supplies. Until sold the original British owners of the securities received the income plus a 1 per cent bonus for placing them at the government's disposal.

There has been no indication of whether this precise procedure would be followed again.

Informed sources have suggested that the marketable investments in the United States alone approach $1,000,000,000.

2 May Be Jailed For Harboring Louis Buchalter

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—G-men dug into the underworld today in questioning Louis (Lepke) Buchalter and it was reported at least two persons would be indicted for harboring him while the two-year search was pushed.

District Attorney Dewey's aides still have been unable to talk with Lepke, for the Federal Bureau of Investigation and U. S. Attorney John Cahill have him secluded in a cell on the thirtieth floor of the Federal building.

Dewey is due back from Michigan Monday and it is likely he will personally renew efforts of his office to question the prisoner. His aides would not comment on a report that slaying of William Snyder, truck union official, in 1934 had been traced to Lepke.

26 Indians Find D. C. as Interesting As World's Fair

Homeward bound after several months at the World's Fair, 26 Indian representatives of 19 different Indian tribes paused yesterday in Washington to see the sights. All athletes and students at Indian colleges in Oklahoma and Kansas, they had composed a guard of honor for distinguished visitors to the New York Fair.

According to Capt. James W. Lansing, director of the group, the men were as pleased with points they visited in Washington as with anything they witnessed at the Fair. Today they will visit the Department of the Interior. They are staying at the Lafayette Hotel.

Equally at home in the saddle and on foot, the group has recently been performing exhibition drills in the Court of Peace. Early in September they will resume their studies at Haskell Institute, Lawrence, Kans.; Bacone College, Bacone, Okla., and Schilocco College, in Oklahoma.

Hot Bond Ring Broken, 24 Seized by FBI

Bogus and Stolen Securities Passed In Several States

New York, Aug. 27.—The Federal Bureau of Investigation disclosed today it had arrested 24 persons, including a former prize fighter and several former Wall Streeters, as members of a stolen and counterfeit bond ring whose operations extended as far as New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Kansas and Nebraska.

The bureau said the gang was suspected in the disposal of $200,000 loot from the robbery of the Union Trust Co. in Pittsburgh in March, 1938, a postoffice in Holtwood, Pa., in July, 1938, and other robberies, including one in Omaha; and with attempts to dispose of $300,000 worth of counterfeit Kingdom of Belgium bonds, $4,000 worth of counterfeit Eastern Shore Public Service Co. bonds, and $3,000 worth of stolen Hillside, N. J., school district bonds.

Probe Led to Arrests

Investigation of the Pittsburgh robbery, the FBI said, led to the arrest of:

Solly Seeman, former New York boxer and fight manager; now free on bail in Syracuse (N. Y.) Federal Court.

William, Abraham and Frank Silinsky, now free on bail in Federal Court, Northern District of New York.

John D. Crimmins, of Syracuse, free on bail in Federal court there.

The trail then led, the FBI said, to the arrest of Morris Pollock, former over-the-counter securities dealer, and several other former securities dealers not identified.

From Pollock, the trail led to Henry I. Pitney, former securities salesman, here, and Frank L. Harrigan, former Edgewater, N. J., trucking operator, July 19.

Counterfeit Bonds Found

Pitney, Harrigan, and others, still at large, the Federal agents said, were associates of Robert J. Whitworth, ousted official of the Bergen Trust Company of Jersey City, N. J., who was arrested here July 28.

Last week Federal agents discovered through a New York brokerage house $3,000 worth of the counterfeit Belgian bonds which they said had been sent from Boston.

Federal men in Boston then arrested Carl Eggers, alias Carl Eckert, alias Carl Hardt; Joseph Schmidt, alias Josef Dilly, alias Josef Mayer; and Eileen Cook, on charges of passing $41,000 worth of the Belgian bonds, and the Public Service and Hillside bonds through Boston banks and brokerage houses.

The Hillside bonds were believed to have been stolen last January from the New York brokerage firm of Ira Haupt & Company, the F. B. I. said.

Last night, the bureau announced, agents arrested Joseph (Papa Joe) Firestone, alias Fierstein, Frank, Fengel, Fred Schneider and J. Rosenblum, an ex-convict with a long record wanted in Boston for bank robbery.

Italy Believed Strengthening Ties to Nazi

German Envoy Gives Ciano, Duce Hitler's Report

Special Cable to The Post

Rome, Aug. 27.—While Rome was undergoing a partial blackout, with dim lights on alternate lamp posts and a sharp falling off in the number of private automobiles on the streets, Sir Percy Loraine, British Ambassador to Italy, today saw Count Ciano, Italian foreign minister, for about half an hour. There was no inkling of what they discussed.

Tonight it was announced that German Ambassador von MacKensen had conveyed still another message from Fuehrer Hitler to Premier Mussolini in the presence of Ciano.

This public display of contact between the dictators evidently is intended to give the impression to the public that Hitler is supplying a blow-by-blow account of what is going on. It also serves to emphasize Italy's intention of getting in on the purse on the clear assumption that the Munich champion will retain the belt.

This thesis was rubbed in by the authoritative Fascist writer, Virginio Gayda, who said that long before President Roosevelt's message was sent to Germany and Poland, Mussolini had suggested that those two countries settle their differences by direct negotiation, but that Poland had rejected this proposal.

He added: "Italy, in full harmony with Germany and with a lively understanding of her own rights, has for some time pursued an intense and diplomatic action for justice and peace."

It was reported today that Italian vessels in Turkish ports had been ordered to return to Italian waters. Officials of the ministry of communications made evasive answers to requests for confirmation.

As the crisis wore on some increased nervousness was evident amid the general composure of the Italian people. The seed of hatred against France, sowed liberally by Fascist propaganda in the past year, seemed to be bearing fruit.

"Italy is all set to tackle the French and Italians will do it with pleasure," many Romans said.

The Fascist press generally was most circumspect in the face of the crisis. While not minimizing the seriousness of the situation, newspapers emphasized that there was still time for peace to be saved.

They displayed greater objectivity in reporting events than is usual in normal times in Fascist Italy, and, while responsibility for the crisis was attributed to Britain, France and Poland, there were no really bitter attacks on these countries.

Rome's streets were almost devoid of passenger cars, the heavy emergency tax imposed on gasoline having virtually eliminated pleasure motoring.

Dispatches from Tripoli said that Marshal Balbo, Governor of Libya, had returned there and immediately inspected mobilized troops. In the event of war, many believed the Libyan-Tunisian frontier would be one of the main battlegrounds.

[Diplomats heard, presumably from Italian informants, that Italy, Germany, Britain, France and Soviet Russia might be suggested as leading participants in a conference in Rome with Poland sitting in after preliminary agreements had been reached, the United Press said.—Editor's note.]

accompany the submission.

At the same time, both plans have been submitted to France and the British Dominions for comment. President Roosevelt has been informed of the details of both suggestions through Ambassador Kennedy.

It is hoped when the cabinet reconvenes at noon (8 a. m. E. S. T.) tomorrow the replies of Poland, France and the Dominions, will have been received so that the cabinet can make its final decision.

No Hint of Reply Nature

London, Aug. 27 (AP).—After the long emergency cabinet meeting today, the second in two days, an official statement said another session would be held at noon tomorrow and the reply would then be sent to Berlin.

The statement gave no hint as to the nature of the reply but it was announced that an outline of Hitler's communication and the answer would be published tomorrow.

The decision to make the terms public, apparently without allowing time for a German response, coupled with the announcement the admiralty last midnight had assumed control of British merchant shipping, indicated no concessions would be offered Hitler.

In Parliamentary circles, however, it was reported that the British reply would be of such a nature that a German answer might be expected and that in such an event Parliament likely would be called into session Wednesday.

The admiralty announcement meant that the British merchant fleet would be merged quickly with the navy in event of war. Other preparedness measures were pushed feverishly.

During today's cabinet meeting, a flurry was caused in diplomatic quarters by the arrival of a passenger in a German plane at Croydon Airport, which was cleared to conceal his identity.

Later a man arrived at the German Embassy in a diplomatic corps car, but refused to give his name. He remained about three hours and left by car. While he was at the embassy, three men arrived at Heston Airport, one of whom was seen off in a German plane.

These mysterious incidents led to speculation the British and German governments were exchanging communications preliminary to the formal British reply to Hitler.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, after the cabinet meeting, had an audience of more than an hour with King George.

Upon his return to Downing Street, the Prime Minister conferred with Arthur Greenwood, deputy leader of the Labor opposition.

The crowd which has surrounded the foreign office and 10 Downing street since the tension started had new recruits today—visitors from the provinces craning their necks to see the great men come and go.

Quiet, Good-Natured Crowd.

It was as it has been all week—a quiet good-natured crowd. It commented freely on the appearance, dress and private lives of the ministers and was amused when Lord Halifax tried to get into the foreign office and couldn't because of a stuck door.

Just above the crowd's heads was a placque in memory of Viscount Grey of Fallodon, Britain's foreign minister in 1914, who said sadly, as England moved into war in those feverish days:

"The lights of Europe are going out, one by one. We shall not see them lit again in our time."

In the schools teachers kept watch, polishing plans for tomorrow's trial evacuation. Hundreds of parents, with their young clinging to their hands, showered them with questions.

Hitler Rejects French Plan To Deal Directly With Poles arrangement having been made between Germany and Poland.

"He declared himself ready to do all in his power to make such an effort possible.

Supplementing the usual coded telegram services with Berlin, Ambassador Coulondre talked frequently by telephone to Bonnet.

An urgent report received at the ministry during the afternoon from the French Ambassador to Ankara said Turkey had formally promised to remain faithful to France and Britain in the face of "extraordinary pressure" from Germany.

The pledge, foreign office circles said, was given to the Ambassador this afternoon by the Turkish foreign minister.

The German Ambassador to Turkey, Franz von Papen, was considered to have failed completely in his special mission to swing Turkey away from France and Britain, political informants said.

French diplomatic circles said "so far as we know" the British reply to Hitler has not yet been put in final form. The French expected it to be sent to Hitler tomorrow afternoon.

In the meantime, a high official at the foreign ministry said:

"All I can say of the situation today is that we are not yet at war. The situation is certainly no better and apparently no worse."

Last week the government "invited" civilians whose presence was "not absolutely indispensable" to leave Paris but the response was not great. The new notice, broadcast by radio and issued to the press, was worded more urgently.

It asks "especially women and children" to leave and said "transportation may be restricted soon."

Troops, answering the latest mobilization order, flowed in growing numbers toward the frontiers.

The progressive mobilization already involved men with white cards numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 and some of those with No. 8. Only the No. 7, part of No. 8 and the colored cards remained to be called.

The total of troops under arms was a military secret, but some unofficial estimates were more than 3,000,000.

The Vincennes track outside Paris was taken over by military authorities, forcing cancellation of this afternoon's horse racing. Private mounts also were taken from Bois de Boulogne stables.

Taxicabs and buses became increasingly scarce on the boulevards.

"M. Coulondre was received late in the afternoon of August 26 by Chancellor Hitler, who declared that he could not accept the proposition that M. Daladier had suggested.

"This oral response was confirmed today by a written communication which was delivered to the President of the Council of Ministers by M. Brauer, charge d'affaires of the German Embassy in Paris."

In view of Hitler's refusal and Daladier's unusual decision to make it public, general mobilization at almost any moment was widely considered likely.

A party of 50 members of families of the United States Embassy staff entrained this morning for Dinard, in Brittany. Another group of 24 left last night. About 100 American women and children in all arranged for cover in that remote town.

The United States Embassy and travel bureaus kept open to accommodate tourists seeking passage home.

The most pessimistic outlook for peace prevailed in diplomatic circles following revelation of Hitler's reply, International News Service said. The fact that Hitler has gone so far as to confirm his reply in writing to Daladier was interpreted as the surest indication the Fuehrer will not back down on his demands. Polish circles in Paris were extremely pessimistic. It was considered too late for Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador, to return to Berlin, and Daladier's action was viewed as placing the whole responsibility for war upon Hitler, and leaving him only the loophole of capitulation to the democracies if he desires to avoid war.—Editor's note.]

As an indication of its temper, the French government, with its preliminary knowledge of Hitler's note, issued an urgent warning to the civilian population to evacuate Paris.

The warning added significantly that all who could leave should go while there still was means of transportation.

General mobilization would virtually preempt all facilities.

During the day, before the German refusal was made official, Daladier conferred with General Maurice Gamelin, commander-in-chief of all French armed forces, and Admiral Jean Darlan, France's supreme naval commander.

Such a conference has preceded all previous partial mobilization.

As though he considered he had done all he could do, Daladier left the war ministry and went home as soon as the official announcement had been issued.

While the French government issued a new and urgently phrased notice to civilians to evacuate Paris in an apparent belief that a final decision on peace or war was near, Daladier seemed to have taken over active command of the diplomatic activity.

In rapid succession during the afternoon, he not only kept in constant touch with Bonnet but conferred personally with Polish Ambassador Lukasiewicz, Rumanian Ambassador Patarescu, and Gen. Maxime Weygand, retired commander-in-chief of the French army.

Daladier also talked with former Premier Pierre Etienne Flandin, leader of the Democratic Alliance party, on plans to form a national union cabinet in event of war.

In the meantime, Bonnet also conferred with Lukasiewicz as well as the Belgian and Yugoslav ambassadors.

Reports poured into the foreign ministry from French envoys all over Europe.

Poland Looks To Mediation To Avert War

Defense Strengthened, Provocative Border Fights Laid to Nazis

By the Associated Press

Warsaw (Monday), Aug. 28.—Authoritative Polish circles early today believed mediation by the United States or some other equally disinterested third power was the remaining chance to avoid European war.

That conviction was crystallized as Warsaw heard from Paris that Fuehrer Hitler had refused direct negotiation with Poland for a peaceful solution of Danzig's status.

The foreign office declined any comment on grounds that no official information on the final result of the London-Paris-Berlin diplomatic exchanges had been received.

Defense Plans Strengthened

Announcement that Hitler had openly demanded the Polish Corridor, for the first time, as well as Danzig, reached Warsaw too late for any official comment.

As insurance against the still dangerously threatening menace of war, Poland continued to put finishing touches to its comprehensive defense plans, including further strengthening of frontier points facing Germany and strategic military bases.

No official figures have been made public, but it is estimated 1,000,000 men are now under arms and in position for action, with more reserves daily becoming available.

Direct negotiation, conciliation or arbitration were urged by President Roosevelt as peaceful methods of settling the Danzig dispute in messages to Hitler and President Mosciki.

Polish foreign policy has consistently opposed arbitration, considering it merely a diplomatic gamble in which Poland has everything to lose and little to gain.

Held Only Alternative

Hitler's reported refusal to negotiate directly, Polish officials suggested, seemingly leaves only mediation as an alternative to war.

Most officials preferred to withhold all comment until after British Ambassador Sir Neville Henderson gives Hitler Britain's last word on the question.

There was unanimous agreement, however, that as much as Poland would like to remain at peace, it would have to be an honorable and just peace fully recognizing Poland's equality and national integrity.

The official Polish news agency reported successive German moves to close communication avenues between Germany and Poland and charged that German-instigated clashes along the border continued.

Poland faced her "zero hour" fully prepared for peace or war.

The pro-government newspaper Express Poranny, reflecting popular opinion, declared:

"It depends on Germany whether tomorrow's sun will rise on blood or not."

To every Pole it is now "the 5 minut przed dwenasta" (5 minutes to 12 o'clock) on the fateful clock that will set the time for peace or war in Europe.

A new "incident" was reported by the official Polish news agency which announced the Polish consulate at Marienwerder, East Prussia, had been surrounded by German police, telephone communications cut, and no one allowed to enter or leave.

Scheduled passenger planes to Berlin did not leave Warsaw today and there was no plane service from Berlin to Warsaw. Instead, the commercial air service to Copenhagen was doubled.

It was announced that no communication has been possible today with a number of Polish consulates in Germany.

High School Closed

The Polish telegraph agency said all teachers of the only Polish high school in East Prussia, at Marienwerder, were placed on trucks today by the German Gestapo (secret police) and taken out of the city to an unknown destination.

Polish volunteers, including many women, increased their activities—digging trenches and constructing shelters for protection against air raids.

Gradual, voluntary removal of children and women from Warsaw was under way, and it was estimated beteen 200,000 and 300,000 persons of the city's 1,300,000 population had moved.

Railroad crossings and stations were under armed guard. Troop and supply trains could be seen as military preparations went forward. Horses were being requisitioned. Peasant carts were used to augment regular military transportation facilities.

There has been a considerable exodus of American, British, French and other nationalities, especially women and children, and the total remaining is unknown.

Officials Sleep in Offices

Nazis Demand Corridor; Doubt Peaceful Solution

While statesmen of Europe yesterday debated peace and war, anxiety grew among Berlin citizens as food and clothing ration cards were distributed and Fuehrer Hitler called a special session of the Reichstag. Picture shows crowd collected in Wilhelmstrasse awaiting word of developments letter to Daladier concerned the present problem of Danzig and the Corridor. Close to the end of his letter, Hitler wrote to Daladier: "I have made one clear demand: Danzig and the Corridor must return to Germany."

Even the average German realizes that Hitler's decision is overdue, according to his usual time table in crises and that it is being held up for word from London.

The German official news agency predicted last night that Sir Neville Henderson, the British ambassador, will return to Berlin today. He is expected to bring "the English answer to the establishment of the German position."

Der Fuehrer's letter to Daladier issued after a day of continued mobilization of the German army, was an historical summary of recent French-German relations and of the present German-Polish crisis.

"In the event of conflict, Poland will bear the greatest burden, regardless of who wins," he added. "Poland will be lost any way you calculate."

The chancellor told the French premier that if, over the present crisis, "our two countries should be destined to meet again on the field of battle, I shall be leading my people in a fight to rectify a wrong, whereas others will be fighting to preserve that wrong."

Earlier, while Germany's general mobilization proceeded and ration cards were distributed to the people, Hitler was disclosed to have called together several hundred of the 800 Reichstag members in the big new chancellery, where he spoke to them on "the seriousness of the hour."

Hitler said he shared "misgivings" expressed by Daladier in his letter to the Fuehrer over another war, and declared that he had hoped to prevent such an eventuality by attempting to "clear away" all possible inflammable material between the two countries which might "disturb the French people."

The entire letter was a plea for France to stay out of Germany's quarrel with Poland.

"In a declaration which the French Premier Daladier gave to the press on Sunday," the propaganda ministry official said, "he referred to an exchange of letters he had with the Fuehrer. In this declaration, M. Daladier made remarks concerning the contents of the letters and drew conclusions without giving the letters themselves. In order that the public may be fully informed, the Fuehrer's letter is hereby released."

The text of Premier Daladier's letter to the Fuehrer was released to the German press simultaneously.

Foreign correspondents were called to the propaganda ministry on a half hour's notice at 11:45 p. m., indicating that Hitler made his decision to answer Premier Daladier late in the evening.

It was the first midnight press conference in the history of the Nazi regime.

What the Feuhrer told his Reichstag members was not disclosed, but DNB, official news agency, said it brought a "stormy ovation." It was believed he had explained his reasons for changing his plans toward Poland early Saturday, when it was expected the troops would begin to move.

Propaganda ministry officials explained that the meeting did not qualify as an official sitting of the Reichstag. The members, numbering "a few hundred" of the 900-odd deputies, had luncheon with Hitler, the propaganda ministry spokesmen said. They minimized importance of the session.

Many deputies had been in Berlin since Friday, to be on hand if the Reichstag were suddenly convoked.

Throughout this warm and sunshiny Sunday, meantime, general mobilization proceeded in Germany in preparation for the eventuality of a possible war over German-Polish dispute.

Yet persons who may be credited with being in the know insisted that a World War had been avoided.

In the general picture of Germany as seen on the surface, everything pointed to preparation for war.

After yesterday noon, no German trains crossed the borders of other countries. Belgium- and Paris-bound through trains, for instance, went only as far as Cologne.

Private automobiles were requisitioned and driven eastward in long columns.

Food and clothing ration cards were distributed and restaurant menus were ordered curtailed.

Antiair-raid measures were made compulsory in Upper Silesia, now designated an "area of military operations."

The persistent optimism in certain quarters was based, however, on the fact that Hitler did not strike against Poland early Saturday, as it had generally been believed he would.

This, the optimistic ones said, indicated that the pathway of negotiation had been opened up.

Difficult though negotiations might be, and threatening though the situation might continue to be, these persons declared war was now much farther off than it was on the portentous dawn of Saturday.

It appeared that Japanese doubts as to the meaning and implications of the German pact with Russia may have been shared by others of Germany's friends.

Information received that critical night of Friday to Saturday concerning British and French absolute determination to fight if Poland were attacked and the measures taken by those democracies were said to have played an important part in the calling off of "zero hour."

For weeks German papers had been writing that "Danzig is not worth a World War."

Official commentators had kept insisting Hitler would find a way out of the situation without recourse to bloodshed.

Then, when war really seemed imminent, it appeared that Hitler invoked diplomacy rather than force, and sent British Ambassador Sir Neville Henderson to London with a "peace proposal."

In the principal foreign embassies of Berlin the staffs were at work just as though it were a week-day.

Ambassadors and ministers conferred frequently with each other, trying to glean information.

All, together with the members of the German government, were agreed that any moves depended upon the return of Sir Neville Henderson Monday.

Through trains to the Scandinavian countries and to the Netherlands ceased to operate this afternoon. Air passenger service was canceled.

Restaurants, amusement parks and beer gardens, otherwise jammed on Sundays, were empty.

Tension in general among Germans seemed to be greater.

The official news agency, D. N. B., reported frequent clashes on the Polish-Slovak border, especially in the Cadca region.

British Sparring for Time Is Belief in London

By Ralph W. Barnes.
Special Cable to The Post

London, Aug. 28.—Although it seems certain that Britain is resolute in her determination to stand by Poland, even if it means probably a greater sacrifice than the empire made in 1914-18, the question arises why the British government should require three prolonged meetings, extending over three days, to prepare its statement to Hitler.

The semiofficial explanation is that the government does not intend to be rushed into decisions that may be irrevocable.

It is quite clear in addition that Prime Minister Chamberlain and his aides are sparring for time. The view is that it can do no harm to draw out for a day or so the interlude which began with Hitler's interview Friday with Sir Nevile Henderson. Apart from other motives in spreading out their sessions over 72 hours they are quite frankly playing for time.

There is just a chance, it is suggested, that by tomorrow something, not apparent now, might turn up. When pressed as to what that something might be, British officials are vague, but it is clear they think it well to provide time in which it will be possible for Hitler to think before he leaps.

Reports from Berlin suggest that the British government might be wrong in its supposition that a delay in its response might do some good and could not do any harm.

Nazis Fear Axis Rift

The Wilhelmstrasse is reported to be manifesting nervousness in the belief that London is utilizing this breathing spell in an effort to shatter the axis by drawing Fascist Italy into a neutral position. In this connection, it is pointed out that Sir Percy Lorain, the British Ambassador to Italy, saw Italian Foreign Minister Ciano at Rome this afternoon.

London, it is suggested in Berlin, is attempting to bring pressure to bear on Tokyo and the capitals of other states which hitherto have been more or less sympathetic to the German cause.

In Whitehall it is asserted that it would be incorrect to characterize the main contents of the Fuehrer's message as proposals for a settlement, and better to speak of a restatement of his demands on Poland. Moreover, it is said that nearly one hour and ten minutes of the hour-and-fifty-minute interview Friday between the Fuehrer and the British envoy was occupied by the Fuehrer in delivering something resembling a sermon.

It is not to be ruled out that the British government is employing the time at its disposal in urging Premier Mussolini and other statesmen, who might influence the Fuehrer, to whisper in his ear that, in the present stage of the situation, caution is advisable.

Hitler Wants Free Hand

In his message—or summons—Hitler is known to have gone out of his way to indicate a desire for true friendship with Britain and to suggest that Germany and Britain should work together for a better world.

But the sermon delivered Friday at the Reichschancellery contained one other important point. The Fuehrer pointed out that the Polish question was urgent and that its settlement could not be delayed until more general international negotiations to which he referred. He seemed to have insisted that this issue was one to be settled by him, without interference by Britain or France.

In his statement of demands on Poland, he made it quite clear that he will insist on realignment of frontiers which would return to the Reich virtually all of that territory which he lost to Poland through the Treaty of Versailles.

Though Hitler said the issue was urgent, he did not apparently fix a time limit and thus, in effect, present an ultimatum as he did when he and Chamberlain conferred at Godesberg September 23, 1938, a crucial day in the crisis over the Sudeten territory of Czecho-Slovakia. Yet the view is general here that from now on events in the present crisis will move more rapidly.

Possible Military Strategy

One of the prevailing theories here about the strategic situation if it comes to a fight, involves the supposition that at the outset the Germans will concentrate on a steamroller push into Poland and remain almost purely on the defensive in the west. Thus, it is suggested, Hitler may refrain from any serious bombing of France and Britain trusting apparently that the British and French will not desire to risk killing German civilians from the air except in retaliation to German bombings.

Still, according to this theory, after obtaining his objectives in Poland, Hitler would announce that Germany's pre-Versailles frontiers were restored and thus that there was no further reason for hostilities. He would propose an armistice and the negotiation of a peace treaty which, in his words, would provide security in Europe for all time.

Four Advantages of Individual Line Telephone Service

In one sense individual line telephone service is no better than party line service. It is our aim to give courteous, fast and dependable service on both alike.

But individual line service has advantages which may be important to you. We present them for your consideration.

1. An individual line telephone is never busy unless you are calling or called.
2. It insures privacy during conversations.
3. There are no other parties on the line to break in on your call.
4. It reduces the number of times friends and others fail to reach you because the line is in use.

A word or a telephone call to our office will arrange an individual line for you.

Il Duce Tells Canada He'll Try for Peace

Mackenzie King Gets His Promise Not to Spare Any Efforts

Ottawa, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press). Premier Mussolini cabled Prime Minister Mackenzie King today that he would "leave untried no effort to safeguard the peace of the world—a lasting peace that is a just peace."

The Italian premier sent this word in reply to a message which the Canadian prime minister addressed to Il Duce Friday.

The Mackenzie King message, made public yesterday, urged Mussolini to use his influence to prevent war. Similar messages were sent to Hitler and President Moscicki.

Soldiers on Guard

In his message, Mackenzie King said that Canada was "prepared to join what authority and power she may possess to that of the other nations of the British commonwealth in seeking a just and equitable settlement of the great problems with which nations are faced."

Defense Ministers Ian MacKenzie disclosed today that approximately 10,000 of Canada's civilian soldiers, members of the nonpermanent, volunteer, militia, were under arms today manning the coast defenses on the Atlantic and Pacific and guarding vulnerable utilities and public properties.

The orders were issued Friday. Eleven military districts were involved, the most men being called from the Atlantic and Pacific coasts to the St. Lawrence Valley.

Defense works on both coasts have been manned, and guards placed at vulnerable points along the inland waterway and canal system, at railway bridges, wireless stations, Army and commercial flying fields, arsenals, armories, hydropower stations and at factories making munitions and other vital products.

Ministers Stand Ready

Meanwhile the Prime Minister and his cabinet stood by ready to act immediately if developments in Europe warranted. Ministers were on call night and day prepared to meet on a moment's notice.

Last week the Prime Minister said the government had moved swiftly to be in readiness for any emergency and he indicated the war measures act of 1914, which has remained on the statutes, would be invoked if necessary pending assembly of Parliament, which would be called immediately if it became apparent peace efforts would fail.

Indian Princes Loyal

London, Aug. 27 (INS)—Lord Linlithgow, British viceroy to India, today received a number of Indian princes and accepted their pledges of support of their states for the British crown in the event of war.

Censorship in Trinidad

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—An "emergency powers" order in council was proclaimed today, giving Gov. Sir Hubert Young wide powers to draw up defense regulations. He immediately ordered censorship.

Guiana Weighs Martial Law

Georgetown, British Guiana, Aug. 27 (Canadian Press).—The colonial legislature will meet tomorrow to enable the government to call out the militia in the event of an emergency. Censorship imposed yesterday was lifted today.

Bank Holiday in Jerusalem

Jerusalem, Aug. 27 ½.—A three-day banking holiday was ordered today by the government following several runs on smaller Tel Aviv banks. Other emergency measures included initiation of food control, issuance of gas masks and concentration of troops and heavy artillery to protect Haifa harbor, refineries and oil pipelines.

Jamaica Prepares

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 27 (AP).—Because of European developments Jamaica was declared today to be under a state of emergency. The Governor was given wide powers of control. A press censorship was imposed.

Canadian Planes Cross U. S.

Millinocket, Me., Aug. 27 (AP).—Fifteen Canadian fighting planes flew today across the United States in emergency flights to Dominion Atlantic ports. The United States granted special permission, air officers said.

Italo-French Traffic Ends

Turin (Monday), Aug. 28 (AP).—Traffic across the French-Italian frontier has ceased almost entirely.

Authorities denied, however, that the frontier had been "diplomatically closed." Some trains still are running. Authorities said Italy was not preventing foreigners from leaving the country. Italians liable for military service may not cross the frontier without special authorization.

Daladier Weary

Paris, Aug. 27 (AP).—It was in a peaceful setting of a cloistered courtyard, with the moon peering over ivy-clad walls, that Premier Daladier announced tonight Hitler's decision to refuse direct negotiations with Poland.

The premier, appearing tired after a weary day of conferences with military chieftains, French diplomats and foreign envoys at his office, came to the front of the war ministry to give his news to the handful of waiting newspapermen.

Daladier read his statement in a grave, measured tone. He presented it as "information received at the premier's office."

Japanese, Irked By Treaty, Slap Nazis in China

Germans Leaving Tientsin as Feeling Over Pact Rises

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, Aug. 27.—Germans started leaving Tientsin today as the result of numerous incidents in which Japanese gendarmes have slapped German citizens, since conclusion of the German-Soviet nonaggression pact.

Repercussions of the Nazi-Communist pact were reported from numerous Chinese cities. Swastika emblems, which got a friendly Japanese salute until last week, virtually disappeared from autos in Shanghai and Peiping.

Japanese in Peiping were reported to have received instructions to "cease provoking the feelings of whites" and not to stage any further anti-British demonstrations.

Final Turn Awaited

Informed foreigners said, however, that it was too early to predict what way the Japanese would turn next as a result of the pact. Two possibilities were seen:

A relaxation of anti-foreign movements, or a sudden blow against all foreign interests in China designed to prove the Japanese army's independence of events abroad.

One source of new Japanese-foreign tension developed with the demand of the Japanese army newspaper, Tairiku Shimpo, for surrender of Chinese soldiers interned in the International Settlement.

British authorities made preparations for the quick transfer of the Seaforth Highlanders from Shanghai to Hongkong in event of a European war. The cruiser Birmingham was made ready at Tsingtao for a speedy run to Shanghai, where a destroyer was standing by to serve as a transport.

Reports from Tientsin said the danger of disease was adding to the misery of the flood-stricken region where drowning and starvation already were taking their toll.

A bridge washout isolated coastal resorts where foreigners spend the summer and forced a trainload of Americans to turn back to Peiping.

Among the Americans isolated were Mrs. Nelson T. Johnson, wife of the United States ambassador to China, and her two children.

A special train carrying a number of United States Marine officers, their wives and families, was compelled to return to Peiping after starting for Chingwangtao to board the transport Chaumont.

Tokyo (Monday), Aug. 28 (AP).—A dispatch to Asahi, Tokyo newspaper, from Manchukuo said Japanese troops launched counterattacks Sunday in the "third battle of Nomanhan" against 5,000 Mongols along the Khalka River on the Mongolian frontier.

The dispatch said waves of Mongols, with tanks, crossed the river with the apparent intention of attacking the Japanese south flank, but met antitank fire and aerial bombing in which 130 tanks were destroyed.

President Roosevelt went over these yesterday with A. A. Berle, Assistant Secretary of State.

With the other steps which will be taken to preserve this country's neutrality and ease the shock of war to its economic life, Washington now has settled into watchful waiting.

[International News Service, however, carried a report that President Roosevelt was sounding out heads of the 20 other American republics on their willingness to join him in an "eleventh hour" appeal to Hitler. The press service said this report was current in diplomatic quarters. It was hoped a plea supported by the weight of the Western Hemisphere might induce Hitler to enter direct negotiations with Poland on the basis of the President's original proposal to the Fuehrer.

[Yesterday, it was observed, Secretary of State Hull conferred at length with Brazilian Ambassador Martins and Argentine Ambassador Espil, but the subject of their conversations was not revealed.—Editor's note.]

Secretary of State Hull went to his office in the forenoon to go over dispatches from abroad. Officials professed to have no information from Europe beyond what was contained in press dispatches.

At the White House it was said President Roosevelt would not leave for his Hyde Park, N. Y., home tonight, but would remain in Washington to keep in close touch with the situation. It was made clear the President did not plan to send any appeals to Europe's dictators last night.

Meanwhile, observers pointed out that an outbreak of war in Europe at the present time would find German-American relations far less cordial than in 1914 when the World War began.

Both countries are without their respective ambassadors. Already nine months have passed since President Roosevelt called Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson home for report and consultation following a severe anti-Semitic outbreak. He has not been returned to his Berlin post and there is no evident intention of sending him back. German Ambassador Hans Dieckhoff has been absent from Washington for the same length of time.

In the last year and a half the United States and Germany have found it almost impossible to settle problems.

A series of notes passed between them on the subject of Austria's debts to the United States Government (around $24,000,000, plus about $20,000,000 in debts to private American investors), but no settlement has been reached. Germany alleges she cannot pay the obligations of the country she took over unless the United States takes into account the unfavorable trade balance.

Secretary Hull would not do this.

Another series of exchanges has taken place on the subject of mistreatment of American Jews in Germany.

German exports to this country not only pay higher duties than the products of other countries because she is on the American economic blacklist, but they also pay punitive customs because countervailing duties of 25 per cent were levied on the grounds that Germany subsidizes exports.

Two points of difficulty between the two governments have been eased slightly in recent months. An agreement was concluded whereby American citizens who receive inheritances from Germans will have less trouble getting their heritage out of Germany. And Hitler agreed to a more orderly exodus of Jewish refugees.

German activities here have been investigated by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. German spies were convicted in a spectacular trial in New York some months ago. The United States, after granting an export license for helium for the new German dirigible, refused to sell the gas to Germany. This Government refused to recognize Germany's acquisition of Szecho-Slovakia. The State Department backed Czech Minister Hurban in his defiance of the German Embassy's demand that he turn over the legation to the embassy.

Becoming Intolerable

It is not surprising that patience is running out with regard to the strike which is holding up nearly all building operations in Washington. If only the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. were affected, a prompt settlement would not be so urgent. But it is estimated that 5,000 men are now idle, through no fault of their own, because sand and gravel are not available in Washington for the mixing of concrete.

There will be general agreement with Representative Pittenger that a strike which causes suspension of nationally important building cannot long be tolerated. Completion of the Census Building, for example, is essential to permit the work of census-taking to go forward early next year. Yet it will be virtually impossible to finish this structure according to schedule if the strike continues. Moreover, the stoppage of work for want of sand and gravel is resulting in heavy financial losses to the Government.

The situation properly gives rise to a demand for review of the company's dredging permit. Mr. Pittenger asks whether the War Department could not revoke that permit and itself furnish sand and gravel to contractors engaged in constructing public buildings and streets. If the company, which supplies a very large part of the sand and gravel used in construction work here, is unable to meet the demands of the public-works program, that proposal will obviously be in order.

The step suggested by Mr. Pittenger would be as serious a blow to the striking employes as to the company. For that reason, particularly, it is to be hoped that the strike can be settled amicably without resort to drastic measures. But if such a solution is to be achieved, a more reasonable attitude will have to be evinced.

At the moment a share of responsibility for continuation of the walkout seems to rest upon the union, which last week rejected the peace proposal of the Labor Department's Conciliation Service. A spokesman for the strikers said they will not go back to work until a contract with definite hourly wage provisions has been signed. Considering the far-reaching consequences of the strike and the illness of Lewis E. Smoot, president of the company, it may be advisable to modify that position. Consideration for the welfare of their fellow workers should prompt the strikers to return to their jobs as soon as really reliable arrangements for negotiation of the differences with their employer can be made.

Howard T. Colvin, conciliator for the Department of Labor, is continuing his able efforts to bring about an amicable settlement. He has called another joint conference of the negotiators for today. Both sides must realize that failure of this meeting to effect a resumption of work would be a proper signal for consideration of extraordinary measures to free the building program from the intolerable handicap which this strike has placed upon it.

Halting Buchalter

Louis Buchalter is affectionately known to his friends and less affectionately to the public as "Lepke." In addition he possesses almost a dozen aliases. The authorities had been looking for him for two years when he finally decided to give himself up to the Federal Government last week and face the amazing array of charges against him, including extortion, conspiracy, violation of the narcotics laws, racketeering in the fur industry and violation of the antitrust law.

In all there was $50,000 posted for "Lepke," and although he ranks only fourth in the official list of "public enemies," he has been called by Mr. Dewey "the most dangerous industrial racketeer in America."

It was not unprecedented, nor unnatural for Public Enemy No. 4 to hide out in New York while what was described as the "third greatest manhunt in the Nation's history" was conducted in his honor. It would have been easier for the G-men to have traced him in the wide-open spaces, where strangers are rare and noticeable, especially public enemies. Just why Louis (Lepke) Buchalter should have chosen to give himself up to the eager Mr. Hoover rather than the equally eager Mr. Dewey has not yet been made clear.

Anyway Mr. Dewey says he has enough on Mr. Hoover's prisoner to put Mr. "Lepke" Buchalter and his assorted aliases in jail for 500 years. The United States attorney's office has arraigned him on 10 indictments carrying penalties of 164 years.

Whatever happens, it appears that Mr. Buchalter will be out of circulation for some time anyway, and all public enemies under No. 4 can look forward to promotion.

German Eyes Opened

Not the least important development of the last two days is the sudden and painful awakening of the German people to the terrible realities of the situation that confronts them and the world. It is not proving a pleasant experience. Nor is it without elements of danger to the regime which has been leading them along the road of illusion.

It is the unanimous opinion of observers in Germany that the people of that country hate and fear war. They are no different in this particular from the people of Poland, Great Britain, France, Italy and all other nations. But until late last week the inhabitants of the Third Reich appear to have been fully convinced that the present crisis would not lead to war. Hitler, it was confidently predicted in Germany, would achieve another of his bloodless triumphs.

That view was sedulously propagated in the German press and no doubt reflected the belief of the Nazi regime itself. Ignoring the imponderables and considering only Hitler's experience in the use of pressure tactics, there was, indeed, much to be said for this attitude.

Great Britain and France had permitted Germany to remilitarize the Rhineland, annex Austria, destroy the independence of Czecho-Slovakia and take Memel. Why should they, then, it was asked in Germany, make any fuss over Danzig and the Polish Corridor? The Nazi answer was that they would not, or that if they did, their opposition to Germany's latest program of expansion would not go to the extreme of waging war.

With the change in British policy after Hitler's entry into Prague, some change in Nazi calculations had to be made. A new balance of power was in process of creation in Europe. Before Hitler could safely move, therefore, it was first necessary to upset this balance and in so doing pave the way for another Munich.

But something went wrong with Hitler's time table. The Russian pact did upset the balance of power in Europe. But, contrary to calculations, it did not lead to the collapse of Polish resistance or any diminution of Anglo-French readiness to go to Poland's aid should Germany lay violent hands on that nation. On the contrary, the signature of the German-Russian pact was followed by the conclusion of a permanent Anglo-Polish alliance and an intensification of defense measures taken by Poland, Great Britain and France.

The German people now realize that if war comes it will not be a war by Germany against Poland alone, but a war by Germany against Poland, Great Britain and France, with Italy's attitude uncertain, Hungary and Yugoslavia anxious to preserve their neutrality and Japan and Spain embittered by Germany's repudiation of the anti-Comintern pact.

No wonder, then, that the mood of optimism which prevailed in the Third Reich early last week and which reached its peak when the German-Russian pact was announced has given way to a feeling of somber dread. Now to an even greater degree than during last September the German people find themselves on the edge of the abyss. This does not mean that they will not follow the Fuehrer should he decide on war. Nor does it mean that Hitler will necessarily retreat while there is still time. But it does mean that, with his time table awry and his calculations of what would happen when he played his Russian card upset, Hitler has been forced to hold his hand, if only for a brief time, so as to permit a re-education of German public opinion.

In contrast to the British and French people, whose eyes have been open all the time to what has been happening, the Germans find that they have been living in a fool's paradise at the mercy of a regime which has gambled once too often on a victory in a test of nerves.

More Aid, Less Income

In spite of the enormous benefits voted by Congress this year for distribution among farmers, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics forecasts another decline in farm income for 1939. It estimates gross farm income, including Government payments and the value of commodities consumed on the farm, at $9,100,000,000. This is only a slight decline from the figure for 1938. But it represents a decline of more than $1,300,000,000 from the gross farm income of 1937.

The interesting fact is that total returns obtained by farmers have been declining as AAA benefits have increased. Two years ago, when farm income reached its highest peak since 1929, Federal payments amounted to only $367,000,000. The amount was substantially increased in 1938, but the total amount of cash reaching farmers' pockets took a sharp tumble. This year it is estimated that the AAA will distribute largesse among co-operating farmers to the extent of $675,000,000. Nevertheless, agriculture will fare worse than it has done since 1935.

Nor can this relatively poor showing be attributed to a failure of crops. Yesterday brought forecasts of better than average crops this year. Two factors are cited by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics to explain the estimated 7 per cent drop in the 1939 crop income: First, the smaller volume of farm products to be sold; second, lower prices.

"The greatest decline is expected," say the experts, "in income from cotton, due to the marked reduction in sales." The fiasco of the AAA's cotton program is an old story. Secretary Wallace and the Southern delegation in Congress love the cotton farmer so well that they have almost deprived him of a market. In their eagerness to uphold prices, they have brought cotton exports to the lowest point in 60 years. And even now, when the cause of this disaster for agriculture is apparent to everyone, the only remedy advanced is an export subsidy which creates a new set of problems without correcting the original mistake.

It would be inaccurate to say that farm income as a whole is falling because the Government is making ever larger gifts to farmers. No doubt, the prospect of smaller returns from cash crops was partly responsible for the decision of Congress to increase the AAA payments. But it can certainly be said that this vast outpouring of Government funds, along with crop control by the AAA, is not solving the farm problem. The shrinkage of farm income, in spite of extravagant Federal subsidies, is rather convincing evidence that some drastic adjustments in our farm policy are in order.

The Yugoslavs Unite

For one nation, at least, the ominous war clouds over Europe appear to have a silver lining.

Since its creation at the end of the World War, Yugoslavia has been a house divided. Throughout these 20 years Serbs, Croats and Slovenes have been at loggerheads. The Serbs who had achieved their independence decades before the Croats and Slovenes succeeded in overthrowing the alien yoke, insisted that Yugoslavia be organized as a highly centralized state with themselves the ruling element. The Croats and Slovenes fought such centralization of power and demanded a large measure of autonomy.

How difficult of compromise these divergent points of view proved to be is borne out in the record of the past ten years. By 1929, the rivalry between Serbs and Croats had reached so dangerous a point that the late King Alexander found it advisable to establish a royal dictatorship in order to enforce that unity which had proved impossible of attainment through the voluntary action of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes.

As long as Alexander lived the system which he had established operated with some degree of success. After the monarch was assassinated at Marseilles five years ago the old quarrels soon came out into the open. And despite every effort of the regency under Prince Paul, the hoped-for Serb-Croat reconciliation did not occur. Indeed, the differences between the component parts of the Yugoslav people recently tended to increase in very dangerous degree.

Last week, however, in the face of a desperate international situation, the Yugoslavs agreed to close their ranks. The new Serb-Croat accord will tend to transform Yugoslavia into a federal state, with a large measure of cultural and economic autonomy for Croatia. A similar arrangement is now in prospect for Slovenia. At the same time Premier Cvetkovitch has reorganized his cabinet to include six Croats, with Dr. Matchek, the Croatian leader, as vice premier. Democratic institutions, including freedom of speech, press and assembly are to be restored.

This development is of the utmost importance to Yugoslavia. That country can now face the critical days ahead with new-found strength and unity. Divided, it would have been an easy prey of the axis powers which are in a position to bear down on Yugoslavia from the northwest, the west and the southwest. With the Yugoslavs working together in peace and harmony, it will be easier for the kingdom to resist pressure from this quarter and maintain a position of neutrality.

For that reason the settlement of the Serb-Croat dispute is of far more than local importance. Despite the strong prodemocratic sentiment of Yugoslavia, there appears to be very little likelihood of that nation joining the Franco-British coalition. Her geographical situation makes such a move impossible at the moment. Yet if Yugoslavia can remain neutral and, if needs be, defend that neutrality, she will be rendering indirect aid to the democratic bloc.

The Southern Viewpoint

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Ever so often I see a contribution to your columns by someone signing himself "A Southerner" or some such title, indicating he is from the South. Usually what these people have to say is more or less a slur at the South, or, to say the least of it, tinged with bitterness.

The expressions of some of these "Southerners" give a real Southerner a laugh. More than likely these "Southerners" are people who have spent a part, or maybe the entire winter "down South." They may even have stayed long enough to learn that "you-all" is better language than "youse guys," but take it from one who was born and reared in the South, it takes more than a few months spent in Miami, or some Florida winter resort for one to acquire a real Southern viewpoint. Some I have seen down there would never be capable of acquiring the finer sentiments of the real Southerner.

I have seen and heard more "bloody shirt" waving since I have been in Washington than in all my lifetime spent in the South.

Unique Responsibilities

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The unique responsibilities assumed by the executive powers at Washington may be understood on the basis that the insight of these New Dealers approximates a field of facts which never could be approximated by the insight of ordinary men.

With determination to deal honestly with their constituents, just human beings in political office never would undertake, in behalf of their constituents, work beyond the capacity of the sum total of human potentialities.

New Deal executives, however, are not only superior because of position but are also superior because of the innate potentialities of their lives. Those who constitute New Deal bureaucracy are not mere men . . . are supermen. Eff d' are.

Freedom Shrieked

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

On a monument in Lafayette Square can be found this engravure: "Freedom shrieked when Kosciusko fell."

Why was this monument erected to the memory of a Polish general? Also, why one to Lafayette? They fought for our country's freedom—they were not isolationists!

Do we not have in the Congress and elsewhere some very little big men who would deny the distressed countries of these men for whom monuments were erected, even the privilege of buying for cash the means with which to defend their liberties, their freedom?

Should a robber-murderer enter the home of a friend and neighbor of these isolationist gentlemen, and that friend and neighbor appeal to them for the loan of a gun, we might expect the answer to that friend to be something like this: "No, no! He may rob and kill you, but I can't participate in possible murder by letting you have my gun."

Far-Reaching

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I had read the book "Yearling" before so I collected the installments and sent them to a very highly educated woman in Germany, a graduate of the University of Pottingen (when women were still allowed to study), and her verdict is that she is fairly transported with delight, and some parts she pronounces wonderful. She is sure to lend it to several other friends who all know English and thus your effort will reach some intellectuals in Germany.

Russian-German Pact

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Broadcasting systems often proclaim upon the ethereal waves the sixth sense of their news commentators, and the public echoes their praises.

May it be remembered, however, that not all able analysts of events are "on the air." High recognition is merited also, but seldom received, by the staff commentators of such a newspaper as The Washington Post, from whom come many of the best news appraisals, but whose anonymity, unfortunately, makes their achievements largely a matter of course with the public.

During the last few days two Russo-German pacts have been announced, one concluded, the other conjectured—one commercial, the other political.

Radio commentators unanimously termed the latter a "bombshell" that startled the world and stunned the democratic nations. No less surprised, manifestly, were the commentators themselves. Less so The Post.

Writing many hours before the Nazi-Communist political pact was announced, The Post editorial staff, commenting upon the earlier agreement between the two dictatorships, wrote:

"The major point is that the Russo-German treaty coming at this time, is in effect a declaration of Russian neutrality in the event of war between Germany and Poland . . .

"Very apparent is the fact that a Russo-German accord is now actually developing . . .

"By rapidly concluding an important commercial treaty with Germany, and by announcing it at this time, Moscow proclaims to the world that Russia, at any rate, will be no party to 'encirclement' designs."

In according recognition to news commentators, let us not forget the man behind the typewriter who, unhonored, unsung and unseen, has been giving the world the best in analysis of the news for lo, these many years.

Reason For Dreams

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Ethel M. Hunt wrote in The Post of August 14 on the perennial, stale and unprofitable subject of dreams.

Dreams have no import beyond their physiological implications. If you precipitate a state of disorder in your alimentary tract you will experience these discomforts in astonishing variety.

When I was a small boy in the 1880's my father told the following story as often as he could fit it into the day's conversations. He dreamed that his grandfather, a tall, lean individual who lived to be more than 100, had come standing over him with his long bony fingers as though to seize him by the throat. The dream troubled father, so much so that he sought the family doctor and laid his troubles before him.

The good doctor, who had a saving sense of humor, asked father, who was a justice of the peace, "Squire, tell me what you had for dinner the evening you had this dream." After due meditation father commenced the enumeration of the items he had consumed, thus: "Corn pone, corned beef and cabbage, browned potatoes, pickles, etc." "Yes, yes, and a nice dinner," piped the doctor.

"Now tell me, Squire, did you have dessert, and if so, what?" This with a rising inflection. "Half a small mince pie," replied father. "Now, Squire," the doctor intoned, "eat the same dinner tonight with one exception; when you come to the dessert eat a whole mince pie and you will see your grandfather and grandmother both."

Anniversary

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The excellent editorial in The Post of August 22, calling attention to the true meaning of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the International Red Cross has attracted wide comment and I wish to express sincere appreciation on behalf of those associated with the movement in Washington.

It has been my pleasant experience to observe that The Washington Post has always been cognizant of the valuable service which the Red Cross volunteer service is rendering our city. Your co-operation, in bringing the message of the Red Cross to the people of Washington is certain to be reflected in great Red Cross membership, and thereby more adequate assistance to the people of Washington.

EDGAR MORRIS,
Red Cross Roll Call Chairman.

Mr. Borah's Part

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Again it all comes back to us—1920, and Borah campaigning against the League of Nations charging that it was a "League for war" and that if we joined war would come again. We did not join and we did not get peace.

Now we have Russia running out on the democracies as the United States deserted its allies in 1920 and signed the separate peace.

Borah, however, remains away from Washington while the President hurries back to save the situation if any human can save it.

When it is all over and the names of those responsible are compiled at the top of the list will be that of Borah of Idaho.

The Post Impressionist

Summer Afternoon

The white boats of the fishermen, clustered above the oyster bottom 2 mile offshore, float as quietly as lily-pads on a sleepy pond. Not far away, outside the buoy, a Chesapeake "bug-eye" idly waits a favoring wind; the sails that droop limply from her back-slanting masts are as dark, almost, as those that bore Theseus home from Crete. The black plume of smoke from the big tanker out in the channel hangs motionless in the still air. Even ashore you can hear the muffled throb of her powerful Diesel.

Here at the mouth of the little creek that empties into the cove the water is the color, the temperature, of tepid coffee; it is no effort to lift the canoe skimming over the surface as lightly as a gull. The unpainted planks on the seaward side of the old oyster-house out on the sandy point have been mashed in as though some sea-going Paul Bunyan had passed by, the roofbeam sags in the middle like the backbone of a junkman's horse. Once in its lee you can no longer see the bay, where wind and cloud-shadows make clearcut, alternate bands of gray-green and blue upon the water; no longer see the far-off smoke haze that is the Eastern Shore.

It is not far now. In front of the cottage with the flagpole a man is painting the bottom of a boat; the flag hangs listlessly. You can smell warm mud, and rank marshgrass, and even, faintly, salt water.

At the bend the right fork of the creek turns off toward the weathered cottage of one of the local "natives," but just this side, under the bank, the current has hollowed out a deep trough where the crabs come in on the tide. It is best to tie up at the stake, letting the current swing you into position, before dropping the stone that serves for an anchor. Then, your lines baited with chicken heads and the dipnet handy, you lie back and wait.

It is quiet, but not noiseless; rather a silence filled with small noises, sounds become so familiar as to be only half-heard, as one half-hears the ticking of a clock. Locusts gloating in the heat, high and metallic, the hushing of little waves creaming on the now-distant sand, the rustle of the dry reeds.

The little pocket of the creek is glassy smooth, yet, in the canoe, you can feel a gentle, rhythmic, rise and fall that seems, not the tide, but the long systole and diastole of the sleeping earth. The reeds, all of one height and tender green grow solidly down to the water's edge. In the latticed shadows your eye catches slight movement; a snake, abroad on some mysterious business.

When he has gone there is, for a long time, no life, no movement at all in the quiet backwater. A watery world, drenched with sunlight, saturated with warmth, somnolent, brooding. The sensation of remoteness is somehow increased by the far-off cries of children playing on the sandy beach, by an outboard coughing, diminuendo, in the distance. The heat envelopes you like a blanket, soul-thawing, soporific.

There is a strong tug on the handline. The crabs are beginning to come.

Going home on the slack tide, the sun glows behind you in the pine tops. Even before you pass the shelter of the old oysterhouse you can tell, from the impassive resistance of the water, that a stiff breeze is up. Within the cove the little tethered boats are bowing, bowing, like timorous strangers that keep a respectful distance from the shore. Out on the bay, whipped up by the wind, the lean white-crested breakers are racing to the beach.

Somewhere at the end of the long, narrow room a typewriter is tapping, adagio. When it stops for a moment, you can hear, in the abrupt silence, the slow, quiet whirring of the electric fans, the thin rustle of papers. The air is muggy; a heavy, gray-haired woman at one of the desks half-way down the long row fans herself weakly, reaches around to loosen sticky dress from sticky back. Besides the half-filled water-glass on the desk is a potted plant with stiff, dark-green blades that look like rubber daggers.

The young man at the desk assorting cards moves to the window, adjusting the Venetian blind to shut out the fierce afternoon sun. Far down below, laid out flat like a map, every detail and shadow of the little, hard-baked square of courtyard is clearcut in the pitiless white light, the severe geometric pattern of the gravel walks, the primly placed benches and urns of ornamental concrete, the yellow clay showing through the threadbare grass.

Across the rooftops off to the northeast creeps the edge of a dark, slow-moving cloud.

Four o'clock. Papers are arranged in neat stacks on the desks, weighted down with fat glass paperweights. Short queues form in front of the mirrors arranged here and there along the wall, adjusting hats, powdering noses, talking in low voices. Slowly, without exuberance, the groups file out into the corridor, crowd into the elevators.

On the street the heat rises suffocatingly, like a wave; the impact of the sunlight tightens the face into a squint. The crowds move apathetically. Even the flower vendor on the corner is without his usual professional good humor; his ruddy face is mottled, his upper lip beaded with perspiration. A woman, her face a weary grimace, drags a child in a skimpy dress behind her by the hand. The child is cross, peevish. Her pale ringlets cling moistly to her frail neck.

Overhead the sun glows like a coal in a steely-white, metallic sky; aïderios ouranos, the "iron sky" of Homer. Crossing the avenue the asphalt yields to the foot almost like plushy turf; only it is warm and sticky and splotched here and there with stains of oil.

The bus is coming at last; instantly the door is surrounded by pressing, perspiring people. People irritable from the suffocating heat, the acrid fumes. Thinking of home, and the delicious coolness of a shower, and fresh, dry linen. But you are aboard, in the end, after all.

Ominously, through the sudden shadows, comes the rumble of the gathering storm.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Saratoga Lid Is On

THERE IS A dangerous undercurrent to civic indignation in Saratoga as the racing season approaches its last week and the gambling rooms of the region remain dark due to the sinister influence of the district attorney, a Republican by the name of Alfred Simon. This is the second successive summer that Simon has placed Saratoga under a scourge of strict law enforcement, and he still has one year to go, unless he can be removed from office for his flagrantly un-American conduct or enjoined by some combination of bad government leagues and societies.

The local public is aroused, because gambling is one of the principal industries of Saratoga, and never before has the law been enforced for one summer in succession, much less than two. In fact, it is doubtful that it ever was fully enforced for as long as one night in succession prior to the regrettable election of Simon, because in those days it was customary to blockade only one or two institutions at a time and rotate the law enforcement among them all.

Simon, however, has taken the law into his own hands, as you might say, and has been riding roughshod over the very well-springs of Saratoga's sacred heritage, for which the founding fathers shed their blood on the battlefields beyond the city a long time ago. He has raided some fine old institutions in the outskirts, and a detective has been suspended from the local force because somehow some gambling tools, including three wheels and a birdcage, became lost or mislaid in transit from the premises where they were seized to the local police station.

Taxi Men Protested Simon's Policies

IN VIEW OF the fact that such tools usually became lost or mislaid in such circumstances, not only here but everywhere else in the United States, this procedure has come to have the force of legal custom. Therefore, it is the view of the local patriots that the sinister Simon has suddenly changed the rules of the game, which would be contrary to the American tradition of fair play.

Moreover, the citizens are particularly sensitive, because this is the seventy-fifth, or diamond, jubilee of the racing and gambling industries in Saratoga and they feel that he has gone out of his way to show contempt for some fine old 100 per cent American traditions, not the least of them being the sacred tradition that laws were made to be broken.

If Simon had revealed his true character during his campaign he would have been crushed by a great uprising of the patriotic spirit. However, candidates for the office of district attorney always had used the slogan "Crime Must Go!" as far back as anyone can remember, and nobody had any way of knowing that Simon, when elected, would introduce alien ideas under cover of a harmless motto.

Last year, after two weeks of Simon's tyranny, the taxicab drivers held a protest parade demanding that he be restrained from interfering with an industry which provided them and many other townsmen with milk for their innocent babies. Stickers were printed and pasted around town reading "We want action in August, not relief in December," and labels bearing some protest were attached to loaves of bread and other groceries.

Double Crossing Charged By Voters

SIMON WAS accused of starving little children, and feeling ran so high that it was thought that surely he would respect the decent opinion of the community this year. But this year he has been more un-American than ever, and it is now openly charged that he has flatly refused to accept bribes or submit to any kind of political pressure—two allegations which in Saratoga, as in Miami, would seem sufficient to cause his impeachment if they could be proved.

Simon obviously is riding to a great fall, for any reform candidate promising to do away with law enforcement will be sure to defeat him when he comes up for re-election, but in the meantime he has another season to go, and it is by no means certain that public fury can be held within bounds through another such spell as this one. He is a terrible embarrassment to the Republican Party, too, and old-time regular Republicans, steeped in Americanism, privately disown him and insist that he probably is a secret New Dealer with a mission to discredit the G. O. P.

Simon, on his part, just says he is enforcing the law according to his oath and his campaign promises and refuses to admit that his own interpretation of the law, his oath and his promises are contrary to the spirit of true Americanism. This only makes the honest citizens of Saratoga wilder, because it is a plain implication that their own brand of Americanism, which reverses the ancient Saratoga custom of law violation, is not the authentic type. It is felt that he double-crossed the electorate in his campaign because in repeating the ancient slogan "Crime Must Go!" he did not say "positively."

G. A. R. Opens 73d Camp, Honors Dead

Pittsburgh, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Grand Army of the Republic paid tribute today to dead comrades who fought in the Civil War, opening its seventy-third annual encampment.

The veterans were joined by veterans of the World and Spanish-American wars and city and State officials for annual memorial services.

Women, Children Leave Danzig

20,000 Troops Reported Guarding Free City Borders

By the Associated Press

Danzig, Aug. 27.—Women and children were being moved from Danzig and neighboring Zoppot to the country today as Danzig's army spread out over the western half of the Free City setting up anti-aircraft guns and machine-gun nests, digging trenches and erecting new barbed wire.

[Danzig's 75 miles of frontier on the Polish Corridor was guarded tonight by about 20,000 men equipped with modern weapons, with good evidence that both troops and equipment from Germany had been slipped over the East Prussian frontier during the past few days, the United Press said. Editor's note.]

Astonished villagers watched soldiers digging trenches across pastures and corn fields and stringing barbed wire a few hundred yards in front of the trenches.

Antiaircraft Guns In City

At various points soldiers were posted to watch the sky toward the Polish Corridor for airplanes. Anti-aircraft guns, some camouflaged and some in the open, were manned.

Police declared the air over Danzig a closed area today and that any unauthorized plane flying over the city would be fired upon.

In Danzig antiaircraft guns were set up in fields near the important shipbuilding works and oil and gasoline tanks in the harbor area. Fully equipped troops in trucks moved out of the city at intervals, mostly toward the Polish border.

Food Reported Held Up

A communication line has been established on the highway to East Prussia and it was believed that a field headquarters has been set up outside the city and many troops are being housed in some of the barns and houses along the road.

Semiofficial quarters said Poland had continued to hold up carloads of food destined for the Free City and that only a month's supply of many vital necessities was on hand.

a war of destruction could be entered into without a last attempt at peaceful solution between Germany and Poland.

Your desire for peace could be used therein without damaging German honor.

I, as head of the French Government, wishing on the one hand harmony between the French and German people, and on the other hand being bound to Poland by ties of friendship and the pledged word, am prepared to make all efforts which an honorable man could bring to this attempt at successful conclusion.

You, like myself, were a soldier at the front in the last war. You know as I do what condemnation that war left on the consciences of nations, no matter how the war ended.

The conception I can form of your outstanding role as leader of the German people on the road to peace taking to completion his part in the common work of civilization, moves me to request an answer to this suggestion.

If French and German blood should flow again, as it did 25 years ago, in a still longer and more muderous war, then both nations would fight in confidence of victory. The victor, however, would only be destruction and barbarity.

Studebaker Finds Students Eager For Air Courses

Students in schools and colleges are making increasing demands for vocational training courses in aeronautics, U. S. Commissioner of Education Dr. John W. Studebaker indicated in a study on the place of aviation in education made public yesterday.

Dr. Studebaker said that while 65 universities offer courses in aeronautical engineering, rapid developments in the aircraft industry and interest in the current military aviation expansion have resulted in a wave of enthusiasm for aviation training among students in secondary schools and junior colleges.

According to the study, reports received from all parts of the country show an increasing activity in mechanics-training programs, in meteorology, aircraft design, radio, and kindred subjects. Dr. Studebaker urged schools and colleges in the country to facilitate student participation in the Nation-wide air progress celebration of the National Aeronautics Association, September 11 to 24.

Rough Seas Balk Surfacing of Squalus

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 27 (AP).—Rough seas balked the Navy today in its final effort to lift the U. S. S. Squalus and the bodies of her 28 dead.

With only minor operations remaining before the third hoist that would complete surfacing, commanders of the salvage crew decided to make the crucial effort tomorrow, weather permitting.

tate by way of negotiation. This was impossible.

That the revision had to come was known and clear to a greater number of sensible men among all nations. Whatever one may say against my method, whatever one believes one should criticize about it, it must not be overlooked or denied that it became possible for me without new bloodshed, not only to find solutions satisfactory in many cases to Germany, but that by the method of my procedure I relieved the statesmen of other nations of the obligation, frequently impossible for them, of having to defend this revision before their own peoples.

For, your excellency will have to admit one thing to me: the revision had to come. The Versailles dictate was unbearable. No Frenchman with honor—and yourself included, Herr Daladier—would have acted differently from myself in a similar position.

In this sense I have then tried to remove from the world the most irrational provisions of the Versailles dictate.

I have made an offer to the Polish government which shocked the German people. Nobody but myself could even dare to go before the public with such an offer. It could, therefore, be made only once.

I am deeply convinced that if especially England at that time had, instead of starting a wild campaign against Germany in the press and instead of launching rumors of a German mobilization, had somehow talked the Poles into being reasonable, Europe today and for 25 years could enjoy a condition of deepest peace.

As things were, however, Polish public opinion was excited by a lie about German aggression. Clear decisions which the situation called for were made difficult for the Polish government. Above all the government's ability to see the limitations of realistic possibilities was impaired by the guarantee promise which followed.

The Polish government declined the proposals. Polish public opinion, convinced that England and France would not fight for Poland, began to make demands which one might possibly stigmatize as laughable insanity were they not so tremendously dangerous. At that point an unbearable terror, a physical and economic persecution of the Germans, although they numbered more than 1,500,000, began in the regions ceded by the Reich.

I don't want here to speak of the atrocities that occurred. Suffice it to say that Danzig, too, was made increasingly conscious through continuous aggressive acts by Polish officials of the fact that apparently it is irretrievably delivered over to the high-handedness of a power foreign to the national character of the city and its population.

May I now take the liberty of putting the question to you, Herr Daladier, how would you act as a Frenchman if, through some unhappy issue, of a brave struggle, one of your provinces were severed by a corridor occupied by a foreign power? And if a big city—let us say, Marseille—were hindered from belonging to France and if Frenchmen living in this area were persecuted, beaten and maltreated, yes, murdered in a bestial manner?

You are a Frenchman, Herr Daladier, and I therefore know how you would act. I am a German, Herr Daladier. Do not doubt my sense of honor nor my consciousness of duty to act exactly like you. If, then, you had the misfortune that is ours, would you then, Herr Daladier, have any understanding Germany were without cause to insist that the corridor through France remained, that the robbed territory must not be restored, and that the return of Marseille to France be forbidden?

Certainly I cannot imagine, Herr Daladier, that Germany would fight against you for this reason. For I and all of us, have renounced Alsace-Lorraine in order to avoid further bloodshed. Much less would we shed blood in order to maintain an injustice that must needs be as unbearable for you as it would be immaterial to us. I feel exactly as you do what you write in your letters, Herr Daladier.

Possibly we, as old front fighters, can best understand each other in a number of fields. I ask you, however, to understand this also: That it is impossible for a nation of honor to renounce the claim of almost two million human beings and to see them maltreated at its own borders. I have therefore set up a clear demand to Poland. Danzig and the Corridor must go back to Germany. The Macedonian conditions on our eastern frontier must be removed.

I see no way of persuading Poland, which feels herself as unassailable now that she enjoys the protection of her guarantees, to accept a peaceful solution. I should, however, despair of an honorable future for my people if we were not determined under such circumstances to solve the problem in one way or another.

If our two countries on that account should be destined to meet again on the field of battle, there would nevertheless be a difference in the motives. I, Herr Daladier, shall be leading by people in a fight to rectify a wrong, whereas the others will be fighting to preserve that wrong.

That is the more tragic since many important men, also among your own people, have recognized the insanity of the solutions then found (meaning at Versailles) as also the impossibility of maintaining it lastingly. I am perfectly clear about the serious consequences which such a conflict will entail. I believe, however, the Poles would have to bear the greatest burden for, regardless of who wins in a war about this question, the Polish state of today will be lost in any way you calculate.

That our two peoples should now enter a new, bloody war of destruction is painful not only for you but also for me, Herr Daladier. As already observed, I see no possibility for us on our part to exert influence in the direction of reasonableness upon Poland for correcting a situation that is unbearable for the German people and the German Reich.

Signed, Adolf Hitler.

War Fear Stirs Many

By Ernest K. Lindley

Things To Remember

THE MOST alarming symptom in the United States is the fatalistic notion that we cannot stay out of war in Europe.

The polls indicate that this confession of impotence has spread steadily during the last year or two. If the polls are correct, we stand indicted by ourselves of a much graver weakness than any which has been charged to us, or to any other democratic nation by the Nazi-Communist dictators. The dictators have accused the democracies of paralysis of the will. Insofar as this charge implied that they lacked the will to fight in defense of their own interests, it has been shown to be abysmally wrong.

But we, or some of us, confess to the truth of this accusation in a much more humiliating sense. We confess that when a big war comes along, we just can't keep from fighting. Our trouble in this country is not lack of a will to fight for our own interests but a headlong urge to fight regardless of our own interests. If promiscuity in war isn't paralysis of the will, nothing is.

As to where our sympathies lie in Europe there is no doubt. Moreover, it can be demonstrated beyond reasonable doubt, I believe, that the survival of British sea power is to our advantage. If British sea power were destroyed, we would probably have to build a still larger Navy. Probably the urge to protect parts of the British Empire would launch us on an era of imperialist expansion of our own.

But, these are no more than probabilities. The only sure teaching of history is that the consequences of cataclysmic events are seldom what it is contemporarily prophesied that they will be.

Nazi Domination May Not Be Harmful

BUT MERELY because we would prefer to see one side win in Europe or because we would prefer to see British sea power survive, it does not follow that it is to our interest to expend without limit our resources in material and men. Twenty-two years ago we saved Great Britain and France at tremendous cost to ourselves.

Now they are in trouble again. If we are going to assume the heavy costs of rescuing the British Empire every time it gets into serious difficulty, we ought to take over the job of running the empire. Taxation without representation was a minor complaint beside that of fighting without control over the policies which lead to war.

It is by no means clear that German domination of central and southeastern Europe would be to our disadvantage. Nobody knows yet how far the Russo-German agreement has gone or will go. The Russian flip-flop may have served to educate our left wingers in the elements of power politics. Their discomfiture is the only comic relief to an ominous state of affairs, as this is written. Incidentally, it has been incorrectly reported through other channels that the Russo-German agreement came as a complete surprise to our State Department experts. That is not so.

U. S. Has Advantage Of 2 Broad Oceans

APPARENTLY, OUR State Department had no information that such an agreement was being negotiated, and it is true that the pact flabbergasted most of the top people in our State Department. A minority in the Department, however, had been forecasting privately for some time that Russia would not join the Anglo-French combination and that Russia would be neutral in the event of a European war. At least one of my acquaintance had gone further and predicted a German-Russian rapprochement.

How the Russo-German agreement will affect the Far East remains to be shown. Perhaps Japan and Russia, in turn, will arrive at a nonaggression pact. Perhaps, on the other hand, it will become our interest to see Japan preserved as a strong power to check Russian expansion in the western Pacific.

Nobody can see far ahead with certainty. Meanwhile, we have the immense advantage of two broad ocean frontiers, which can be defended by the Navy which we have or, under changed circumstances, could easily build. Meanwhile, to the south of us lies a continent which contains nearly everything in the way of materials which we do not produce for ourselves—a continent which, like our own, can be defended by naval power. If necessary, we can live in the Western Hemisphere, and let the rest of the world commit suicide.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

To Sidney Howard

†They told me, Heraclitus, they told me you were dead.
They brought me bitter news to hear and bitter tears to shed.
I wept as I remembered how often you and I Had tired the sun with talking and sent him down the sky.

I do not believe that you are dead, Sidney. In my own mind, I go on talking with you. Our friendship—yours and mine—was only a few dozen hours of talk—a few dozen hours in a lifetime. Not personal talk . . . except as all talk is personal . . . about what drama is; how old themes recur over and over, and how all plays can be reduced to a few eternal stories; about politics—the drama and philosophy of men, expressed through politics. About farming. The things people talk about.

Only, it is not so easy to talk as it once was. There are veils between the talk of people nowadays. Veils of distrust. Veils of ideologies—you know what I mean.

We talked about that once, too. One goes exploring with talk into the reasons why things happen and the nature of the forces moving society and moving us; what one hopes for; how one might bring it about. And then, suddenly, a sneer on the lip or the withdrawal. "Tory," "Reactionary," "Rich Man," "Poor Man," "Progressive," "Marxist," "Revolutionist," "New Dealer," "Old Dealer"—words pinned to thinkers and their thoughts, to fix them—piloried, labeled, dead, sterile—slogans as barriers to communication between men, between men and women.

He Saw Folly Rather Than Sin

YOU NEVER USED WORDS that way, as labels; words as labels meant nothing to you, whose clear, kind eyes saw only human beings, and accepted or rejected them not for what they were. Refusing to catalogue people, as though they were treatises of some sort, orthodox or unorthodox, to be accepted or banned.

You saw in humans folly rather than sin—the folly which was sometimes comic and sometimes tragic, and always, to you, touching. You were able to have no great opinion of the human race, and still to love it. With every word you wrote you declared your solidarity with it; with every word you wrote you tried to keep it together, to keep open communication between people, to remind them of their common fate; that they were born, would love, would work, would have some happiness, suffer much frustration and would certainly die. This was the fate of every human soul, you seemed continually aware, and therefore you had pity. Pity was in all your plays.

You could admire heroism and detest heroics. You hated war. I remember things you said about the last war, in which you were young, and an aviator. It wasn't the blood so much . . . it was not even the dying that you remembered with horror; it was the folly, the bureaucracy, the petty egoisms, the orders that became separated from all reality, the red tape that strangled men to death without a fair fight first.

THEY SENT UP that boy in a tomato crate," I remember you said. "The mechanic told the officer the plane wasn't fit to leave the ground. But the officer wanted to assert his prestige. He had given the order in the first place. He barked at the boy, 'I suppose you are yellow' So the kid turned white and got in and took it up. My God! He wasn't in the air 10 minutes when down it crashed, and the kid was dead. Just because a damned fool was afraid to lose face. It's that that I hated most," you said. Do you remember? "To die for something that matters—that's all right. Everybody dies anyhow. That's one thing that's certain. But to die because some fool has made a mistake and won't admit it—I couldn't bear it."

Oh, Sidney! Perhaps you are lucky. We are always so near to seeing it all over again. People dying because "some damned fool was afraid to lose face."

You hated the machine—the way the war was a machine, the war itself, the organization itself; the way society becomes a machine.

"Men invented the machine," you once said, "and now they try to make themselves into its image, worshiping their own creation. The machine takes on a life of its own."

Humans Shrieking Like Locomotives

THAT IS THE PHRASE my memory has been groping for! That is what you said, Sidney, in one of those conversations that we had in the middle of a big party. "The machine takes on a life of its own!"

Oh, Sidney, it does! All over the world now it is taking on a horrible life of its own. It is eating up words, Sidney. They go into it good, clean, reasonable words, words meant for communication, and they come out in awful cries, like the groans of grinding machine parts, like the inhuman shrieks of locomotive sirens: Eja! Eja! Heil! Sieg Heil! Rot Front! Eja! Sieg Heil!

Shrieks of a runaway engine-state, running—where? Into what wall?

"The machine takes on a life of its own."

That is what happened to you, wasn't it, Sidney? The machine was a good machine. It was made to plow the fields with, so that corn and oats could grow, and cattle be fed and milk produced, and children be nourished, and rough nature be tamed, and this world made more beautiful.

"I want to get back to the farm," you said, the last time we met. It was in Hollywood, and you looked tired and bored. "It gives me the feeling of doing something I am absolutely certain is good."

But the machine took on a life of its own. You cranked it—it was in gear. Someone had put it in gear . . . The machine sprang forward, all by itself, without any human will at all, and crushed a man against a wall.

You could write a play about that, Sidney.

If the man had not been you.

Private Sources Investing More in Farms, Says FCA

By the Associated Press

A decline in the volume of Federal loans for financing farm purchases was interpreted yesterday by Farm Credit Administration spokesmen as an indication that funds of individuals and private financial institutions once more were turning to agricultural lands for sound investment.

The FCA reported a decline of 14 per cent in the number of farm purchases financed and 10 per cent in total funds used for the first half of this year, compared with the same period in 1938. It financed purchase of 8,897 farms in the first six months of 1939, compared with 10,056 in the first half of 1938.

FCA officials said the bulk of funds for farm purchases normally comes from individuals who regard farm mortgages as a sound investment. Insurance companies and similar institutions also are heavy investors in farm mortgages.

Welfare Board To Consider Two Vacancies Today

The Board of Public Welfare will meet today to consider successors to the late Col. William Peak, and May O. Hankin, as superintendent of Lorton and assistant relief director, respectively.

Miss Elizabeth McHugh, at present attached to the District WPA, in charge of investigating relief applicants, has been prominently mentioned to succeed Miss Hankin, who resigned after publication of the Lewis survey of relief.

Although no names have been mentioned, it was learned a member of the Department of Justice is in line for the Lorton job.

Livestock Men Unhurt by Wage Law, Says Andrews

Wages-Hours Administrator Elmer Andrews yesterday made public a letter in which he advised livestock associations that the employment of workers in the meat packing industry, in conformity to a recent interpretation of the wages-hours division, should not adversely affect the income of livestock producers.

Numerous protests were made by State livestock associations and individual producers, following the recent publication of an interpretative bulletin on the exemptions applicable to the meat packing industry.

Andrews pointed out that "the meat packing industry is one which enjoys an extremely low percentage of labor costs," and that in 1937 only 6 per cent of the production value in the industry was attributable to wages.

"The negligible amount of overtime payments that might be required under our interpretation of the exemption would be far less than one-tenth of one per cent of the production value," he wrote.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The 'Dude Cruise'

This summer has seen a new vacation stunt. It's the "Dude Schooner." Going to sea as a practical boat hand has become the most surprising vacation fad of the year. It has the dude ranch licked.

You get just as much rough riding and your friends don't have to reach so far for a bucket of water to throw in your face if you are thrown.

Several Down East skippers with old-time sailing ships on their hands are suddenly finding themselves in a profitable business. The "captains courageous" are coming out in the role of skippers resourceful.

There is at least as much money in carrying a cargo of thrill seekers as a cargo of cod, lumber or gravel, and they don't have to cover as much ground for results. And then, too, there is the amusement angle.

The cruises have shown that there are thousands of Americans who have had an unfulfilled desire to be uncomfortable in a new way at the old rates.

On a dude schooner you get all the inconveniences of life at sea with only a few of the cares and responsibilities.

The girls are taught housekeeping when upside down in three simple lessons. This includes the trick of frying an egg in a gale without getting any of the yolk on topsails.

And the men vacationists are given a fine, breezy chance to discover that they would never have amounted to much ashore if their job had included the trick of splicing a rope.

Vast numbers of Americans have always thought it must be nice to go yachting, but they have always been stymied by the fact it was necessary to own or charter a yacht. And most of those who manage to buy or charter one quickly gave up the idea after discovering what it cost to keep the wash bowl in repair.

The "dude cruise" has solved their problem. Not only do they have almost as much fun as Harold Vanderbilt or Mr. Sopwith, but they have it on a vessel in which they don't bump their heads every time they move into a new part of the ship.

If the bilge is too full of water, it is just a matter of complaining to the management.

When it's time for lunch, it is more of a hotel matter than a personal ordeal in tight quarters.

And what makes a "dude cruise" a pleasure is this, my hearties: you can see somebody strike a match on the bright varnish and not give a darn.

"Sun-Day"

While I'm at work,
From nine until five,
In spite of the fan,
I'm roasting alive.

And then when I end
My task for the day,
I dash to the beach
With heart feeling gay.

But when I arrive,
I note that the sun—
So torrid before—
Is now on the run.

And so I suppose
The bright solar ray
Just labors to fill
Its own union day.

Adolf Hitler must realize, now and then, that if Germany should lose the next war there wouldn't be much question of what to do with Hitler.

Roosevelt Entertains Luxemburg Princes

Small Dinner Party at White House, Luncheon Today, Precede Departure of Royal Pair to Visit World's Fair

President Roosevelt took time out from the European situation last night to entertain at a small dinner party in honor of two distinguished tourists, Prince Consort Felix of Luxemburg and his 19-year-old son, Prince John. The two, who are making their first visit to this country, arrived yesterday and will stay over today until after a luncheon at which the President will also entertain in their honor.

Last night's party was an informal affair, with less than a dozen present. At this season of the year, the White House is practically vacant, and somewhat "undressed." On the second floor, the rugs are rolled up, dust covers are on the furniture, and there is a faint smell of mothballs. Mrs. Roosevelt is at Hyde Park.

The princes of the small duchy were met when they entered the country at Canada (their ship landed at Nova Scotia) by George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol for the State Department. Mr. Summerlin has met more distinguished royal visitors this past spring and summer than most protocol chiefs escort in a lifetime. The King and Queen of England, the Crown Prince and Princess of Norway and the Crown Prince and Princess of Denmark were among those he has been called upon to accompany. His store of anecdotes about the trips are endless and fascinating, but "off the record."

As with most rulers, the State Department will send one of its members along with Prince Consort Felix and Prince John during their tour. Stanley Woodward, assistant chief of protocol, will leave with them today for New York, where the party will spend a week at the fair. He will accompany them to Chicago and St. Paul, thence to the Canadian border. Mr. Woodward had already met the princes on a previous visit to Luxemburg.

Ambassador Joseph Davies, besides being envoy to Belgium, is also accredited to tiny Luxemburg, and came to Washington this week to assist in "doing the honors." Since the duchy's foreign affairs are handled by the Netherlands, the Minister of that country in Washington, Dr. Alexander Loudon, also participates in general excitement.

Crisis Keeps Many In City for Week-End

The current crisis kept in town over the week-end a great many people, chiefly diplomats, who would otherwise have been almost anywhere else. The dining room and outdoor terrace of the Chevy Chase Club were packed for the Saturday night dance and there were several genial dinner parties. The club atmosphere was less formal than usual, with several of the guests wearing sports clothes.

There were several diplomats present, among them the Finnish Minister, Hjalmar Procope, who joined the small group entertained at dinner by Folke Wennerberg, charge d'affaires of the Swedish legation. With his pretty wife, Mr. Wennerberg recently visited Mrs. Demarest Lloyd at her summer home at Nonquitt, Mass., and reports that his hostess had planned to sail September 2 for a stay in Italy. She probably is considering canceling her passage now, if she has not already done so.

Mr. Wennerberg's dinner guests included Mrs. Tyner Dugdale, who wore a dimity print; Stanley Woodward and M. and Mme. Otaker Kabelac. M. Kabelac, who was formerly with the Czech Legation here, is now in business in Prague. He and his wife came to Washington this summer to renew old acquaintanceships. They are stopping at the Chevy Chase Club. Their plans to leave are dependent on what happens abroad. At present, with the borders closed, they would be unable to get into what was once known as Czecho-Slovakia.

Sidney's Orchestra Livens Up Things

Sidney and his orchestra helped take everybody's mind off more serious matters at the club the other night, though the latest news from Europe was pretty much the center of conversation. The Marquis of Sant' Orsola, Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, was among the diplomats enjoying a few turns about the floor. George Garrett, who, with Mrs. Garrett, has been at Northeast Harbor, Me., watched the dancers from a ringside table.

Also seen were Frank Reeside, who was serenaded by Sidney because it was his birthday; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams, the latter wearing a scarlet jacket over her dress; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., chatting with Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, Robert Buell and George Renchard, all of the State Department; Mrs. Ralph Miller, George Williams, just back from a trip to California, and many others.

Mrs. Chandler Leaves Capital

Mrs. Chandler and the children are returning from New York, where the Governor's family had taken part in the Kentucky Day celebration at the World's Fair on August 19. After the celebration was over, Mrs. Chandler and the children remained a few days.

Gov. and Mrs. Chandler's other daughter, who also was with them in New York, returned to her home in Kentucky earlier in the week to make final preparations for going to Stevens College, where she will be enrolled as a first-year student this fall.

A fishing trip to Canada with some friends caught the fancy of Gov. Chandler, who left shortly after the Kentucky celebration for a fortnight or so in the Canadian woods.

Barbara Henning To Visit Sister At Texas Fort

Miss Barbara Henning will leave Wednesday for an extended visit with her brother-in-law and sister, Lieut. and Mrs. N. Landon Head, at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. She will not return to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sears Henning, until early in November.

Miss Henning spent the past week-end in New York with a group of friends. The party attended a dinner and dance at the Hotel Astor given by second classmen of West Point to mark the close of their furlough.

In Miss Henning's party were Cadet Alan Thompson, Miss Dorothy Woodruff, Miss Sally Rising and Cadet Harry Rising. Miss Henning met Miss Rising in New York, the latter having come from Finger Lakes, where her parents, Col. and Mrs. H. N. Rising, have a summer cottage. While in New York Miss Henning stayed with Miss Elinor Gudger, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Emmet C. Gudger, of Washington.

Ida E. James' Song To Be Sung at Fair

Ida Elaine James, prominent member of the Washington branch of the National League of American Pen Women, will receive a signal honor Wednesday night when Elmo Russ presents in his World's Fair concert a song he has written to one of her lyrics. The number, "Tipsy With the Moon," will be sung by Roland Fiore, young tenor known to radio and concert audiences.

The all-Russ program will be given in the tropical gardens of the Florida Pavilion at 8:15 and will also include a song, the words of which are by Benjamin Musser, formerly of Washington, and now of Atlantic City. Singers, in addition to Mr. Fiore, who will be on the program are Alfred Chigi, barytone, who has sung in Washington; Gloria Russ, soprano, and Dorothy Edwards, contralto.

Veterans' Ladies Leave for Boston

Delegates and alternates from the District Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars left for Boston over the week-end to attend the national convention in session there August 27 to September 1. Eola Wright, the District president, is a delegate from the Treasury Auxiliary.

Roberta Fawcett and Adelaide Grant are cochairmen of the District banquet which will be one of the social events of the convention.

Those attending from Follow Me Auxiliary are: Mrs. Fawcett, Mary Campbell, Hattie Byram, Patrise Kelly and Louise Downs. Delegates and alternates of National Capital Auxiliary include Mildred Carter, Ola Webb, Ethel Orme, Edith Hiser, Clay Keene Miller, Frances Van Houton; Equity, Walter Reed Auxiliary, Sue McLeish; Federal, Carrie Irving and Josephine Welsh; Potomac, Rose Lubkert; Defense, Beth Johnson, Edith Whitecraft and Mary Sneigoski; Treasury, Ethel Ridgeway, alternate.

Stewart Grunnon Lands In N. Y. on Way Here

Stewart E. Grunnon, Charge d'Affairs of the United States Embassy at Moscow, arrived in New York on Saturday on the liner President Harding, en route to Washington. He has been in Soviet Russia for a year and a half and will leave in a few weeks for his new post in the American consulate in Tokyo.

Mr. Grunnon is expected to call at the State Department in Washington, although he said on landing that he had no official report for his superiors.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

THE WARRENTON HORSE SHOW will be the important sporting event in Virginia this coming week-end, Beginning Saturday morning, and resuming on Labor Day, this leading hunter show of America will have the largest list of good entries it has ever assembled.

Homes, hotels and boarding houses are filling up as guests arrive from New York, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Richmond and all over Virginia to attend the show.

With many parties to be given over the week-end; the wedding Saturday evening in Leesburg of Miss Janet Fauntleroy Harrison to Lieut. Bertram C. Harrison; and two debutantes, Miss Elizabeth Mayo Atkinson and Miss Barbara Iselin, of Middleburg, to be presented at balls on Friday and Saturday nights, northern Virginia promises to enjoy its gayest week since early summer.

SENATOR HARRY F. BYRD gave on Saturday his annual picnic to apple growers at his log bungalow in the midst of hundreds of acres of apple trees. The guests, who numbered hundreds, began to arrive at 10 a. m. to enjoy the day. At noon a box luncheon was handed over counters and long tables to those there, while hillbilly musicians played from the platform built on a huge truck placed in the center of the crowd.

After luncheon, Senator Byrd climbed onto the platform and greeted his guests, then requested everyone to bow their heads in silent prayer for a few moments, asking peace for the world. The Rev. Robert Nelson, of Winchester, also offered a prayer for peace.

SENATOR BYRD first gave this annual party about 15 years ago, when 200 people came. Since then the affair has grown by the hundreds each year and on Saturday there were 2,500 present.

The person most impressed with the growth of the party is Susan Tokes, a white-haired colored woman who runs the Tokes Inn near Winchester and who has always put up the luncheons for Senator Byrd's picnics. White, square paper boxes are packed with delicious fried chicken, old Virginia ham, buttered rolls, potato chips, pickle and a large paper napkin on top.

Susan prepared and cooked for the party on Saturday 500 chickens, 20 large old hams, 4,000 rolls, many jars of pickle and gallons of tea and coffee. John Ritter, head superintendent for the Senator, was there seeing that all cars were parked and said they shipped 87,000 bushels of apples last season. Thomas Bolling Byrd, owner of one of the largest orchards in the Valley of Virginia, was cohost with his brother. Mrs. Thomas Byrd arrived from Maine in time for the picnic—accompanied by her stepdaughter, Miss Margaret Byrd, of Winchester, who has been with Mrs Byrd for two weeks.

MRS. HARRY KERNS, Senator Byrd's daughter, and two of his sons—Beverley and Dick, were on hand. Mrs. H. D. Flood and her son, Bolling Flood, motored out from Washington for the day. Mrs. Richard E. Byrd spent the day with Mrs. Harry Byrd, who was not well enough to attend the picnic at the Byrd home, Rosemont. R. L. Arnold, of Petersburg, was among the house guests of Senator Byrd; Miss Gretchen Thomson, of Summit Point, whose engagement was announced to Larry Williams yesterday, arrived from Colonial Beach.

Miss Mary Owen Lyon was an interested listener to all of the speeches and Miss Betty Lyon was also there. Mrs. Washington Grove and Miss Imogene Thomson, who have large orchards, attended. Others seen were Miss Rose McDonald, Mrs. Charles McIntosh, Mrs. Nan Eustaphieve, Mrs. John B. Neill, Mr. and Mrs. Gray Beverley, who had as guests George Chanez and Jack Brown, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. William Beverley, Fred C. Strype, Harry W. Farrell and Alfred Schecter, all of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Grifen, Miss Lalla Tucker, Frank Wissler and his daughter, Miss Dorothy Wissler; E. Blackburn Moore, Mack Clagett and his son, William Clagett; Nelson Page, Ralph Dorsey, Horace Brown, Philip Glaze, J. D. Griffing, Henry Post Mitchell, Kenneth Levi, James Kuykendall, William Boaz, E. E. Higgs, of Staunton, and Jack Casper, of Hancock, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner Wiltshire entertained at a delightful buffet supper lawn party on Saturday night, celebrating his birthday. Chairs, benches and bales of straw were arranged over the grass; a bar had been built at one side and supper was served from a long table, as local colored musicians furnished music.

Among those present were his brother and his wife, Maj. and Mrs. George Wiltshire, and their daughter, Miss Maggie Belle Wiltshire; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. John Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Crompton Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sabin, Mr. and Mrs. Duval Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. B. Cushman, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vanderpool Clark, Mr. and Mrs. John Rawlings, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Tabb, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Triplett, Mrs. Silvie Hazard, Mrs. Hubert Phipps, Miss Priscilla Macy, Miss Connie Regan, Clay Bayly, Walter Fred, Prosser Tabb, Henry Skinker, Harris Bucklin, Philip Connors and Capt. and Mrs. Jody Carleson, of Quantico, who are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cushman.

Women Plan Democrat Day

Democratic women in all parts of the country are responding to the suggestion of Mrs. Roosevelt that September 16 be observed as Democratic Women's Day. Celebrations are being planned by the 100 outside groups affiliated with the Woman's National Democratic Club, according to Mrs. David Tucker Brown, president.

Mrs. Brown, one of the few local members who have not left Washington to escape the August heat, has been engaged, during the past week, in sending letters all over the United States, announcing plans for the observance and enlisting the co-operation of organizations and individuals. She has signed personally at least 600 letters, she says.

The women expect to aid the Democratic National Committee in raising its campaign fund, with the county vice chairmen and county leaders planning a money-raising event in every county in the country.

Mrs. Roosevelt is honorary president of the Woman's National Democratic Club, and Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, an active member of the board of directors. The affiliated club committee of which Mrs. Carroll Miller is chairman, succeeding Mrs. Samuel Herrick, has been responsible for the rapid growth in the number of outside clubs belonging to the national organization.

The clubhouse, at 1526 New Hampshire avenue, has been kept open all summer, with informal luncheons served for members and their guests on Mondays and dinners on Thursdays. Florence Riddle is the new secretary, succeeding Mrs. John Grimsley, who resigned in the spring.

To Go to Southampton

Mrs. Jerauld Wright will leave Annapolis today for Southampton for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips B. Thompson. She will remain over Labor Day.

Mrs. F. R. Mead, Nee Zimmerman, Mother of a Son

News has been received of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roberts Mead, jr., of Hartford, Conn. Mrs. Mead is the former Miss Julie Dell Zimmerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Daniel Zimmerman, of St. Matthews, S. C., and the sister of Mrs. S. Kent Legare, of Washington.

During the summer Mrs. Mead has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Legare, at the latter's home in Simsbury, Conn. Mrs. Mead was a popular member of the younger set here during the winters she spent as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Legare. Her marriage to Mr. Mead took place last October in St. Matthews.

Since their wedding, the young couple have made their home in Hartford, where Mr. Mead is with an aircraft-manufacturing firm.

W. L. Robertses On Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. William Leslie Roberts, jr., who were married Saturday afternoon, are now on a wedding trip which will take them to New York and Maine. Upon their return they will make their home in Washington.

The bride, the former Miss Angela G. Honan, is the daughter of Maj. and Mrs. John J. Honan, of Washington, and Mr. Roberts is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, of Little Rock, Ark. They were married at 4 p. m. in Walter Reed Chapel, the Rev. William J. Walsh officiating.

The bride wore a gown of wine color, made on empire lines, with puffed sleeves and a brief train. Her tiny velvet hat was trimmed with a bow and she carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses and rust colored chrysanthemums.

Miss Phyllis Marie Honan served as her sister's maid of honor and only attendant. Her frock of royal blue velvet was also made empire style and she topped off her costume with a poke bonnet trimmed with blue velvet streamers. She carried yellow roses and small chrysanthemums of the same shade.

Addison A. Hunter was best man and the ushers were Joseph H. Tonshill and Kermit E. Goodger. A small reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony.

Both the bride and bridegroom attended George Washington University and the latter is also a graduate of the Washington College of law.

Frances Glover, Mr. Charrington To Wed Sept. 9

Ceremony to Take Place at All Souls' Memorial Church

Invitations have been issued by Warren Irving Glover, former Assistant Postmaster General, to the wedding of his daughter, Miss Florence Glover, to Arthur Mowbray Randolph Charrington, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. R. Charrington, of Warrenton, Va. The ceremony will take place at 4:30 p. m. Saturday, September 9, at the All Souls Memorial Church, and will be followed by a reception at the Shoreham.

Miss Glover will have as her matron of honor, Mrs. William Schmick, of Baltimore, and as her maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth Mason Fitch Charrington, of Warrenton, sister of Mr. Charrington.

The bridesmaids are to be Mrs. Elizabeth Glover, of Washington; Mrs. Thomas Glover, of New York, sisters-in-law of the bride-elect; Mrs. William Nelson Wilbur, of Warrenton, and Mrs. John Yznaga, of Washington.

Mr. Charrington will have his father, Arthur M. R. Charrington, as best man. Ushers will be William Nelson Wilbur, Alan Jenkins, both of Warrenton; Beverley Randolph Whittle, of Norfolk; Thomas Glover, of New York; Robert Carter Randolph, of Millwood and Ardmore, Pa.; Harrison C. Colket, also of Ardmore, and Frank J. McCarthy, of Richmond and New York.

Page boys will be Warren Irving Glover 3d, of New York, and George Lamman, of Annapolis. The flower girl will be Catherine Leonard, of Annapolis.

Mr. Charrington was graduated from Virginia Military Institute in the class of 1938 and now resides in Philadelphia.

Miss Glover made her debut in Washington and has lived here most of her life. Her father, who was assistant Postmaster General under Presidents Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, has a home at Englewood, N. J., and an apartment at the Shoreham in Washington.

Schalls Return Tomorrow

Thomas D. Schall, jr., son of the late Senator Schall, and Mrs. Schall will return Tuesday from their vacation at Brown Ledge Camp on Lake Champlain. They spent some time with Mrs. Schall's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Wilfert, of Boston. Miss Padget Schall, who has been councilor of dramatics at Brown Ledge Camp, will return with them.

The Schalls recently purchased a home at 33 Clagett road, University Park, and all will be together for the first time since the death of Senator Schall, until Miss Schall returns for her senior year at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York.

Mrs. Winter, Briton to Wed

Mrs. Ralph Seward Allen, of the Hotel Pierre, New York, who is now in Edinburgh, and Harmon Spencer Auguste, of New York, now in England, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Josephine Auguste Winter, of this city, to Capt. Gerald Edward Cane, Royal Artillery, son of Judge Edward Watkins Cane, K. C., and Mrs. Cane, of Dale House, Blanford, Dorset, England. The marriage will take place in the autumn. The couple will live in Edinburgh, where Capt. Cane is stationed.

He is a grandson of Mr. Justice and Lady Cane and of the Surgeon General and Mrs. Tyrell Ross. Mrs. Winter is a great-niece of Commodore and Mrs. Louis D. Beaumont, of Eilenroc, Cap d'Antibes. She was graduated from Rosemary Hall, Greenwich, Conn., and attended schools in France and Switzerland. She made her debut at a supper dance at the Ritz-Carlton in 1929. Her marriage to L. Clark Winter, of New York and Cambridge, Mass., took place here on December 22, 1930, and was terminated by divorce in March, 1938, at Reno, Nev. They have a daughter.

Last Sunday, in Claremont, N. H., Mr. Winter married Miss Gertrude King, daughter of Mrs. Henry Otis King, of Claremont, N. H.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Is It 'Loyal and Fitting' for Married Man to Take Wife's Girl Friend to Luncheon and a Movie?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As one of your constant readers, I am submitting a few questions which I should like you to answer: 1. Is it loyal and fitting for a married man to leave his wife, while on vacation in the West, go into a neighboring State and spend a day in a large city with one of her girl friends, who teaches in the suburbs? (By spending the day, I mean taking her to lunch and to the movies).

2. Is it good form for him to take the girl's telephone number from his wife's address book while the latter is out of the room? 3. How loyal is a woman friend who will meet a married man in a city? (I might add that, in this instance, the wife had not gone with her husband on vacation because of illness in the family. The husband had gone away, at her suggestion, to visit his family and get some rest.) MISSOURIAN.

DEAR MISSOURIAN: It appears that you are attempting, by indirection, to make me party to the nonsensical enterprise of making a mountain out of a molehill. Judging from the phraseology of your questions, you would have me give blanket indorsement to certain unworthy suspicions, and perhaps dour accusations, you have already formulated with regard to your husband and a family friend. I feel that I would be doing you a great disservice in adding fuel to the flame of this incipient domestic wrangle.

The honest, unbiased answer to each of your three questions would have to begin with the words, "Everything depends—." Frankly, I think it is just about as "loyal and fitting for a married man to spend a day in a large city with one of (his wife's) girl friends," as it is loyal and fitting for his wife to kick up a jealous row over the incident. And your own good sense—if any—will have to tell you just how loyal and fitting that is.

As to whether it is "good form for (the husband) to take the girl's telephone from his wife's address book while the latter is out of the room,"—one is immediately tantalized by the counter-question as to why such furtiveness should be necessary. The logical answer would seem to be that the man distrusts his wife's reactions; that he is intimidated by her possessiveness; that he dared not solicit the address from her, or obtain it in her presence.

As for your third question, I do not follow the jaundiced reasoning which leads you to suppose that your woman friend's loyalty is open to question, simply because she joined your husband for luncheon and a movie when he showed up in her neck of the woods on vacation. Since he invited her company (as he undoubtedly did) it seems to me the most natural thing in the world that she would have accepted.

In so doing, she paid you a compliment, I think; the compliment of supposing that you trust your husband as well as her. If she is a normal individual, with a wholesome social outlook, it would hardly occur to her to decline his invitation, thereby imputing to him far-fetched furtive or erotic motives. One supposes that she hailed the opportunity to visit with him for the purpose of learning at first hand all the news about you both.

This much is certain: Whatever the situation, if you hope to keep it under control and the advantage on your side (as against the other woman), you must keep your resentment and suspicions to yourself. Nothing whatever is to be gained, and much may be lost, by putting your husband on the defensive. M. H.

Unconventional Girl Said To Merit No Defense

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After reading your column of August 15—in which you take issue with a mother for condemning a "Magdalene-type" girl who won her upright daughter's beau—I am wondering if you aren't making too much of a heroine of a type who scarcely merits your defense. Have you thought about the effect upon your readers, especially upon the "moderns?"

Perhaps you don't realize how widely read your articles are. Only recently, a friend of mine in Chicago wrote me asking for some clippings of your columns. Heretofore, I have been a fan of yours—such good judgment, such sound advice and such convincing language you have. But as I read the article aforementioned, I felt like shouting, "Mary, Mary, careful now!"

I think a great many people would agree with me in the matter. Next time, why not tell the indignant mother to let the young man go and to give her daughter lots of social advantages and subtle promotion, perhaps; always reminding her that there are still "plenty of good" fish in the sea."

WASHINGTON OLDSTER.

Human Nature Is Cut To Just One Pattern

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The key to every man is his thought, so Emerson said. That being true, as it undoubtedly is, we are where our thoughts have brought us. If we are leading happy and normal lives, the chances are that we have thought those lives into being. If, however, I am constantly sitting in the "scorner's seat" and hurling the "cynic's ban," it stands to reason that those demonstrations are indicative of my thought-molded frustration.

The letter of August 15 from "Mrs. D. E. L." gives us the key to her malign thinking; a picture of an existence that is the reverse of constructive living . . . How can one person presume to set himself so high on a pedestal of conscious virtue as to say: "Look at me. I am sinless. Consequently, I demand what I want. And I want that my daughter should marry such-and-such a man. But see that woman over there. She has sinned. How dare she claim the man I want for my daughter?"

In a varied life, I have known many persons, of differing degrees of virtue, and, knowing them, I have loved them. I have rubbed elbows with the "scarlet woman." I have listened to confidences that might have come from a novelist's pen. And, knowing men and women at their actual worth, I have never been able to draw a very sharp line of demarcation between the good and the bad. Human beings are cut to just one pattern—the human pattern. John Doe may be a jailbird, but as good as gold to his wife. And John Q. Doe may be, to all appearances, a model citizen, but to his wife he may be a cad . . .

Sincerely, E. T.

Good Manners Aid Popularity

HOW PERPLEXING life can seem to the girl who is starting to have dates, to go to formal parties!

Even a movie date brings up etiquette questions. Does the girl go first at the entrance where the ticket-taker stands? How embarrassing to hesitate!

By learning etiquette rules you can avoid such uncomfortable moments. You feel poised, sure of yourself when you know it's correct for the girl to go first at the movie entrance, for the man to follow with the tickets.

Inside the theater, you follow the usher down the aisle, go into the row of seats first. Or, if there is no usher, the man goes ahead to find a seat, but allows you to enter the row first.

At formal dances—how it boosts your morale to know the correct thing to do. You give a charming impression as you first greet your hostess, "Good evening, Mrs. Gregory," and then turn to your beau to have the first dance together, as is correct.

When you are introduced to a man you know it's your place to start the conversation. And you don't make such blunders as refusing to dance with one man . . . then whirling off with another. You wait for a little while.

Another error to avoid is giving an invitation to only one of two people you are talking to. Include both or give your invitation when you are alone with the one you wish to invite.

Tailored Suit, 2 Dark Frocks, Evening Gown Enough for Fall and Winter, Says Mary Brian

Actress Compliments D. C. Women on Ignoring Fashion to Dress Comfortably

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

AT LAST the Washington woman's preference for comfort rather than high style has been vindicated. Too often censured for wearing her light summer cottons late into September, the native now gets plenty of support from an attractive young woman whose sponsorship should carry plenty of authority.

Mary Brian

Mary Brian is the girl in question. Having just arrived here from New England stock engagements to open tonight at the Olney Theater, the screen actress had nothing but admiration for the way the Washington girl combats old man heat. Arriving on a blistering day, she herself was dressed, not in a new fall costume, but like a native Washingtonian, in a cucumber-fresh summer print.

Miss Brian declared Washington women were smarter dressed than New Yorkers or Hollywoodites.

"They're wise to disregard fluctuating fashion dictums," she said. "They're clever in being themselves in simple, sheer, washables in which they both feel and look cool. Of course, I've heard blase New Yorkers question the rightness of wearing cottons in mid-September, but Washington is practically a tropical climate, and whoever heard of wearing black crepes in the tropics?"

Never Give In to Fashion

The pretty little dancer-actress looked determined and serious when she advised, "Never give in to fashion when the season is against you. By the same token, never give in to silly whims of style just because the 'smart' magazines say you must. The bustle, for instance, is a most unbecoming line to nine out of ten women. Most of us have too much upholstery of our own without drawing more attention to it. Also, uncomfortable, silly little hats that look constantly in flight or fright should be avoided by women who haven't sufficient time and money to squander on experimentation."

This all seemed sound advice, coming from a girl who practices what she preached. Her ensemble of pale print silk, protective cartwheel straw and frosty white accessories carried out her point of dressing to the weather.

Miss Brian firmly believes that women should emphasize their own charm rather than that of their clothes. "That's why I maintain that four costumes would carry any girl safely through the fall and winter," she said. "Inasmuch as men prefer women in flawlessly tailored suits rather than in any other one costume, a suit should be the basic outfit. It must be a custom-made or perfectly fitted one and dressed up with original, dainty accessories. Hankies, costume jewels and pretty, sane hats mean so much to a suit."

Two Dark Frocks

"I've hear men compliment the simple black frock so often in comparison to fussy ones that this must be right, too; so let's include two dark ones in our hypothetical wardrobe. After all, nine out of ten women dress to please their beaux, not their women friends. Incidentally, just think back on how much time is spent with husbands or escorts. Most of the time, in fact, so let's make our fourth outfit an evening one on long, simple dinner lines. Dainty or amusing accessories can vary this to suit the particular escorts' color preferences."

Asked if she had any beauty secrets, the creamy-skinned, black-haired actress replied that her's was so simple and inexpensive that she really wanted everyone to know about it. "Milk," she said. "I rely on it—quarts of it from day to day for vigor and health. It strengthens the teeth, gives plenty of vitality which reflects the complexion and the luster of the hair and helps keep nails strong and healthy. And, finally, soap and water, a good cleansing cream for removing make-up, and plenty of hard work to keep the figure supple and young."

Here is the costume that Mary Brian, actress, considers suitable for late summer days in Washington. Opposed to "rushing the season" in heavy fall blacks, Miss Brian has chosen a fresh summer print with light accessories and a broad-brimmed straw hat

Beauty Primer Aids College Girl's Social Success

A beauty "primer" is ready for the college girl. It is a handsomely bound book with a firm snap-clasp, filled with every beauty essential. It will go on week-ends, to football games and many other places, concealing its pleasant beauty secrets between its sturdy covers.

During college days it is all important to establish a simple, correct method of skin care. The beauty primer contains a beauty curriculum the American college girl has helped to plan. Every item in it has been chosen through an extensive questionnaire answered by college girls throughout the country.

The box is divided into partitions and there is a good sized mirror in it. There is a jar of fluffy cleansing cream and a jar of skin cream to use at night. The fragrant skin lotion helps to bring a dewey, fresh look to the skin. The questionnaire revealed that college girls do not know enough about powder foundation, yet there is a universal complaint that make-up does not "stay on." A make-up foundation is an added protection to the skin, shielding it from dust.

The book also contains a jar of cream particularly adapted to young skins, a jar of all-day water-proof foundation cream and an almost porous cream which has the virtue of helping to conceal small blemishes.

A generous box of powder, a lipstick, a bottle of matching nail polish and a large bottle of hand lotion complete the beauty primer.

Wheat Cakes, Comb Honey, Says Edgar Morris

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

A MAN who is as active as Edgar Morris, head of the Edgar Morris Sales Corporation, needs to be well fortified when he starts on his daily round of activities. As he comes from the land of the palmetto and yellow jessamine I expected him to say his favorite food was tender and delicious sweet potato biscuits, flannel cakes or other hot bread.

Edgar Morris

I was not disappointed for he thinks that wheat cakes for breakfast, served with comb (not strained) honey and sausage is the way to start the day. He begins the meal usually with grapefruit, refrigerator chilled, but right now he is eating peaches. Coffee with sugar and cream finishes this Southern gentleman's morning meal.

Mr. Morris is always in the front line when there is a civic job to be done. In 1938 he pushed the Red Cross Roll Call along to success. He is a past president of the Board of Trade and Kiwanis Club. As a director of a bank, a trustee of American University, a director of the Boys Club of Washington, a member of the National Press Club and many other affiliations he is kept busy, besides trying to interest the public in the merits of the equipment he has for sale. But there is always time once a year to take a month's vacation to go deep-sea fishing in Florida, and to attend football games.

The following is a recipe for Wheat Griddle Cakes if you want to assemble your own cakes. There are also a number of splendid prepared flours for griddle cakes on the market.

Wheat Griddle Cakes

Cakes made with sour cream are more tender than those made with sweet milk. Mix and sift 2½ cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon sugar. Add 2 cups sour milk slowly, then 1 egg beaten, and beat all until smooth. Add 1 tablespoon melted shortening. The griddle must be very hot for cooking the cakes, and should cook in 2 minutes without added material.

The Great Lovers

"Where's Leona Pelf this summer?"

"She's down in the country restoring the old Birdhaven place."

"Then she didn't go to Europe?"

"No, she happened to see this old house and she just couldn't resist it. It was just love at first sight."

"I know she's always been utterly fascinated by old houses."

"She said she never was so excited about anything in her life."

"Say, I hear Martha Burlap's left the hotel and moved back home."

"No!"

"Yes, she simply couldn't live without her old silver and things."

"I don't blame her. It would simply break my heart not to have my pewter and my crystal with me. I've never been separated from them."

"I know I'd starve if I couldn't eat off my Spode china."

"I feel just the same way about my Haviland. I can't bear to have it out of my sight."

"Have you seen Maude Steppit lately?"

"No, she hardly ever leaves the farm. You know how insane she is about her horses."

"I can understand just how she feels. I adore horses myself."

"So do I. But I'm simply mad about dogs."

"What really enchants me though are little kittens."

"I'm crazy about birds too."

"You know this may sound funny—but I'm completely captivated by goldfish."

"Who is this woman that's taken the Flitterjig house?"

"A Mrs. Luker from out West. They say she visited the place on a tour and fell madly in love with the upstairs mantel."

"The really enticing thing about that house though is its recessed cupboard."

"What I love is that old staircase."

"Yes, and another thing, I'm simply hypnotized by that mahogany wainscoting."

"What's ever become of Grace Twitter?"

"They say she spends most of her time at auction sales. You know she has this terrible crush on antiques."

"I thought Grace was crazy about settlement work."

"She used to be, but she got over that. She runs around now all the time with this Mrs. Clymer."

"Mrs. Clymer?"

"Yes, Mrs. Roswell Clymer. You know—the one who has that terrible passion for old lace."

"Did Julia Duffer ever go to the World's Fair?"

"No, she couldn't tear herself away from her garden."

"I hear her brother, George, has gone to Reno."

"You don't mean he's going to divorce Marjorie?"

"I guess so. They say she won't come home any more—just stays down in the mountains all the time."

"Down in the mountains! Is there—er somebody down there?"

"No. It's just that's she mad—simply stark staring mad—about folklore."

Today's Health Talk

Plantar Warts

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE QUESTION that comes from the frozen North is "what to do for plantar warts." (Plantar, according to the dictionary, means "Of and pertaining to the sole of the foot").

Two misconceptions seem to obtain about them. One is that they are caused by infection, and are especially likely to be picked up around insanitarily operated swimming pools. The other is that there is some simple and cheap and home-made remedy that will remove them.

Form on Bottom of Foot

They generally form at points of pressure on the bottom of the foot. They appear on both feet and at symmetrical places. There are usually four or five of them, grouped, and often so closely grouped that they fuse.

The cores are soft and pulpy and surrounded by a firm horny ring. The core is characteristic and occurs in no other form of wart or callosity. Over the surface of the core may be seen multiple small black points. These are small blood vessels in which the blood has clotted, and the vessels may rupture, with the result that blood may cover the surface of the wart.

They are exquisitely painful, much more so than even the most painful corn or callosity. They are so painful that in the course of time they entirely disable the victim. In this stage they prevent walking and demand treatment.

Common Remedies of No Avail

It has been suggested that some simple form of home treatment, such as the application of ordinary corn plasters, might work. None of these treatments ever does work completely. Old-fashioned professional surgical procedures, such as cauterization and cutting them out, resulted in painful wounds and scars.

The use of the X-ray and electro-desiccation are the modern methods by which plantar warts may now be cured. This is not so generally known as it should be, Dr. George C. Andrews, of New York, says.

I am sorry that I cannot recommend any other methods, but it is best for those interested to know that, simple as they may seem themselves, trying home remedies on them is just a waste of time.

Manhattan Heat Drives Populace to Movies; Katharine Hepburn Wins Over Snooty Beekman Place Ladies to Wearing Slacks

THE EXCEPTIONAL heat, not to mention humidity, which has staggered this town during the past month, has proven a boon to one lathered group of gentlemen, meaning the ones who operate the gigantic Broadway movie palaces.

Alice Hughes

This is no knock at their attractions, some of which have been superfine, but it is definitely a high compliment to their brand of air-conditioning, which is no less than polar. In fact, the only places in the city which equal the movie theaters' frigidity are the better class of red-leather saloons, or ginmills, and it is obvious that no right-thinking, heaven-bent citizen is going to imperil his soul by going into those devils' dens just to get cool. Well, not more than a million or two, at most.

A red-hot August has certainly given a nudge to the fine old American tradition of movie-going. Spouse Hall and I decided to cool off the other night, and I bulldozed the old fossil into taking me to one of the big Broadway cathedrals. He hates these pretentious arenas, preferring his cinema at the tenth-run dump on the corner. But once inside he was pleased at the chill which blasted him, and amazed at the numbers of like-minded citizens.

The show consisted of Bette Davis' all-time topper, "The Old Maid," plus Horace Heidt's aggregation of music makers and alligators, plus two one reelers, plus a newsreel, adding up to about three hours of chills and entertainment, or rather too much for 80 cents. And when you consider that the house holds some 3,600 and that the best we could do was the last row of the shelf, or approximately two blocks from the stage, you can easily see that the showmen were doing all right. Science has certainly done wonders for us indoors, but it can't seem to cure the tropical blast which fells us as we come smiling out of the icebox!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Kay Swift, the talented young composer, who is in charge of musical matters at the Fair, has been meeting some of the imported cowhands who labor at the Wild West show. Over luncheon the other day, she told me some of the lingo they sling. They refer to money as "gittus," and if they want you to pick up the check for grub, they ask you to "spring them a lunch." In other words, a hungry and busted steer-rassler at Flushing would say, "Inasmuch as I am completely devoid of gittus at the moment, my dear old chap, would you consider springing me a spot of luncheon, old thing?"

The nicest present I've had in months, an overwhelming return for my feeble and unofficial aid in launching a new enterprise, is a gold metal bracelet consisting of the word "thanks" in a pretty script. Words, mottoes and names seem very popular now on all sorts of accessories, arm-bands, necklaces and belts . . .

Katharine Hepburn has succeeded in breaking down the fancy Beekman Place neighborhood along the East River. Swells live there, and so do Katharine Cornell and Miriam Hopkins when they're in town. Katie the Hep usually walks to work at the theater these days wearing beautifully tailored gabardine slacks, and while this is high style in Hollywood, it is seldom seen around here. Kate, however, has won over the Beekman Place ladies with her handsome and comfortable pants—with the result that they are no longer a rarity in that neighborhood . . .

Reducer Should Keep Diet Plans Secret, Thus Avoiding Jibes of Family and Friends

SO, THEY'RE kidding you about your diet? Of course, they are! But sometimes a sense of humor is made to cover a lack of will power. The person who is doing the kidding would like to follow a diet herself. She may be a bit envious that your reducing program is successful.

You are not even safe from ribbing in your own home! The family always treats mother's diet as a joke. For the first few meals they will go out of their way to talk about how delicious this or that is. They will pass you the jelly at breakfast and the fluffy mashed potatoes at dinner, and they praise the delectable but fattening dessert to the skies while you are having your fruit plain.

Your husband will be mildly concerned, too. He probably will start you to wondering about your health. He has heard all sorts of dire things about diets. Where did you come across this one, anyway? Besides, he will finish ominously, he likes you the way you are—so don't overdo it!

Way of Reducing Difficult

Then, it's almost a breach of etiquette to go to a bridge luncheon and decline your hostess' high calorie creamed chicken in pattie shells, or whatever it is. And the way the rest of the guests carry on about the food is enough to make you feel like tossing your diet overboard and taking two helpings of everything.

The way of the reducer is not an easy one. Anything that goes wrong will be laid to your diet, whether it's overwork from doing the family wash or annoyance with the head of the house for being an hour and a half late to dinner.

The best plan would be to keep your diet secret from the beginning. The less other people know about it, the less talk there will be. You can almost fool your family and friends into thinking that you are having your usual fare; your diet doesn't have to be so radically different. One thing you can be certain of: You don't get sick on it! The balanced menus are much more likely to contain all the foods needed for health than the menus of the average person who eats as she pleases.

Dieting to Look Younger

You won't look older on the diet. The people who tell you a diet makes you look older are the overweights who have given up hopes of getting slim. Or, perhaps they have seen examples of too rapid reducing. An average loss of 1 to 2 pounds a week is enough, and it won't make any difference in your appearance, except that you will look younger!

Western Union Employes Here May Walk Out

C. T. U. Demands Pay Increase, 40-Hour Week, Closed Shop

Washington was faced with the threat of a walkout by Western Union employes last night, as hopes to end the two-week sand and gravel strike hinged on a conference to be held today.

Officials of the Commercial Telegraphers Union, an A. F. L. affiliate, asserted that Western Union here refused to negotiate C. T. U.'s demands for a 40-hour five-day week, increases in pay, and a closed shop.

The union called a meeting for tonight at the Hotel Hamilton to ask that the membership give its conference committee the power to call a vote on the question of striking if the committee should be unable to make any headway in bargaining with the company.

Say Arbitration Refused

A union spokesman said the communication company's 750 employes here worked on a 6-day 46 2-3 hours basis, and claimed that the demands for wage increases would benefit the lowest-paid third. The union officer also asserted that the company had refused the C. T. U. offer to arbitrate the demands.

Company officials would not comment.

Establishment of a 44-hour week, and pay increases of about 15 per cent are the chief demands that will be put forth at a conference today between representatives of the strike-bound Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. and the Sand and Gravel Workers Union, union officials said yesterday.

Union spokesmen alleged that their members, who have been on strike for more than two weeks, have worked as much as 72 to 90 hours a week. A minimum wage of $70 a month was paid to watchmen, laborers and deck hands, it was claimed. The average wage was estimated by strike leaders to be $90 a month. Top wages of $185 monthly were paid to captains of tugboats and dredges, they said.

Union leaders admitted the concern put no barriers in the way of union organization nine weeks ago. Instead, they said, the concern made a tugboat and crew available to an A. F. L. organizer, took him down the river to the dredges, and had the hands assemble to hear the organizer, who signed most of the men on the spot.

Adjustments Sought

Corrections will be sought for other alleged inequitable labor conditions, union officers said. Some of those they specified were:

Watchmen, cooks and other boat hands stay aboard the dredges, leaving perhaps only once or twice a month, and are paid no additional pay for being on call at all times.

Employes must often spend from one to two hours getting to their place of work when the dredges are some distance down the river. When the dredges are too far away, employes must stay aboard at nights.

Employes obtain only equal time off for working Sundays, while those who stay aboard at all times must work at any hour when storms or other conditions make it necessary.

Preferred Shop

Union spokesmen said they would seek a preferred shop but did not insist that non-union employes whom they reckoned at 22 out of 214 eligible employes join the union. They said they were asking, however, that the same ratio of union to non-union workers be maintained.

They said that the 44-hour week provision would bring the concern into conformance with the Walsh-Healy and fair labor standards acts. Pending an investigation, they declined to state whether they thought the Smoot company was within the purview of one or both of the laws.

Job Placements In July Set Record

Placements of individuals in private jobs in July totaled 213,029, an all-time record for the month, the Social Security Board announced last night.

July placements, the board disclosed, were 36 per cent above those for July, 1938. Men were placed in 117,532 jobs, an increase of 30.2 per cent over last July, and women in 95,497, a gain of 44.9 per cent.

1,000 Here See Hull Welcome Luxemburg Prince and Son

Ambassador Davies, Holland Envoy and President's Aides Are in Greeting Party; Roosevelt to Give Luncheon Today

Felix, prince consort of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, arrived in Washington yesterday with his 19-year-old son, Crown Prince Jean, for a visit to President Roosevelt before going to the New York World's Fair.

Representing a modest state among Europe's great powers, he was welcomed by a modest crowd of between 1,000 and 1,500 persons, American Luxemburgers and American friends of royalty. The line stretched across the platform, along the front of the station, and down the Union Plaza sidewalks as far as would permit a good view.

A troop of the Third Cavalry lined up in front of the Presidential entrance, and the drum and bugle section of the Marine Band formed under the arcade.

Respectful applause greeted the two visitors as they stepped off the train, the Prince Consort smiling as he doffed his hat in acknowledgment, the young Crown Prince looking rather pale. Travelers, waiting friends, and porters crowded to the railing to watch the party pass between a double line of Bluejackets and Marines to the state reception room.

Secretary of State Hull and Joseph E. Davies, Minister to Luxembourg and Belgium, headed the welcoming party. With them were Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson and Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, the President's military and naval aides; Dr. A. Loudon, Minister from the Netherlands to the United States; Jay Pierrepont Moffat, chief of the European division of the State Department, and Stanley Woodward, assistant chief of protocol.

George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol, accompanied the party from Montreal, with Capt. DeWitt Ramsey, naval aide, and Capt. Charles B. Elliott, military aide to the princes.

The Marine Drum and Bugle Corps played four ruffles and flourishes as the party emerged from the station, and an additional salute came from photographers' flash bulbs. The group then stepped into waiting cars, the Prince Consort with Secretary Hull and the Crown Prince with Ambassador Davies, and moved off down Delaware avenue toward the Capitol, behind the Cavalry escort.

At the Capitol the Cavalry halted in line to give their salute, and the party continued to the White House, behind an escort of squad cars. There the princes were entertained at dinner last night by President Roosevelt, and there they will have an official luncheon today.

The two princes will drive to Mount Vernon at 9:30 a. m. today, to lay a wreath on George Washington's Tomb, and return by way of Arlington Cemetery. They will leave from the Union Station at 3 p. m. today for New York, where they will visit the World's Fair on "Luxembourg Day," next Monday, September 4.

Youth With Stone Found in Front Of Nazi Embassy

Police last night held for investigation a youth who identified himself as Edmond S. Dabrowski, 22, found in front of the German Embassy. They reported he had a large stone in one hand and two newspapers containing accounts of the German-Polish crisis in the other.

He explained the stone, police said, as protection against prowlers, and said he had gone to the embassy in the course of visits to interesting buildings in Washington. Searched at First Precinct Station, he was found to have in his possession Polish credentials, a ticket to Newark, N. J., and 25 cents.

Capital News In Brief

Last Summer Festival

The last summer festival this year will be given in Sylvan Theater tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. by the Players Club of Central Community Center and the Washington Civic Orchestra. The play, Shakespeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," will begin at 8 p. m. after a concert by the orchestra.

Sleeps Away $50, Watch

William L. Harvey, of Vinton, Va., reported to police yesterday that he had gone to sleep on a bench in Franklin Park, waking up to find his pocket picked of $50 and a gold watch missing from his wrist.

Squirrel Bites Girl

Eight-year-old Carol Cross, of 21 Eighth street northeast, learned yesterday about a squirrel which bites the hand that feeds him. Only this squirrel bit Carol's ankle as she offered a choice morsel near her home. She was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Truck Turns Over

For reasons no one could explain, a 5-ton truck suddenly turned over as it passed in front of the Eleventh Precinct police station, 300 block Nichols avenue southeast. Two parked autos were pushed onto the sidewalk.

Driver of the truck, police said, was William P. Burke, 19, of 601 I street northeast, who told police the accident took place so suddenly he couldn't account for it. Owners of the machines crashed into are Wilter E. Jessup, 1201 Tobert street northwest, and Jack Kerge, 2403 Nichols avenue southeast.

Printers Protest School at G.P.O.

The International Typographical Union, now in convention at Fort Worth, Tex., asked the abolition of the Government Printing Office apprentice school, it was reported in Washington yesterday.

The resolution condemning the school, at which about 200 apprentices are being given a five-year training course, was presented by Washington newspaper delegate Walter J. Griggs. Printers have objected to the school, revived after it was allowed to lapse in 1931, on the ground that the work now being done by apprentices should be given to journeymen printers.

D. C. Socialists Decry Pact of Soviet, Reich

Workers Confused, Disillusioned, Avers Party Secretary

The most important result of the Russo-German nonaggression pact is confusion and disillusionment to workers who have looked to Russia for hope, Jack Lawrence, secretary of the Washington branch of the Socialist Party, declared in a public announcement yesterday.

He said that the pact will show the working classes that their hope for peace "does not lie in throwing their support to any government or country," and that only in the united strength of the working people themselves will they find effective means to fight war and fascism.

Calls Poland Doomed

Lawrence said the pact had greatly lessened the likelihood of general war, clearly strengthened balance in Germany's favor so that "England will hardly fight for Poland, whatever her Tory statesmen say."

Poland is doomed by the treaty, the statement said, but "few tears need be shed at this development. Workers do not forget that Pilsudski smashed the free organization of Polish workers, terrorized the Polish people . . . and that the present government of Poland is his rightful heir."

Will Enhance Nazi Power

"Even if France and England honor their obligations to her, they cannot effectively prevent the Nazi armies from overrunning Poland," the statement continued. "The conquest of Poland will greatly enhance Nazi power in central Europe. Hungary, Rumania and Yugoslavia can hardly expect to retain their 'independence' for any length of time."

In removing Russia from any "stop Hitler bloc," the pact has "come as a thunderbolt to those who have thought that the way to stop the march of fascist dictators was through the union of 'peace loving,' democratic nations," Lawrence said.

D. C. Man Dies In Va. Crash; Six Hurt Here

Driver of Car Escapes Injury in Nokesville Accident

A man identified as Milton Burgess, 55, of 910 Ninth street northeast, died yesterday in a Warrenton, Va., hospital, after he had been fatally injured in an auto accident on the Lee highway near Nokesville, Prince William County, Va.

Officials said that Burgess suffered a fractured skull when a tire burst, plunging the car off the road. Anthony Mozynski, of 3818 Twentieth street northeast, who police said was the driver of the car, escaped unhurt. He was released on a $500 bond for appearance at the inquest.

Six persons were injured in traffic accidents yesterday and one man, William Collins, 41, colored, was charged with reckless driving as a result of striking a pedestrian late Saturday night.

Collins, who lives at 1131 Columbia road northwest, was alleged to be driving a car that hit Mrs. Mary Miles, 61, colored, of 2702 N street northwest, as she crossed the street at the intersection of Ninth and S streets northwest. She was taken to Garfield Hospital in Collins' car and treated for a skull fracture and a broken leg. Collins was released on $1,000 bond.

Lloyd Stokes, 32, of 2204 Fairlawn avenue southeast, suffered head injuries and Jack Jeffers, 23, of 25 Cash avenue, Capitol Hights, Md., suffered a fractured nose early yesterday when two cars collided at Hughesville, Md. Both were treated at Casualty Hospital. Jeffers was sent home.

A private car driven by Gilbert Norton, of Suitland, Md., brought Rose Cogswell, 24, of 1715 I street southeast, to Casualty Hospital after an early-morning accident at Silver Hill, Md. Miss Cogswell suffered rib and possible internal injuries.

Later in the morning John Wignall, 29, of Landover, Md., was treated for leg injuries at Casualty Hospital as the result of a second accident at Silver Hill. He was brought to the hospital in a taxicab operated by William H. Sullivan, of 1231 Thirtieth street northwest.

Frank Jackson, 35, colored, of Manassas, Va., suffered head injuries when he fell asleep at the wheel of his car, which ran off the road and struck a telephone pole. He was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Truman Boswell, 58, of Westwood, Md., was at Casualty Hospital yesterday with chest injuries and a possible concussion as a result of an automobile accident in Westwood early yesterday.

'Thief,' Say Police; 'I Own Car' Man Replies (He Does)

Selbert S. Young, of Hampton Manor, Bowling Green, Va., drove home last night in a station wagon which got him into what is often called a peck of trouble.

Police said Young asked them August 19 to find the station wagon and one "One Round" Hogan, who they said was Young's employe. Then, they reported, Young found the vehicle and Hogan, but failed to report the fact to police in Virginia.

Young was taken into custody last night at Twelfth and U streets northwest by Motorcycle Patrolman Charles A. Scott and questioned three hours before he convinced police he wasn't the man he had asked them to find.

Virginia V. F. W. Chief Leaves for Boston

Samuel B. DeVaughan, of Alexandria, State commander of the Virginia Department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, left yesterday for Boston, where he will direct the activities of the Virginia delegation at the annual national encampment. The session opens today.

Statesmen Fear Hitler, Not God, Methodist Bible Class Told

Many Pleas for Peace Heard in Churches, Mingled With Charges of Selfishness And Call for 'Streamlined Religion'

World statesmen are more afraid of Hitler's power than the divine judgment which can be visited upon men, John Brayshaw said yesterday at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, as the European situation drew comment from many Washington pulpits.

Hymns and prayers for peace were heard in scores of sanctuaries, some congregations following the plea of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America that emphasis be placed on international good will and peace.

Superintendent of the adult department of the downtown church, Brayshaw told members of the A. B. Pugh Bible Class that "statesmen should get down on their knees and ask for divine guidance instead of bowing to Hitler."

Selfishness Held One Cause

Governments' selfishness and disregard for the economic rights of its people was cited as one of the main causes of wars by the Rev. Thomas E. Boorde, pastor of the Anacostia Baptist Church and president of the Welfare Federation of America.

"This spirit carried out collectively in the nations of the world has brought us face to face with this terrible prospect of a war from which we are asking God to deliver us," he warned.

Popular Welfare Disregarded

"Governments have been too eager for their place, and a large one in the sun, and too eager to have their share of the world's trade. Absorbed in this race for supremacy the welfare of the people has been disregarded . . . every appeal for assistance for the aged has been refused."

"The only hope for a brotherhood of humanity lies in the recognition of the fact that God is the Father of us all," and that we owe love to all men—not just to those of our own color and creed," the Rev. Nathaniel C. Action declared at St. John's Episcopal Church.

"We shall never withstand the inroads of communism and fascism merely by denouncing their economic theories," said he. "Democracy will only survive as long as our form of government makes possible more abundant life for the masses of the peoples."

Asks 'Streamlined Religion'

The church was blamed as being "partly at fault" for the present crisis by the Rev. Walter G. Borchers, jr., speaking at First Congregational Church, where he serves as assistant pastor.

"I wonder if the church is not partly responsible for the conditions in which we find ourselves . . . whether we have clung too much to dogma, theories and nonessentials, and have failed to adequately meet the needs of men," he asserted, pleading for a "streamlined religion."

Predicts Italy Will Split

Occupying the Eldbrooke Methodist pulpit in place of his father, Marion S. Michael, who will enter Boston Theological Seminary this fall, contended that, in the present crisis, God had not forgotten the world, but that the world had forgotten God.

The Rev. James Miers advised his Fourth Presbyterian worshipers last night that he had predicted the Russo-German alliance frequently during the past decade, in the light of Biblical prophecy. He predicted that Italy would eventually break away from Germany and later head a federation of the restored kingdoms of the old Roman Empire.

The United House of Prayer sponsored a peace parade in the afternoon.

Order of Ahepa Re-elects Chebithes

Providence, R. I., Aug. 27 (AP).—V. I. Chebithes, of Washington, was re-elected president of the Order of Ahepa at the concluding session of the sixteenth annual national convention here today.

He defeated Harris Booras, of Boston, 103 to 85, after two ballots. Constantine Tsagadas, of Detroit, and John Drossos, of Houston, were eliminated after the first ballot.

The convention adopted a resolution congratulating President Roosevelt "on his stand to keep world peace in these days of international strife" and on his latest peace message.

Key and Library Sustain Kendall's Story About Song

Verification of a statement by Messmore Kendall, president general of the Sons of the American Revolution, that Thomas Paine, famous pamphleteer, had written words to the melody of "The Star-Spangled Banner" some 18 years before Francis Scott Key composed his verses, came last night from Col. Francis Scott Key-Smith, great-grandson of Key, and from the Library of Congress.

Kendall reproduced Paine's lyrics in The Post's New Yorker column, of which he is "guest columnist" today.

The words were written under the title "Adams and Liberty," and were drafted by Paine as a campaign song for Adams' election, to fit the tune that later became the National Anthem, Col. Key-Smith said.

The music division of the Library of Congress reported that it owned early printed copies of the "Adams and Liberty" song, and recently displayed a hand-written copy of the song, prepared by Nellie Custis, daughter of Martha Washington.

500 Arrive For Session of Pax Romana

175 Catholic Students From Europe to Attend First Congress Here

Nearly 500 Catholic students from Europe, South America, Canada and the United States arrived at Catholic University last night on the eve of the 18th congress of Pax Romana, international federation of Catholic student groups.

Early arrivals from abroad and about 200 American delegates welcomed a contingent of 125 Europeans on their arrival in New York earlier in the day aboard the French liner De Grasse.

74 Come From Canada

The Most Rev. Henri-Roger Beaussart, auxiliary bishop of Paris, who came with the delegation, declared that "we must prepare the basis of a true peace which we must apply even if a war should come," adding that "Pax Romana works along lines laid down by the Holy Father for peace among the nations of the world."

Among the delegates registered from outside the United States are 70 from South America, 74 from Canada, 40 each from France and England, 20 from Holland, 17 from Belgium, 10 from Ireland, eight from Lithuania, six from Spain, and four each from Germany and Italy.

Catholic action, particularly in relation to universities, will be the main topic of discussion during the week's discussions. Catholic intellectual collaboration between the Americas will share the program Wednesday and methods of student action for peace will be discussed tomorrow.

Compliment to Catholic U.

The delegates will visit the Lincoln Memorial today and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier tomorrow.

At the end of the week the gathering will adjourn to New York City, where further sessions will be held September 3 to 10 at Fordham University. The congress is being held in America for the first time this year, as a compliment to the Catholic University of America in its golden jubilee.

Playwrights' Company Honors Sidney Howard

Founds Memorial Award for Best First Plays; Premiere of Capra's 'Mr. Smith' for Capital; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THE TRAGIC LOSS of Sidney Howard, Pulitzer Prize winner and one of the foremost American dramatists, who was killed accidentally on his Massachusetts farm last Wednesday, has strengthened the determination of Maxwell Anderson, S. N. Behrman, Elmer Rice and Robert E. Sherwood, his friends and partners in the Playwrights' Company, to carry on his splendid work and perpetuate his contribution to the American theater.

BELL

Accordingly, they have established the Sidney Howard Memorial Award for the best first play by an American author produced in New York each season. Carrying with it an annual prize of $1,500, it is hoped that the award will take its place with the two existing major honors in the field of dramatic writing—the Pulitzer Prize and the Drama Critics' Circle Award. Particularly it testifies to the special concern always expressed by Sidney Howard for young talent in the theater and so frequently demonstrated during the two-year period that he served as president of the Dramatists' Guild.

Furthermore, the Sidney Howard Memorial Award will aid in fulfilling one important objective of the Playwrights' Company, as stated exactly one year ago by Elmer Rice in these words: "to create opportunities and provide training for young playwrights, young actors, young directors, who will make the theater of tomorrow."

There should be inspiration for aspiring playwrights in the very name of the award. With a Pulitzer Prize for "They Knew What They Wanted" and such other notable plays as "Ned McCobb's Daughter," "The Silver Cord," "Yellow Jack" and many more to his credit, a record of rich achievement is symbolized by Sidney Howard's distinguished career. His place in the theater will be a difficult one to fill.

There must be something in the rumor that is being bruited about that summer is almost over. Harry Baker, master of black art and District manager of the Wilson Line, contributes the last bit of evidence in a week-end announcement that the season's cruises on the steamer City of Washington will end on Labor Day with special entertainment and farewell celebrations both aboard the boat and at Marshall Hall Park. Prestidigitator Baker confides that the current season has been the best in his company's ten years of operation on the Potomac River. Approximately a half-million passengers have been accommodated aboard the City of Washington, with more than 300 organizations availing themselves of its recreational facilities. The last "Kiddies' Day" of the season will be held on Friday of this week, September 1. In the meantime, the cruise liner will continue to ply the river on its regular daily schedules.

Whatever else may be waning, there is no sign of abatement in motion-picture previews. On Saturday, the Little Theater management unwound Elisabeth Bergner's latest starring vehicle, "Stolen Life," for the drama desks and followed the screening with a perfectly appointed luncheon for the starving scribes. Yesterday morning, at RKO-Keith's, Universal unspooled "The Under-Pup," initial starring picture for Gloria Jean, the 11-year-old primadonna-actress. Today at 1:30, the Warner executives are favoring the guys and gals of the press with an advance peek at Columbia's picturization of Clifford Odets' "Golden Boy," and tomorrow, at the same hour, the Loew interests promise to incinerate the film critics with a preliminary squint at the smouldering Hedy Lamarr and Robert Taylor in "Lady of the Tropics."

Miss Bergner's new film, "Stolen Life," will be broken out for an impatient public at a late preview, following the last showing of "Conquest," at the Little Theater tonight at 10:10 o'clock. In this subject, the star assumes a dual role of sisters who look precisely alike but in character are exact opposites—one gay, fickle and selfish; the other, quiet, sincere and tender. "Golden Boy" will open on the Earle screen Friday, with William Holden, a new star, in the name part, and Miss Lamarr and Mr. Taylor will also blaze warmly on the Capitol's silver sheet beginning the same day. "The Under-Pup," the youthful Miss Jean's introduction to the top flight of screen youngsters—in which she is an underprivileged kid who wins an outing at a swanky girls' camp and sets it by the ears—will be a little more tardy. It will follow "In Name Only," at Keith's.

"Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" for his world's premiere. That, at least, is the way things are beginning to look. While there is a lot of chatter going around that all of Washington has importuned the powers that be at Columbia to open the new Frank Capra production in the National Capital, the fact of the matter is that Director Capra and the studio officials probably have had it in the back of their minds right along that this city is the only logical one in which "Mr. Smith" might be introduced to a waiting world.

If present tentative plans are finally formulated and carried out, the Washington "permeer" probably will be one of the starchiest and most decollete events of its kind in the history of the local cinema.

If "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," it seems almost inevitable that all Washington will go to "Mr. Smith." To see itself as others see it, if for no other reason.

Alexander Korda's production of "The Private Life of Henry VIII" will emblazon the screen at the Mount Vernon open-air, auto theater through Wednesday night, with Charles Laughton starred. This gusty picturization of the amorous escapades of the lustful old Tudor sinner is the picture that made stars by the hatful—Laughton, Robert Donat, Merle Oberon, Binnie Barnes and Elsa Lanchester (Mrs. Charles Laughton) among them. It also revived table manners that must have broken Emily Post's heart. "Henry VIII" will be followed Thursday by "Dead End" and a new 50-minute batch of Walt Disney's color cartoons. Quite a week.

So Sylvia Kaplowitz and her Accordion Septet won the silver mug, awarded by the Ross Jewelry Co., to the act voted most popular in last week's "Going Native" revue, at the Capitol. Sylvia and her gals received a total of 1,548 votes to lead Marjorie King, with 1,130, and Robert Youmans, third, with 1,085. The others, in one of the best revues in the series, were snapping close at the leaders' heels.

Best-Laugh-of-the-Week Note

Left to right—Florence Nash, Phyllis Povah, Paulette Goddard; the three stars, Joan Crawford, Norma Shearer and Rosalind Russell, and Mary Boland and Joan Fontaine, as they will be seen in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Clare Booth's "catty" comedy, coming along in due course to a local screen

An Airplane Turned Sub Does Tricks

Sinking at Sea Is Worked by Levers Instead of Mirrors

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Aug. 27.—We watched that terrible South Sea Island savage, J. Carroll Naish, and his crew of cutthroats drown like rats aboard a sinking submarine.

The day was hot and they enjoyed it. The cameraman was a little miffed, but you can't really blame him. He had to drown, too, and with his best pants on.

In production was the saga of the sarong, "Typhoon," as envisioned by Paramount to display the best points of Dorothy Lamour in Technicolor.

The author of this picture originally wrote a yarn about a handsome man who flies an airplane over the atolls of the South Seas in his search for pearls, and who finds the beauteous Dorothy instead. Just before the picture started the submarine Squalus sank. So did a British sub, and then a French one.

From Plane to Sub

Paramount decided on the spur of the moment to change the airplane into a submarine. So now we've got the handsome Bob Preston scouting around under water for black pearls in his private submarine. He has a native crew and while he's on the shore, making love to Miss Lamour in her sarong, the natives swipe his boat.

They'd just stolen it, when we arrived at the studio's mechanical ocean, and were ready to make a dive.

The menacing Polynesian, Naish—who's ancestors all came from Ireland—was bare to the waist. And we really mean bare.

"They shaved my chest," he said. "They lathered it with a brush and I thought I'd go crazy while they did it.

Naish said the hair was removed for two reasons:

1. South Sea Islanders don't have hairy chests.

2. The censors of the Hays office don't allow hairy chests.

Dyed Chocolate

So when he was scraped clean, the makeup department dyed him chocolate brown, put plugs in both nostrils to make his nose wider, and blacked out most of his teeth, with tar. His plug-ugly crew consisted of a couple of Filipios, an Indian and three Hindus. All were inside the submarine.

It was only half a submarine, built upon a platform, which seemed to float on the surface of a pond, about one city block square. Only it didn't float. It rested upon a platform, which in turn was supported by a hydraulic piston.

There was a man on the sidelines at a contraption which looked like an organ console, except that it had more levers and stops.

The cameraman was inside the sub with the crew. Director Louis King said, "Go."

Disaster Through a Pipe

The man at the organ started pushing buttons. A couple of tons of water dumped out of a pipe from above, through the hatch, and onto everybody in the submarine. Then the floor slanted forward at a 45 degree angle.

Finally the whole works began to sink. The water rose above the hips of the doomed savages, above their chests, and finally above their heads. Bubbles came up.

All the time the cameraman was being submerged, too. He stood, however, on a platform, which kept his head and camera above waters. When he got a flash of the bubbles, the man at the organ yanked all his knobs the other way and the submarine whooshed out of the water.

Naish and his islanders enjoyed the proceedings. The cameraman said he guessed he'd have to buy a new pair of pants.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

By Messmore Kendall
(President General of the Sons of the American Revolution, today's guest columnist for Leonard Lyons.)

Notes to notables who may not have been reading their early American history lately:

GOV. LUREN D. DICKINSON: To fortify himself for his trip to this wicked New York to be inaugurated First President of the United States, George Washington stopped frequently along the road at taverns where he and his party toasted the occasion, the ladies, and each other in hot punch. The party of modern New Yorkers who dressed up in colonial costume and impersonated the inaugural party in a reproduction of the journey from Washington as a ceremony to open the New York World's Fair found their capacity far beneath that of the first President. Two hot rum punches left the moderns all but woozy. History records that George Washington and his friends drank eight toasts in Alexandria.

EDITH KEY HAINES: Your great-grandfather, Francis Scott Key, was not the first to write an anthem to the same tune as "The Star-Spangled Banner." Thomas Treat Paine, the famous pamphleteer, wrote one to the same music in July, 1798, 16 years before Key's verses were written.

It was the most popular song of its day, and it went like this:

Ye sons of Columbia, who bravely have fought
For those rights which unstained from your sires have descended.
May you long taste the blessings your valor has brought,
And your sons reap the soil which their fathers defended.
Mid the reign of mild peace,
May your nation increase,
With the glory of Rome and the wisdom of Greece;
And ne'er shall the sons of Columbia be slaves
While the earth bears a plant, or the sea rolls its waves.

Should the tempest of war overshadow our land,
Its bolts could ne'er rend Freedom's temple asunder;
For, unmov'd, as its portal, would Washington stand,
And repulse with his breast the assaults of the thunder!
His sword from the sleep
Of its scabbard would leap,
And conduct, with its point, every flash to the deep!
For ne'er shall the sons of Columbia be slaves
While the earth bears a plant, or the sea rolls its waves.

Let frame to the world sound America's voice;
No intrigue can her sons from their government sever;
Her pride is her Adams; her laws are his choice,
And shall flourish till Liberty slumbers forever.
Then unite heart and hand,
Like Leonidas' band,
And swear to the god of the ocean and land
That ne'er shall the sons of Columbia be slaves
While the earth bears a plant, or the sea rolls its waves.

VICE PRESIDENT GARNER: George Washington was not as philosophical as you have been over name-calling. During the Revolution Washington received a letter from Lord Howe addressed "George Washington, Esquire, etc., etc." The officer who brought it, questioned by the President, explained that "etc., etc." meant everything complimentary including military titles. With an august smile the commander in chief replied that the symbols might include terms of insults, too, and declined to take the letter. Congress, to whom he referred the question, agreed that he could not even open an envelope so disrespectfully inscribed.

MRS. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT: Your ancestress, Phebe Van Der Bilt, mother of the commodore who founded your fortune, was a social queen in her own way. She is reported to have attended every wedding, funeral and christening on Staten Island where she held sway. She did not spend all her money, however, on social doings but kept her savings in an old clock.

IRENE CASTLE: Martha Washington liked to dance almost as well as you do. Her dancing slippers, worn out at the toes, are on view in Washington Hall at the New York World's Fair. She wore size 3.

REAR ADMIRAL HARRY E. YARNELL: Your defiance of the Japanese war machine recalls a story of Gen. Israel Putman, who commanded at Bunker Hill in the American Revolution. His greatest reputation for bravery came when he walked into a wolf's den and pulled the wolf out by the jaws.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 27 (1935).—You won't doubt that Hollywood has a new star when you see youthful Gloria Jean in "The Under-Pup" and hear her sing. Joe Pasternak, who discovered her, is working on a new story that will star her in the role of a child prodigy. Her entire family, grandpop and all the uncles, the fireman, the lifeguard, the policeman and the sleight-of-hand artist who were in "The Under-Pup" move in on her. The little girl is a definite personality with a beautiful coloratura voice.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Another surprise hit in "The Under-Pup" is the team of two little mischief makers, Billy Lenhart, 8, and Kenny Brown, 7. The two boys had been playing the base fiddle and accordion around Hollywood. Pasternak saw them and promptly put them under contract. Grover Jones wrote special material for them with Billy Gilbert which will also be a feature of Gloria Jean's new movie.

The secret is finally out as to why Orson Welles has been wearing those outlandish chin whiskers. The supposition of many people was that he wanted to appear older than his 23 years. But the real reason, it develops, is that he will use them in his first picture, Joseph Conrad's "Heart of Darkness." Welles plays an American trader in the Conrad story which he is now revamping and modernizing.

We won't be able to call Republic an independent much longer. Looks to me as if they are getting ready to join the major league, what with borrowing the Ritz Brothers from Darryl Zanuck for their "Hit Parade of 1940" and getting ready to spend $750,000 on its production. The next move is a director in a hurry, for this musical goes into production September 15.

William Holden, following his highly successful "Golden Boy," has been borrowed by Warners to play opposite George Raft in "Invisible Stripes," the Warden Lawes story. Floyd Bacon has been assigned to direct.

A line or two: Virginia Pine was fit to be tied when her maid disappeared just a few hours before the dress rehearsal of her stage show, "Thank Your Lucky Stars." But when they called from the receiving hospital that the girl had been run over Virginia forgot everything to dash to her side. She made it back to the Belasco just in time for the curtain . . . The best news I heard last week was that D. W. Griffith, who has been writing and preparing "One Million B. C." will also produce it for Hal Roach. D. W. has forgotten more than some other producers will ever learn.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: A strong report over the week-end that Helen Mack and Marshall Grant were plotting an elopement emphatically denied by the rumored bride-to-be; Darryl and Virginia Zanuck's barn dance even more fun than last year. Steaks, a suckling pig, and sides of beef were barbecued in the open, and after supper everyone tripped the light fantastic in the barn to the tune of Phil Ohman's band and a special rumba orchestra. Over 300 people sat down at the table.

Young Joseph Allen's real heart is a Memphis girl, Adaline Heiskell, who reaches town next week with her ma; Charles Bennett's new novel, "Mr. Hero," rates a Broadway production this fall; Bette Davis spent the week-end at Cape Cod, Mass., where she made her start as an usher in a small theater; the Buddy Westmore-Judy Starr romance is on the rocks and his new glamour girl friend is Rosemary Lane; hope it isn't true that "Gone With the Wind" will be released on Christmas Eve. That's the one night we all like to be with our families.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Trans-Lux

Tramp! Tramp! Tramp! The boys are marching on the other side of the Atlantic, and they are also marching across the screen at the Trans-Lux Theater this week, where Europe's zero hour is so clearly brought to Washington audiences. One-third of the current Trans-Lux news pictorials is given over to vivid mobilization subjects in Poland, Britain and France, while President Roosevelt cuts short his vacation and thousands of Americans abroad speed home.

Also in the news will be found thrilling drills by the Royal Air Force; introductions to the newest of United States air aces, and a much-spangled Mexican military parade. In New York City there is a jitterbug contest that is a wow, while Lew Lehr, in his inimitable manner, covers a British sporting event.

In British Columbia, the Cariboo Gold Mine celebrates its eightieth anniversary, while on the Utah salt flats Cobb breaks all records for speed over the ground. His time approximating 370 miles per hour. Outstanding among the news events is the coverage of the International tennis matches at Brookline, Mass.

In that part of the program devoted to short films there is a breath-taking trip to India. A "Stranger Than Fiction" is the latest and strangest of the shorts to dig deep into unusual hobbies and facts. A "Screen Snapshots" has Noah Beery, sr., as a narrator. Surrounded by an interesting group of the younger movie stars, he highlights with sentimental chatter a series of clips of former stars. For a grand cartoon, there is Walt Disney's beautiful fantasy, "Wynken, Blynken and Nod."

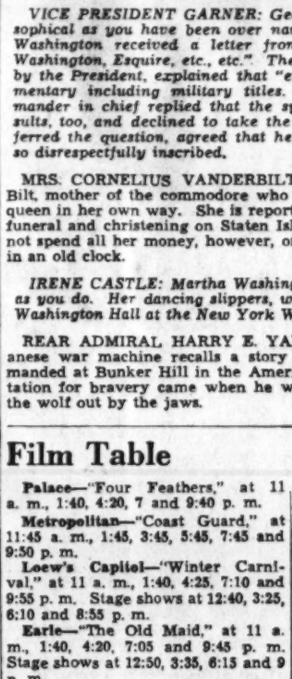
Singing Starlet



GLORIA JEAN,
Universal's 11-year-old "find," who makes her first stellar appearance in the title role of "The Under-Pup," coming soon to the screen at RKO-Keith's

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 27.—Looks as though Charlie Rogers has a find in Linda Ware—judging by audience's reaction to "The Star Maker," she's all set. Has personality, pep and puts those swing numbers over with a bang. Bing was never better. Louise Campbell and Billy Gilbert good. Laura Hope Crews had most hilarious scene in picture, and just wait 'til you see Ned Sparks reading fairy tales to the youngsters! Walter Damrosch was evidently right when he suggested to Director Roy del Ruth that, since he'd been doing it all these years at Carnegie Hall, he knew how to take bows, walk off stage, etc. Did it his way—and good, too.

HOPPER

Fans clamored for Mary Pickford and yelled for Joan Crawford, but she didn't show up. Most stunning gal there was Edith Head, Paramount's own fashion designer—she wore white chiffon and gobs of coral at neck and wrists. Pat Morison stunning, too, in black velvet and ermine. Mrs. Fred MacMurray gave a homey touch with two asters, which she's raised herself, stuck in her hair.

Bing sent print of picture to one little girl who was taken ill and couldn't come. When she recovers, she'll come out here alone, and be squired all over town.

The orphans held my interest more than the picture. It gave them a glimpse of Paradise, but they had to go back to those drab walls again. And I kept thinking of 13-year-old Benny Moreno who only last week hung himself with his belt at the Whittier State School, just a few miles from the glitter that is Hollywood. One foot dragged on the floor, but he didn't let that keep him from the solitude of death.

Before Roland Young left for England, divorce plans had been made and action started. Seems Mrs. Young, daughter of Playwright Clare Kummer, is so fond of music, though not half a dozen people have ever heard her sing, that she prefers that to keeping a happy home for her husband. And for the rest of us, it will be wonderful having "Topper" back in circulation again.

Will wonders never cease? Steen years ago Edna Best fled from our town rather than be separated from her dear husband, Herbert Marshall, even though she was to play opposite the great screen lover, Jack Gilbert. But time marches on, and so have they. And they're marching hand-in-hand for "Swiss Family Robinson," which will be the first picture of the newlyweds, Baker and Towne as producers. Truly, time has a short memory. Wouldn't it be funny if they, as well as in the picture, have a happy ending? Here's hoping.

Time out for Director Al Rogell's birthday on the "Listen Kids" set. He had two huge cakes—one from the crew, another from the missus, who also sent him a wrist watch, her fourth to him. It does everything but think!

Ribber Albert Moran is at it again! Introduced himself to lovely Alice Eyland, Camel cigarette model. Told her he was a reporter from Paris Soir and asked most embarrassing questions. But not till he asked her to assume a Gothic posture did she guess it was a gag.

And it wouldn't surprise me if he's responsible for this jewel: "Nelson Eddy's a descendant of Michelangelo and is following in his footsteps. Learning to model clay animals." Could be wrong, but I didn't think that great artist was the marrying kind?

Atlas

Tex Ritter, in person, and his Musical Tornadoes headline the stage bill being presented through tomorrow night at the Atlas Theater, 1331 H street northeast.

Tex, whose theatrical career had its beginning in the Theater Guild's production of "Green Grow the Lilacs," proved to a packed house yesterday afternoon that he is no more a stranger to the stage than he is to the screen. His act was a star-spangled hit from first minute to last. Ably assisted by his Tornadoes—three boys playing electrically equipped musical instruments—Tex "put across" a group of his most popular songs to "tornadoes" of applause.

A Tex Ritter picture, "Riders of the Frontier"—second half of a double-feature bill—kept the audience additionally Ritter-conscious by its exciting action. The top half of the screen bill is "Daughters Courageous," the Warner Brothers production, with the Lane Sisters, John Garfield and the original cast of "Four Daughters."

A bargain buy for any amusement-seeker.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 27.—Uncle Nick Altrock, who denies that he is ten years older than Plymouth Rock, admits that he was 40-odd when he pitched his last complete ball game in the big leagues. That was in the summer of 1918 and the current war-talk led the old fellow into reminiscing today.

POVICH

"Everybody was talking war those days," said Altrock as he lowered himself into a choice over-stuffed piece in the Nats' hotel lobby. "The draft was wrecking most of the ball clubs, but it hadn't gotten around to old codgers like myself. Anybody who was over 31 and could play baseball a little bit was pretty sure of holding his job in the big leagues. All the young fellows were getting into the war.

"For six years I hadn't been anything but a relief pitcher, and one night Clark Griffith—he was manager of the Washington club then—told me he had to toss me in there as a starting pitcher the next day against Detroit. 'Go as far as you can,' said Griff, 'and I'll have somebody warmed up.'

"That suited me. In fact I was feeling pretty good about it, because I always did think I had a couple of nine-inning games left in the old arm. We were in Detroit, and I dropped into Collins' saloon for a wee drappe to celebrate my come-back. I was as excited as a kid, honest.

"Anyway, I'm feeling so good about it, that I tell Collins I'm gonna pitch the next day. There was a lot of baseball betting around Detroit those days and when Collins tells his pals that I'm pitching they start laying 3 and 4 to 1 against Washington. It looked like a steal, too, because I didn't figure to beat anybody.

The Gamblers Yelled Murder

The next day when the gamblers who had bet on Washington saw me go out to the box, they yelled murder and knew they had been outsmarted by the fellows who had laid the odds. I could hear 'em fighting amongst themselves. Hooks Dauss was pitching for the Tigers, and he was going great guns those days. But I gave those fellows an awful surprise. I went the full distance, picked Ty Cobb off first twice, and licked the Tigers, 3 to 2, in my first start in six years. The wise ones took a terrific beating.

"I thought I was entitled to a few beers that night, and I went back to Collins' place. They had the score by innings and the batteries chalked up behind the bar. One of the customers in the place came up to me and says 'Buddy, I ain't seein' so good right now, what does that score board say?'

"I tells him that it says Washington beat the Tigers, 3 to 2.

"'Who pitched for the Tigers?' he wanted to know, and I told him 'George Dauss.'

"'What's the name of that Washington pitcher on the score board?' 'It looks like Altrock from here,' he says.

"'That's what it is,' I said puffing up. 'It's Altrock' 'Holy smoke,' says the guy, 'I never knew Nick Altrock had a son in the big leagues.'"

Nick Thinks They're Prima Donnas

Nick Altrock, pitching hero of the White Sox Hitless Wonders and a star in the rough-and-ready era of big league baseball, has no great respect for the general run of modern big leaguers. He thinks they're comparative softies, and that the modern pitchers who demand four days rest between starts are prima donnas.

"There are a lot of fine ball players in the big leagues these days," he was saying, "but there are a lot of them who wouldn't be able to take it if they had to play in the old days. I think the old outfielders were better and the old-time pitchers and catchers were better. The modern infielders, though, are classier and they are heavier hitters than the old-time infielders.

"But there is a ball palyer around now who is the best I've ever seen in my 50 years of baseball, and he'd have been a stand-out on any team I ever saw. He's Joe DiMaggio, as good a defensive outfielder as Tris Speaker, a better outfielder than Ty Cobb and more valuable to a team than either one of those fellows.

"DiMaggio's a throw-back to the good ball player of the old days. He can do everything. He's not only murder at the plate, but he's murder when he's playing the outfield, the way he can go and get fly balls. He can throw like hell, and he runs the bases like a streak. He's the best thing in baseball today, and don't let any old timers tell you he isn't one of the greats of all time."

Yugoslavia Loses Both Singles Tilts

Bromwich Defeats Mitic, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2, While Quist Beats Kukuljeric Easily

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 27 (AP).—The Australian Davis Cup tennis forces reached the challenge round against the American team for the second consecutive year today when Jack Bromwich gained the required third win over the Yugoslavians by humbling Dragutin Mitic, 6—1, 6—3, 6—2, at Longwood.

Quist gave the Australian team its first victory against Mitic in Thursday's opening engagement. Yesterday he and Bromwich defeated Franjo Kukuljevich and Franjo Puncec, 6—2, 6—3, 6—3, in the postponed doubles.

Quist also won the Australians' fourth victory in the five matches with a decidedly sub-par performance that routed Kukuljevic, 6—2, 6—3, 6—4, in the finale.

Last-Minute Substitution

Puncec, who gave his team its only victory, a four-set decision over Bromwich last Thursday, had been scheduled to oppose Quist but he asked to be relieved and, since the inter-zone tie had been decided, Harry Hopman, the Australian captain, agreed to the last-minute substitution.

The Yugoslavian ace told Hopman he felt "too tired" to play, but later said his decision to withdraw was based on his desire to protect his grass court record.

While putting his forces into the challenge round for the fourteenth time in Davis Cup history, Bromwich was called upon to do little more than stand behind the baselines and keep the ball in play until Mitic erred.

Receives Little Credit

Only two of the six games that Mitic won during the 70-minute match were on service, the eighth game of the second set and the fifth game of the third.

Bromwich received but little credit for his one-sided triumph from the slim gallery that numbered less than 500. An amazing total of 46 shots driven beyond the lines by Mitic made victory impossible for him. In addition the Yugo-Slavakian player netted 22 more shots and committed two double faults. He did manage to score 16 placements against Bromwich, chiefly because that two-handed-swinger was unwilling to move in from the baseline.

Bromwich made 42 errors and 22 earned points during the 24 games. The only conclusions that could be drawn from his indifferent play were that he either had geared his game down to half-speed o rhad reached his peak and was going down hill rapidly.

Bees Work Double Steal to Score Against Cardinals

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

As Henry Majeski (nearest camera) and Umpire George Magerkurth watch, Catcher Don Padgett, of the Cardinals, tries to tag Buddy Hassett at the plate in the first inning of the first game of a double-header between the Bees and Cards yesterday. Gene Mako Omitted From Pates Selection; Kramer 'Unknown' In Davis Cup Play

By the United Press

Haverford, Pa., Aug. 27.—Bobby Riggs, of Chicago; Frankie Parker and Joe Hunt, both of Los Angeles, and John Kramer, schoolboy king of Montabello, Calif., tonight were named to represent the United States in the Davis Cup challenge round.

Gene Mako, the Californian who last year played in the doubles as America successfully defended the international tennis trophy, was omitted from the team, although he was a member of the squad.

The team, announced by Captain Walter Pate at Merion Cricket Club, where the Yanks next week-end will defend the cup against Australia, is the youngest ever to represent America in the 39-year history of the event. The players average 20½ years in age.

Regrets Mako Is Omitted

"It is a source of deep personal regret that Mako cannot be named to the squad," Pate said.

"The committee, before selecting the team at New York Thursday night, gave long and careful consideration and believes it selected the strongest, best-balanced and most versatile team."

Riggs, who is 21, was seeded second among the Nation's amateurs at the end of 1938. He defeated Adrian Quist for one point as America retained the trophy last year at the Germantown Cricket Club by turning back Australia, 3-2.

Reds Crush Giants, Lead by 5 Games

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 27.—The Cincinnati Reds looked like champions today as they crushed the Giants, 7 to 2, in their series opener and increased their National League advantage to five full games.

One big barrage in the fifth was all that was required of the Reds heavy artillery with Paul Derringer, the famous hay-fever addict, holding forth on a six-hit pitching performance for his seventeenth victory.

Harry Craft started the uprising in the fifth with a 475-foot home run inside the polo grounds boundaries and was followed in rapid succession by singles from Billy Myers and Derringer, a fumble by Burgess Whitehead on Bill Werber's hopper, a sharp single by Edd Joost and Ival Goodman's tremendous three-run homer into the upper rightfield grandstand.

Carl Hubbel had held the Reds to one hit in the first four frames, but was removed for a pinch hitter in the fifth after a home run by Tom Hafey stirred the Giant's hopes anew. Their other run came in the third on a walk to Hafey, Hubbell's sacrifice and Joe Moore's single.

The Reds added another run in the seventh off Manny Salvo on a pass to Werber, a sacrifice by Joost and a single by Goodman.

Besides driving in four runs, Goodman made the day's brightest fielding play by spearing Zeke Bonura's foul drive in the rightfield corner in the second inning.

Stanley Bordagaray was bounced in the seventh for throwing his bat in protest of a third strike called by Umpire Lee Ballanfant.

Bees Defeat Cardinals, 7-2; Lose 2d, 6-5

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 27.—The St. Louis Cardinals dropped a half game in their chase after the league-leading Cincinnati Reds today, splitting a double-header with the Boston Bees, while Cincinnati was walloping the Giants, 7 to 2.

After dropping the opener, 10 to 4, the Cardinals came from behind to win the second game, 6 to 5, but now trail Cincinnati by five games in their late drive for the pennant.

Henry Majeski's grand-slam homer in the third inning with the bases loaded gave Sailor Bill Posedel a comfortable margin in the first game as he coasted to his fourteenth victory of the season.

Galento Declared In Fine Condition For Nova Fight

Summit, N. J., Aug. 27 (AP).—Leon Rains, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission, watched Tony Galento work out today for his bout with Lou Nova in Philadelphia September 7 and said he believed the "two-ton gent" would be "ready even if the fight was tomorrow."

"He appears in excellent condition," Rains stated after Galento had boxed two rounds each with Tom Schenck and Lee Silvers. "I have never seen a fighter punch better and look more vicious."

Abe Feldman, a Galento sparring "regular," was unable to work today, because Galento ripped his left eye open in yesterday's drill. The wound required four stitches. Mickey McAvoy, Brooklyn heavyweight, will take his place, beginning tomorrow.

Calvin Griffith Arrested After Richmond Dispute

Richmond, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Manager Calvin Griffith and Pitcher Gil Torres, of the Piedmont League Charlotte Hornets, were arrested early today on warrants obtained by L. C. Cheek, of Richmond, who charged they assaulted him after last night's double header between Charlotte and Richmond.

C. GRIFFITH

A warrant was issued against Cheek charging him with breaking a window of the bus in which the Charlotte players were returning to their hotel.

Griffith and Torres were released on bond posted by Eddie Mooers, owner of the Richmond Colts. The hearing was fixed for September 8.

10-Run Spree in 8th Ruins Schoolboy's Duel With Ruffing

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 27.—The Yankees, hard after their fourth straight pennant, clubbed aside the Detroit Tigers before 48,000 chagrined fans today, 13 to 3, going on a ten-run spree in the eighth and ruining Schoolboy Rowe's hot pitching duel with Red Ruffing.

Held to five hits over seven innings, the Yanks dealt the crusher in the eighth with seven blows, including a homer by Red Rolfe and Joe DiMaggio's double for the thirteenth successive game in which he has hit safely. It was New York's ninth straight and Ruffing's twentieth victory of the season.

The huge late season crowd adored the Schoolboy, their hero as of old, while he and Ruffing scrapped it out through seven heats with the Yanks finally leading, 3 to 2. Frank Crosetti had homered in the first, and Bill Dickey in the seventh previous to George Selkirk's double and an error by Bill Rogell for a third run.

Singles by Barney McCosky and Roy Cullenbine and a double by Charley Gehringer put across two Tiger runs in the first, but after that Detroit was quite helpless before Ruffing. Pete Fox homered in the ninth for the Tigers' seventh and last hit.

With Hank Greenberg ailing on the bench, the Tigers put young Cullenbine on first base after Rudy York was spiked on the hand in the first when Birdie Tebbetts' snap throw picked Charley Keller off the bag.

U. S. Wightman Cup Team Wins Again, 5-2

HELEN JACOBS

Alice Marble Beats Kay Stammers in Three Sets; Helen Jacobs Wins

By Bob Considine.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 27.—With Alice Marble and Helen Jacobs supplying a kind of lady-like 1-2 punch, the American Wightman Cup team today defeated England and retained the international trophy for the ninth consecutive year.

Miss Marble, squinting beneath the peak of a blue jockey's cap, beat off the dogged challenge of England's glamorous southpaw, Kay Stammers, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4, in one of those grimly feminine contests that left the young ladies, and the polite gallery of 5,000, bloody well limp.

Miss Jacobs then won the fourth and deciding triumph of this seventeenth annual Anglo-American match by hacking her way through Ruth Hardwick, 6—2, 6—2, mainly by dint of a venomous chopstroke that hissed when it hit the turf.

Also in Doubles

And then, for good measure, the doubles team of Miss Marble and Sarah Fabyan, world champions for three straight years, volleyed and smashed their way to a 7—5, 6—2 victory over Miss Stammers and Mrs. Freda Hammersley in the final match of the series—and won a motherly hug from plump, gray-haired Mrs. George W. Wightman, donor of the cup and captain of the American girls.

Miss Marble's hard-won singles victory over left-handed Kay came opportunely after Valerie Scott, a newcomer to the English team, had sprung the surprise of the meeting by trouncing Mrs. Fabyan, 6—3, 6—4, to tie the series at two vic-

Tennessee End, Holy Cross Back Lead All-Stars

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP).—Bowden Wyatt, Tennessee end, and Bill Osmanski, Holy Cross fullback, were elected cocaptains of the college all-stars today for their game with the New York Professional Giants in Soldier Field Wednesday night.

The squad went through a light drill this morning, but there was no contact work, which phase of the practice was concluded yesterday with two practice games. They will work out tomorrow night under the Soldier Field lights.

Dudley-Burke Win Hagen Tournament

Long Shots Write Golf History at Midlothian With Scoring Record

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Big Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, and Billie Burke, of Cleveland, a pair of 37-year-old veterans, wrote golf history at the Midlothian Country Club Course today by winning the Walter Hagen anniversary tournament with a final rating of "plus 19." It was the most decisive best ball tournament margin in the game's history, and a new scoring record for that type of event.

Routing a field of 14 other nationally known players, Dudley and Burke won "going away" in a tournament decided on the most plus holes won.

In today's final 36-hole program of the four-day 126-hole grind, they defeated Dick Metz and Byron Nelson, the National Open champion, 3-up during the morning, then smashed back this afternoon with a 6-up triumph over Tommy Armour and Jimmy Thomson.

Raiph Guldahl and Harold McSpaden finished second in the battle, which involved eight two-man teams, winding up with plus 6 in the standings.

New Mark

The winning team played the most brilliantly consistent golf of the tournament, playing the 126 holes, with its par of 497, in 447 shots, 50 under par. Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament bureau manager, said this set a new mark for best-ball scoring.

Dudley had the low medal round of the tournament, a 64, this morning, while he and Burke twice had best-ball rounds of 62, nine under par.

In winning first money of $1,150,

D. C. Softballers Seek Endurance Mark Tomorrow

That newest and apparently inescapable craze—marathon softball—has finally found its way into the District, and at 5 o'clock tomorrow morning Roosevelt Boys Club and Johnson-Powell athletes will seek a local endurance record at Roosevelt Stadium.

The players intend to carry on until it is too dark to continue. Food will be brought them and they will eat on the run.

Johnson-Powell's lineup will include playground director Phil Fox, Freddie Simmons, Dick McHale, Sam DiBlasi, Bud Mosser, Pat Hurley, Jim Kehoe, "Jiggs" Farnsworth, "Bits" King and John Fanning.

Representing Roosevelt Boys Club will be Alvin Oremland, "Jello" and Toddy Lagos, Les and Blaine Wicklein, Totts Miller, Doug Hodge, Jumbo Pearlman, Hymie Perlo, Charlie Mehrling, Dick Jorstad, George West, Charlie Batchelder and "Buck" Clatterbuck.

Nats Halt Two Browns Rallies, Win Double-header, 8-7 and 4-3

Ken Chase Winner In Eleven-Inning Nightcap Battle

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

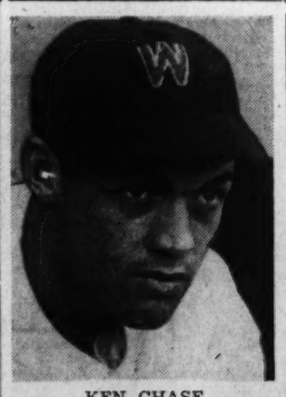
St. Louis, Aug. 27.—The Nats spent a hectic but highly satisfactory afternoon in St. Louis today. Snuffing out last-inning rallies by the Browns in a pair of uproarious ball games, the Washington athletes achieved a double triumph by scores of 8 to 7 and 4 to 3.

The second game endured 11 innings, and, like the first, the Browns had the tying and winning runs on base when the Nats happily negotiated the final out to the dismay of 3,436 customers.

Dutch Leonard and Ken Chase were the winning pitchers, Chase holding the Browns to one run for ten innings, in a duel with Roxie Lawson. But Leonard achieved his fifteenth victory of the season in the face of one of his worst-pitched games for the Nats.

Leonard won his game when the Browns, with the tying and winning runs on base in the ninth inning, obliged him with a queer bit of base running that cost them the ball game.

Leonard actually was batted out of the box in the ninth inning of the first game when he made motions as if to dissipate the 8-to-5 lead he carried into the inning. Four singles in succession—by Christman, Pinch-hitter Solters, Heffner and Sullivan, sent two St. Louis runs across the plate and put the tying run on second before Leonard could get anybody out.



KEN CHASE

Leonard Pounded In Opener; Appleton Saves Game for Griffs

Pete Appleton relieved him at that point and a sacrifice fly by McQuinn moved the tying run to third. Laabs was then intentionally walked, and what followed was a rare piece of baseball.

Harland Clift sent a long fly to Sammy West in deep centerfield, and after the catch Heffner broke for the plate. But Roxie Lawson, a pinch runner, also attempted to advance to third after the catch, and the upshot was that West's throw to Lewis caught Lawson before he, Heffner, crossed the plate.

Heffner's tying run was thus nullified because Lawson had been doubled up at third, and the Browns walked dejectedly from the field.

Similiarly, Ken Chase carried a 3-run lead into the last inning of the second game, and all but lost it. In the eleventh inning, the Nats suddenly opened with a long-range attack on Lawson and rushed three runs across the plate to break a 1-1 deadlock. After George Case drew a walk, Sammy West doubled down the rightfield line, and after Cecil Travis was purposely passed, Jimmy Bloodworth doubled into the leftfield corner, to score the second

Brownell Wins Suburban Invitation Over Greiner, O'Brien

18th Hole Birdies Decisive

Manor Youngster Wins 1 and 2 Up; Skinker Victor In Fourth Flight

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pikesville, Md., Aug. 27.—A pair of opportune birdies on the eighteenth green crowned 20-year-old Bobby Brownell Suburban Club Invitation champion here today, as the Manor Club youngster climaxed one of the finest tournaments in this section in years with two great victories, over Otto Greiner and Donald O'Brien.

In the morning semifinal the Duke University student, hauled out his best game to defeat Greiner, the pride of Baltimore, 2 up, with his timely birdie on the eighteenth, and before a gallery of nearly 2,000 in the afternoon he turned back Donald O'Brien, the former Hoya golfer from the Country Club of Virginia, 1 up.

Makes Nine Birdies

Playing two of the finest rounds of his career, Brownell scattered nine birdies over the two rounds, and saved two of them for the winning punch on the eighteenth hole, both from 8-foot putts. He was 68 in the morning and 69 in the afternoon, three under par for the day. That was official scoring.

The morning match between Brownell and Greiner was the highlight of the tournament, and although the latter was a heavy favorite in the eyes of the tournament followers, his golf couldn't match Bobby's sub-par stroking, and it was only through great comebacks on Greiner's part that the match was carried to the eighteenth hole.

Birdies on the first and sixth holes, both where he knocked his approach shots dead to the pin, and pars on the short holes, where Greiner went over, gave Brownell a 3-up lead on the ninth tee. He lost the fourth to Greiner's birdie, a ten-foot putt around a partial stymie.

Drops 20-footer

They halved the ninth in birdies, Greiner dropping a 20-footer after topping his second, and Bobby's lead was cut to two when he three-putted the eleventh green. Otto dropped another 20-footer for a halve on 12, jumped a stymie with an 8 iron to halve the next, and again earned a great halve on the fourteenth, when after going out of bounds off the tee, he hit a great second shot and chip to halve in par fives.

Two down and three to play, Otto eanned a 40-foot birdie putt for a win on the sixteenth, and when Bobby chipped poorly from over the green on the short seventeenth, Otto missed a chance to halve the match when he was short on a 2-foot putt. He played the last hole poorly and Bobby canned a birdie putt for good measure.

Meanwhile O'Brien came from behind to square the match with Gene Bruning on the eighteenth, when the latter three-putted after the gallery's applause for Greiner's long putt upset O'Brien on his backswing and topped his drive. They both dropped sizable putts to halve the nineteenth, and O'Brien sunk a 20-footer to win the par 3 twentieth.

Goes Behind Finally

Brownell was down for the first time when he trapped his second shot on the third hole of the final against O'Brien, but he got it back on the next hole when his opponent was over the green and missed par. Bobby lost the fifth and seventh to pars, and birdied the sixth to turn one down.

The new champion holed a chip shot from the side of the hill near the tenth green to even the match, but went one down by three-putting the twelfth from 10 feet. They halved the fourteenth in birdies, and the match was again even when O'Brien trappe dhis tee shot on the sixteenth. Bobby scrambled to a halve on the seventeenth, hitting his short iron over the green, and then shared the birdie on 18 as O'Brien's 10-foot bid missed the cup.

Earle Skinker, Columbia's junior champion, won the fourth flight by defeating Eddie Leonard, unattached, 3 and 2 in the semi-finals, and Carl Snook, of the Catoctin Club in Frederick, 1 up on the twentieth hole of the finals.

New Fighting Spirit Carries Betty Jameson to Golf Title

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 27.—Bashful Betty Jameson, a lovable kid shooed away as a general nuisance the first time she ventured on a golf course, had her dad in an embarrassing spot today.

Betty, quiet salesgirl in the women's sport shop of a department store, is the new women's national golf champion.

And her dad was the fellow, who, some eight years ago on a little, sand green course at Dallas, sent Betty home for getting in the way as she tagged along behind his foursome.

But dad had a change of heart and finally did the natural and expected thing—bought Betty some golf clubs.

Wins Texas Title

Six months later the pretty, auburn-haired lass, a born golfer, won the Texas Women's Municipal Championship. A star was born—a 12-year-old girl who lashed shots with the power of a man. Her dad became Betty Jameson fan No. 1 and today, when he can get away, he breathlessly follows her every competitive match.

Only 14 in 1934, Betty gained her first national recognition by winning the Southern amateur title. She lists 1935 as a black year—one without a major triumph—but in 1936 she started the drive that has carried her to the throne.

Known to own power, a great, smooth swing and the will to learn, Betty, until 1936 lacked the essential competitive spirit. She had too much of an "everybody's pal" compl . golf critics said, and seemed actually to dread beati..g a friend.

Professional Tod Menefee, of the San Antonio Country Club turned psychologist and came up with a new Betty Jameson.

"It was hard making over Betty's attitude," said Menefee. "She is, by nature, genial and easy going. I wanted her to retain all that—except in tournament play. She finally learned that golf is a competitive game where everyone looks out for himself."

Came the summer of '36 and the new Betty won the Texas title in a match with Mrs. Dan Chandler, then Old Mexico champion and one of the Nation's ranking players—and Betty's particular idol.

Betty has never relinquished that championship.

Billy Houghton, Capital's Club champion for the past two years, started his title defense by winnng medal honors in this year's tournament with a 74, 71—145 total for the 36-hole qualifying rounds.

Houghton was a total of eight over par for the first nine in the two rounds, going out in 40 on the first day and 38 the second, but he was three under on the return trip, with a 34 and 33 for the five over par total.

George Molloy, of Capital's crack two-man team duo of Houghton and Molloy, was next with 73-74, 147, while S. T. Gradoville was third with 74-75, 149. Frank Whhite, one of the favored players, was on the verge of not qualifying with an opening 83, but rallied with a 73 to make the grade with strokes to spare.

Tommy Studes won the club caddy championship with a 3 and 2 victory over Howard Shannon in the 36-hole final. Studes was three down at the half-way mark but squared the match at the 27th, and won on the 35th green.

KENWOOD

G. R. Hopkins defeated Don Miller, 2-up, in the finals of the George Diffenbaugh Trophy Tourney at Kenwood. The finalists were even at the ninth hole, and Hopkins compiled his winning margin on the second nine. He received one stroke handicap.

Dr. J. A. Thurston defeated R. W. Castle, 6 and 5, in the second flight; Perry Winston scored over R. H. Weightman, 2 and 1, in the third; L. M. Shade defeated C. M. Dinkins, 2 and 1, in the fourth flight finals, and P. J. Mitchell won the fifth over J. C. Foulis, 1-up.

J. W. Harvey, jr., and Fred A. McCrary won the two-man sweepstakes event with a gross 77, 14 handicap for a net 63. F. Trice and G. H. Buckingham were second with 81-17—64.

MANOR

A. S. McDougald and D. R. Hutchison continued their upset path in the Manor Club two-man team championships with a 1-up victory in 20 holes over Jack Stadler and Mack Myers. H. L. Lacey and George Messing defeated H. A. Neff and E. Westhaven, 2 and 1, in a semifinal match, and will meet Bobby Brownell and Merrell Whittlesey for the other final round berth.

Three tied at 73 in the blind bogey event, Alton Pratt, with 76-3—73; H. K. Beck, 86-13—73, and R. L. Hinckle, 93-20—73. R. C. Pettingill was next with 88-12—76, while E. C. McGowan, 89-12—77; George Jones, 87-10—77, and J. B. Crosby, 97-20—77, were all in the prize list.

INDIAN SPRING

Dave Mastbrook played well below his 10 handicap to win the Tribal Bowl at Indian Spring with a 73-10—63. Mastbrook, who had a 70 in the Board of Governors play last year, paired nines of 36 and 37 for his best tournament performance this season.

J. D. Boger was second with 74-8—66.

CONGRESSIONAL

V. P. Simmons continued his winning performances in the Congressional Club tourneys by tying Elden McFarland in the match play against par event, each finishing two up.

Three tied for second, F. W. Evans, P. Blouke and W. T. Hayes, all one up on par.

BELLE HAVEN

Defending Champion Turner Smith set the early qualifying round pace in the Belle Haven Club championship with a 75, three over par. Medal rounds will continue through the week.

Dick Marshall defeated Ted Rutley, 2 up, in the finals of the Gazette Trophy event. Marshall took advantage of five handicap strokes.

ANACOSTIA

Anacostia's strong public links golf team defeated Laurel of Richmond, 11-7, yesterday on the local course, despite losing all three points in the first match when visiting pro Joe Hohens and his amateur partner, J. Ford, scored over Anacostia's top amateurs, Calvin Loving and "Reds" Tanner.

The Anacostians have three matches lined up for September, playing host to East Potomac on the tenth, repaying the visit to Richmond on the seventeenth and playing off the double tie with Rock Creek on the twenty-fourth, at Anacostia.

Anacostia, 11; Laurel Park, 7

Calvin Loving and "Reds" Tanner, Anacostia, scored 0 points to 3 for Joe Hohens and Ford, Laurel; Dunc Hasleton and Don Keoch, Anacostia, scored 3 points to 0 for Langford and Bradshaw, Laurel; Charles Tawney and Orville Brown, Anacostia, scored 1 point to 2 for the Kuper brothers, Laurel; Ray Miller and Earl Bean, Anacostia, scored 2½ points to ½ for Denby and Shipp; Clarence Riley and Dutch Melcher, Anacostia, scored 3 points to 0 for Jim Sweatle and Ernie Hauser, Laurel; Tom Smith and P. E. Smith, Anacostia, scored 1½ points to 1½ for Layton and Beinlich, Laurel.

BEAVER DAM

Paul Nicholson won the Beaver Dam caddy championship, defeating Preston Smith, 5 and 3, in the 18-hole finals. The new champion, Smith was defending titleholder, had a 78 for the round, including three birdies.

Pirates Split Twin Bill With Dodgers

Pittsburgh Errors Give Brooklyn Opener, 3-2; Rally Takes Nightcap

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 27.—After Pittsburgh Pirate errors had helped the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 3-to-2 victory in the opener of a twin bill today, the Pirates came back to take the nightcap, 9 to 5.

Pittsburgh punched out eight runs on six hits off Al Hollingsworth and Vito Tamulis in the fifth inning of the nightcap. Cy Blanton, making his first start for the Bucs since April 23, hung up a triumph, although the Dodgers rallied for three runs in the ninth, sparked by Ernie Koy's homer.

Arkie Vaughan, of the Pirates, was the hitting hero of the day, with four singles in the second game and a triple and a single in the opener.

Brooklyn made only 6 hits to the Pirates' 10 in winning the opener. Mace Brown twirled for Pittsburgh, while Fred Fitzsimmons and Vito Tamulis shared the hill for Brooklyn. Fitz received victory credit.

Macks and Beckman Blank White Sox, 2-0

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 27.—The Chicago White Sox, fresh from three straight victories over the Boston Red Sox, fell before the lowly Philadelphia Athletics today, 2-to-0.

Bill Beckman cut the pale hose down with seven hits while his mates utilized six hits off Thornton Lee and Ed Smith for the decisive two runs.

Bob Johnson walked in the seventh and scored on singles by Frank Hayes and Bill Nagle. The other run came in the eighth on Dario Lodigiani's double. Wally Moses' infield grounder and Lamar Newsome's single.

It was the White Sox's fourth defeat in their last 14 games.

Indians Beat Bosox Twice; Feller Wins

Bob Hurls 1-0 Opener; Homers Help Hudlin Take Nightcap, 5-3

By International News Service

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 27.—The Cleveland Indians took both games of a double-header from Boston 6-0 and 5 to 3 today.

Bob Feller registered his 19th victory of the year in shutting the Red Sox out and allowing 4 hits and striking out 6. Denny Galehouse for the Sox gave up seven hits and also struck out 6.

The Indians scored their lone run in the eighth inning of the opener when Bob Feller, first man up, singled and was forced by Lou Boudreau, Bruce Campbell, then tripled, scoring Boudreau with the only run of the game.

Home runs by Ray Mack and Hal Trosky aided Willis Hudlin in besting Freddie Ostermueller in the second game. Mack's homer tied the game in the seventh and Trosky's 21st home run came with two on in the eighth. Joe Vosmik clouted a homer for the Sox with no one on in the ninth.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 27.—The sound of his cracking bone-joints still echoing through the Smokies, Johnny Vander Meer, the deflated boy wonder of baseball, rejoins his Cincinnati teammates tomorrow—and within a day or two will try once again to recapture the muscular fluency that made him great.

CONSIDINE

Since August 16 he has been under the care of Dr. Lee Jensen, of Chattanooga, who is rapidly establishing himself as the Bonesetter Reese of modern times. Jensen, the first important baseball find discovered by Joe Engel since Yussel fought off two squadrons of moths and unlatched Clark Griffith's pocketbook, is the staff doctor of Mr. Engel's Lookouts, but his clinic is becoming a mecca for the halt and the limp of baseball. He cured Vander Meer's ailing left shoulder a few years ago, when Johnny was with Nashville, and in desperation the kid recently asked to be sent back to him in the hope of similar aid.

This time a year ago Vander Meer had pitched two successive no-hit, no-run games, albeit at night. He had won nine straight and been credited with beating the American Leaguers in the All-Star game, by reason of his one-hit pitching for the first three innings.

Reds Convinced Vander Meer Is No 'Flash in Pan'

Today Vandy has won five and lost eight. He hasn't won a game outside of Cincinnati. He has appeared in 25 games, sometimes for only an inning, pitched 123 innings and walked 89 men. He was wild a year ago, but he had a way of coming through with a strikeout that took the pressure off him. This year he hasn't been able to save his scalp.

He got off to a bad start in spring training this season. A case of flu and a recurrence of appendix trouble he had when he was 10 years old, set him back more than a month in his training. He tried to catch up too fast and hurt his shoulder. Jensen has done all there is to do, muscularly, for him. This fall it is expected that Vander Meer will be operated on to remove what is called a remnant of his appendix. The Cincinnati club is convinced that his blazing streak through the first half of 1938 was no flash in the pan, but rather a suggestion of what the kid can do when he's right.

Tony Galento is thinking (really) that his task against Lou Nova will be considerably lightened—when they meet September 7 in Philadelphia—by reason of Nova's strange streak of stubbornness. Lou has a curious habit of intently listening to the advice of his handlers, concerning the strength of an opponent, and then going out and perversely daring the opponent to hit him with his best punch.

Nova Has His Own Philosophy About Galento

He did this notably in the Baer fight when, winning as he pleased by straight boxing, he chose to slug it out wfth Baer, took some terrific rights to the chin and looked for a time on the verge of a knockout.

Nova has his own philosophy about this quirk. He believes his destiny will steer him into the heavyweight championship and that every whim that bubbles up in him must be followed. Psychologically he is pretty sound, thanks to a concrete chin. There is no doubt that when Baer saw him absorb those haymaking rights, and come back for more, it discouraged Max terrifically. Lou's handlers think he will be tempted to try the same stunt with Galento, that is, dare Galento to hit him with the left hook which staggered Joe Louis and put the champion on the floor. Either that or Lou will attempt to out-hook Tony, a master hooker.

Tony is heartily in favor of all this and though he knows as well as you do that Lou, not himself, is the fellow who is undergoing the build-up for a 1940 match against Louis, Tony is confiding to everyone within earshot that he'll knock out Nova, mainly because of Nova's strange yen for wanting to win by braving the forte of an opponent, instead of capitalizing on his weaknesses.

Nats Stop Late Brown Rallies, Sweep Double-Header, 8-7, 4-3

and third runs of the inning and establish the Nats in a 4-1 lead.

Then the Browns reared back and threatened to knock Chase from the box. He was in trouble from the start of the inning. Clift led off with a triple against the centerfield wall, and then followed a two-bagger by Solters against the rightfield fence, and a two-bagger by Glenn against the same fence.

Two runs were already across, and the tying run on second, with none as yet out. Chase was in deeper trouble when he threw late to third base on Christman's bunt and the Browns had the tying run on third with none out.

But from that point, Chase was magnificent. He slipped a third strike past Pinch Hitter Harshany, and then retired Heffner on a grounder to Lewis, who was able to hold Glenn on third base. Chase then gave Hoag a deliberate walk to fill the bases, and pitched himself completely out of trouble by causing McQuinn to ground to Travis.

In the first game the Nats pounded Kennedy and Mills for 17 hits, with Leonard giving up 13 to the Browns. George Case found the opportunity to steal his forty-fourth and forty-fifth bases. In the second game both clubs collected nine hits, but Chase was pitching six-hit ball when the game went into extra innings.

That second game was a scoreless affair until the seventh, when singles by Taft Wright and Cecil Travis netted the Nats a run. The Browns got it back promptly when Lawson tripled into the rightfield corner with two out and scored on Heffner's single.

That first game was in the possession of the Browns for five innings, Dutch Leonard's presence on the mound for the Nats caused 1,000 citizens of nearby Auburn, Ill., to pay their way into the park and do him honor, but the Browns showed no respect whatsoever for the Dutchman, who had been presented with a shotgun in pre-game ceremonies.

They ran up a 4-1 lead on the Nats in the first five innings, although Leonard was not guilty of three of those runs. A wild throw to second base by Buddy Myer on a double-play grounder paved the way for two St. Louis tallies in the first inning, and the Browns picked up another run in the second when Buddy Lewis cut loose with a three-base wild throw on Vernon Kennedy's bunt.

George Case led off the third inning with a single and stole second, scoring when Taft Wright doubled off the right center wall, for the Nats' first run. But hits by Grace and Harshany netted the Browns a legitimate run in the fourth and they thus improved their margin to 4-1.

A bit later came the sixth. The Nats batted around, nine of 'em, and pasted Kennedy for five hits in the inning, scoring four runs and taking a 6-4 lead.

Alphonso Smith Beats Ritzenberg in Federal Net Final

Maryland U. Star Beaten, 7-5, 6-1, 6-4

Victor's Unorthodox Style Hinders Allie; Goldsmith Captures Consolation Singles

C. Alphonse Smith, former co-holder of the national junior doubles title and a newcomer last year to District tennis, climaxed his first start in the Government championships yesterday by dethroning Allie Ritzenberg as singles champion. He defeated the University of Maryland star and Public Parks titleholder, 7—5, 6—1, 6—4, at Potomac Park courts.

Ritzenberg put up a game fight against his foe's tricky, unorthodox game in the first set, holding leads of 3-1 and 4-3 before Smith turned on the pressure. In the second set, however, he went to pieces, and his defeat was sealed. Two questionable decisions by the linesmen appeared to upset the temperamental youngster.

In the consolation singles final, Harry Goldsmith defeated Mariano Erana, 8—6, 6—1.

This afternoon at 4:30 Smith and Ritzenberg will team in an attempt to reach the final round of doubles at the expense of Herb Shenkin and E. Ramey Donovan, who upset Mather and Judd in the quarter-finals. The winners will meet Sam Hayes and Ray Stocklinski for the title.

Presentation of prizes to winners and runners-up in singles and doubles and to the consolation singles winner will be made after the doubles final.

Jimmy Lake, Carnation Kid, To Aid Police

Will Be M. C. at Field Day September 4, but He'll Get Assistance

Jimmy Lake, famed wearer of the white carnation, smoker of big cigars and fight announcer extraordinary, yesterday was selected by Lieut. John J. Agnew to act as master of ceremonies for the big Metropolitan Police Field Day at Griffith Stadium Labor Day.

Lake, modestly declining to monopolize the emceeing, requested Lieut. Agnew to ask local radio and entertainment leaders to assist him, and the following consented to lend their vocal bit: Tony Wakeman, WOL; Gordon Hittenmark, WRC; Lee Everett, WMAL; Arthur Godfrey, WJSV; Art Brown, WOL; Walter Johnson, WJSV baseball announcer; Jimmy Mulroe, well-known tap-dance instructor, and Johnny Chevalier, man-about-town.

The following have been asked to serve on a board to settle any disputes that may arise during the day, as if there won't be enough police around the premises: A. J. Bergman, C. U. athletic director; Mike Martin, Nats' trainer; Joe Turner and Goldie Ahearn, local ustic promotorial team; Max Farrington, G. W. manager of athletics; George Lenz, G. W. trainer; Fod Cotton, C. U. football coach; Matt Twomey, boxing manager and conditioner; Bottle Cox, umpire, and Dr. John Fitzpatrick, Columbia University dean and boxing enthusiast.

Turner May Build Elevated Ringside Seats for Thursday

All set to take care of the exodus of fans to Griffith Stadium Thursday night to see Nanjo Singh meet Ernie Dusek, Promoter Joe Turner yesterday announced he plans to build elevated ringside seats which virtually assure the wrestling fanciers the comforts of home.

At the same time, he said that Bronko Nagurski, one of the two score and six wrestling champions now in circulation, may be selected to meet the winner of the Singh-Dusek affair.

Nagurski has the distinction of being the champion recognized by the National Wrestling Association. His manager, Tony Stecher, spoke encouraging words into Turner's ear yesterday regarding the possibility of slipping into town for another big outdoor brawl.

Coast Angler Wins U. S. Casting Crown

San Francisco, Aug. 27 (AP).—Milton J. Craft, San Francisco, won the all-around championship of the National Association of Scientific Angling and Casting Clubs today. He turned in the highest average for eight events of the tournament.

Cy Wheeler, Seattle, annexed the all-around accuracy bait title.

Craft was in a four-way tie for second place in the ⅝-ounce accuracy bait event today with a score of 96. Wheeler took second place in the ⅝-ounce accuracy bait event.

George Cook, of Washington, D. C., finished way down the list, with scores of 89 for the ⅝-ounce and 90 for the ¾-ounce accuracy bait casting.

Michigan Tars Retain Eight-Meter Crew Title

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 27 (AP).—Chicago Yacht Club sailors representing the Lake Michigan Yacht Racing Association today retained possession of the 8-meter crew championship of the Great Lakes and the Barthel Trophy.

Flanagan Scores Slam In Detroit Swim Meet

Peter Fick Dethroned as Leading U. S. Sprint Swimmer; Ralph Adds '880' to Mile And '440' Events; Misses World Mark

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 27.—Ralph Flanagan, of Austin, Tex., completed his fourth straight slam of the distance events; Peter Fick, of New York, was dethroned as America's leading sprint swimmer, and five tiny athletes from far away Maui, Hawaii, won the team championship as the senior men's National Amateur Athletic Union outdoor championships ended tonight.

Flanagan, 22-year-old student at the University of Texas, won the 880-yard free style tonight to go with the mile and 440-yard titles he captured earlier. He has not lost a national championship race since 1935, when he was beaten in the 440-yard event in Detroit after having won the mile and the 880.

Flanagan was shooting at his own world record of 10 minutes 7.6 seconds, but he failed by 4.3 seconds. He won by 30 feet over Kiyoshi Nakama, of Maui, the new 220-yard free-style champion.

Kiefer Retains Title

Fick's downfall in the 100-meter free style was not surprising because he barely survived the trials this afternoon. Tonight the six finalists hit the finish mark within a yard of each other and after a long conference the judges decided Otto Jaretz, 17-year-old Chicago High School student was the winner. Fick could do no better than fifth.

Adolph Kiefer, of Chicago, retained his 300-meter individual medley championship and failed by only two-tenths of a second to equal his national record of 4:02.

Alexander House Community Association, the Maui team, was the first to represent Hawaii in the national championships since 1928 and became the first organization to take the title from the mainland of the United States.

Maui Scores 32 Points

Maui scored 32 points, three more than the Detroit Athletic Club total.

Earl Clark, Ohio State University athlete from Miami, Fla., won his first major swimming title when he captured the 10-meter platform diving championship.

Clark dethroned Elbert Root of Detroit, winning by a point and a fraction from the defending champion. Clark trailed Patnik in the three meter springboard event Friday. The latter did not compete in the high board event. Lieut. Frank Kurtz of the United States Army Air Corps, March Field, Calif., was third.

In trials of three other events today defending champions earned the right to participate in the finals, but one—Pter Fox, of New York—just got in and appeared in danger of losing the 100-meter free style title he has held for the past five years.

National Rifle Meet On Today

4,108 Entered in 12-Day Tourney

By the Associated Press

Camp Perry, Ohio, Aug. 27.—The 1939 national rifle and pistol matches became the largest competitive event on America's sports calendar today as 4,108 marksmen registered for the championship events, which run through September 9.

The matches probably present more competitors, on the same grounds at the same time, than any other sports feature.

National Rifle Association officials, sponsors of the matches in co-operation with the War Department, launch the big matches Monday. The camp population of 5,891 all live in tents, using Army issue blankets, cots and other equipment.

During the next two weeks 102 events will be run off. This week features small-bore and pistol championships.

Each State will have both a civilian and National Guard team of ten in each of the .30-caliber events next week, in addition to teams from each branch of the armed service.

Apostoli, Lee Fight Tonight In Pittsburgh

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 27.—There are plenty of fights on this week's national boxing program, but the only one of importance matches Fred Apostoli, of San Francisco, and Glen Lee, of Omaha, Nebr.

Apostoli, recognized in some States as middleweight champion, will go ten rounds or less with Lee at Pittsburgh tomorrow night. Apostoli's claim to the title will not be at stake.

Best of the other fights is a ten-round heavyweight encounter at Detroit Tuesday night between Buddy Knox, of Dayton, Ohio, and Dave Clark, stablemate of Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis.

Atlanta Man Named to Lead Grid Officials

Phillips Elected President of Southern Group

By the Associated Press

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 27.—The annual school of the Southern Football Officials Association closed today with the election of G. M. (Pup) Phillips, of Atlanta, as president.

Phillips succeeds R. A. Carrington, jr., of Lynchburg, Va. While a site was not announced for next year's school, it was strongly indicated the group would gather at Raleigh, N. C.

H. W. Scholar, of Greensboro, N. C., was elected vice president, and A. G. Hutchens, of Lake Wales, Fla., was renamed secretary-treasurer.

Selection of officers followed a joint assembly of coaches and officials and a written examination on mechanics of the game.

All controversial points in the rules were gone over by the officials and coaches at a session attended by Walter R. Okeson, chairman of the National Football Rules Committee, and W. A. Alexander, Georgia Tech coach and rules chairman of the Southeastern district.

The coach-official group reached definite agreement on controversial points in the rules which will be applied uniformly throughout the 11 Southern States. Particular stress was given the new rule covering the widely discussed "screened" pass play.

Secretary Hutchens said many angles of the "screened" pass were discussed but that he could not at this time give out any of them for publication.

Addressing the officials on "Serious Injuries—What An Official Should Know and Do," Dr. Sammy Sanders, of Memphis, Tenn., said, "We, as officials, can assist in preventing such injury (paralysis) by simply refusing to allow any player that has received a blow, rendering him helpless, to be moved until he has demonstrated the power to use his arms and legs."

The following were named to serve on the board of directors along with the three officers: R. M. Frew, Winnsboro, S. C.; J. E. Burghard, Jackson, Miss.; I. S. Ervin, Birmingham, Ala.; L. L. McMasters, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Rumsey Taylor, Princeton, Ky.; GeGorge Compton, Ashland, Va.; Paul Menton, Baltimore, Md., and Charles Clement, Memphis, Tenn.

fifth-ranking player, is only 20. Parker, seeded eighth, played on the United States Davis Cup team in 1937, when he defeated Charles Hare, Great Britain, to clinch the series and bring the trophy back to this country. He is 23. Kramer, national schoolboy champion, is only 18, but ranks fifteenth nationally and first scholastically.

Pate announced the team shortly after receiving word that John Bromwich, of Australia, had defeated Drago Mitick, of Yugoslavia, 6—2, 6—3, 6—3, at Brookline, Mass., in the interzone finals to give the boys from Down Under the right to meet America in the challenge round.

Riggs and Parker will play in the singles against the Anzacs, Pate said, but he did not disclose which of the four members of the team would be paired in the doubles. He does not have to name the doubles team until one hour before the event, but indications were that Parker would be teamed with Hunt for this important match. This would leave Kramer, the only member of the team without cup experience, as a spare.

Pate announced that the draw would be held Friday morning at 10:45, with selection of the singles opponents for the first day's matches.

The challenge round opens next Saturday at 2 p. m. with two singles contests. The doubles will be played Sunday and the two final singles matches Labor Day.

The challenge round will mark the tenth time in which America has faced Australia in the finals. Donald Budge, red-haired son of a California laundry wagon driver, won two of the three points as the United States turned back the Anzacs last year. Budge, however, became a professional last winter and will be missed sorely in this year's event.

tories for each team. The Scott girl played like a veteran, chasing nimble Mrs. Fabyan miles back and forth across the court.

As a result of her triumph Miss Scott put considerable pressure on Miss Marble, who was about to take on Miss Stammers in what had suddenly become the vital match of the day.

But Alice was up to the task, after a shaky start which saw her lose the first set. The tall blond American girl found her aim a little garbled at the start. She was missing the lines by inches with her mannish drives, and the hard-hitting English girl saw to it that Alice never got fully set for a shot, by keeping the ball low and well angled.

Alice began to roll in the second set, clubbing the ball deep and hard to swing the Stammers girl out of court, and then dropping the fuzzy pill just over the net. Her serve got harder and truer, and she came through with 13 placements as she took the set, 6—3.

A 10-minute rest and a cold shower revived the English girl, but Alice had the range by now and, nudging the ball like a Budge, she raced to 5—3.

Georgetown A. C. Wins Twin Bill

The Georgetown Athletics colored nine took both ends of a double-header from the Monumental All-Stars, of Baltimore, yesterday at Green Valley, Va., by scores of 4-2 and 5-2. Frazier, Georgetown pitcher, won his nineteenth game in the nightcap, and it was the Athletics' thirty-eighth victory in 41 starts.

Billie Burke, Ed Dudley Win Hagen Event

Finish 19 Up in Upset Triumph; Are 50 Under Par

Guldahl and McSpaden, starting today's play in third place, lost a hole this morning to Paul Runyan and Horton Smith but came back this afternoon to defeat Nelson and Metz 2 up and shove the Nelson-Metz team into third place with a plus 4 rating.

Hagen and Gene Sarazen made a gallant finish, winning 4 up from Shute and Harrison in the final 18-hole duel to take fourth place after having been last at the 118-hole mark this noon. Armour and Thomson finished fifth, defeating Hagen and Sarazen 3 up this morning but coming to grief against Dudley-Burke this afternoon.

Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta, who tied for the Inverness Best-ball Tournament title with a rating of only 6 plus, finished in a tie for sixth place with Paul Runyan and Horton Smith. Picard and Revolta defeated Shute and Harrison this morning and broke even with Runyan and Smith this afternoon.

The final 126-hole standings in the tournament, which commemorated Hagen's first National Open victory 25 years ago on the same course:

Dudley-Burke, plus 19; Guldahl-McSpaden, plus 6; Nelson-Metz, plus 4; Hagen-Sarazen, minus 3; Armour-Thomson, minus 5; Picard-Revolta, minus 6; Runyan-Smith, minus 6; Shute-Harrison, minus 9.

Joey Archibald, Jeffra Fight MayDo$20,000

Turner-Ahearn Report Brisk Advance Sale For Sept. 11 Bout

Tickets for the world's featherweight championship fight September 11 at Griffith Stadium between Champion Joey Archibald and Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore, go on sale Wednesday at Promoter Joe Turner's arena, Fourteenth and W. streets northwest.

A large delegation of Baltimore fans have made reservations, and Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn expect the title fight to draw $20,000. The fight will be the main attraction of the convention of the National Boxing Association, which is to get a portion of the gate receipts.

Turner said that demand for reservations already has been unusually brisk and that tickets probably will be placed on sale at downtown stores next week. Tickets probably will be placed on sale in Baltimore at the Century Athletic Club, 513 East Baltimore street, and at the E. & R. Shop.

Max Waxman, manger of Jeffra, former world's bantamweight champion, who also is putting up the $10,000 guarantee Archibald's manager, Al Weill, demanded, entered a large complaint with Ahearn and Turner yesterday over the price scale.

Turner and Ahearn expressed their pleasure at getting Benny Leonard as the referee in glowing terms.

Houston Poloists Win National Tournament

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Huisaches polo team, of Houston, Tex., won the national intercircuit championship today, swamping the Chicago Oak Brook team, 13 to 4, in the tournament finals.

The Texans scored 12 goals before allowing their opponents a single tally, annexing the title for the third straight season, a record matched by no other team in the history of the meet.

Cards Take Two

The Vienna Cardinals defeated Petworth A. C., 10 to 1 and 5 to 4, yesterday in a double-header at Vienna, Va.

Black Yankees Win and Tie In Stadium

Beat Eagles, 2-1; Tie Grays, 1-1, in Negro National League Play

Before a crowd of 4,500 the Black Yankees, of New York, playing in the Negro National League series, yesterday at Griffith Stadium defeated the Newark Eagles, 2-1, in the first game of the doubleheader, and tied the Homestead Grays, 1-1, in the nightcap, a 7-inning called game.

The Grays had a one-run lead up to the seventh, in the opener, with both Williams and Manning pitching masterful ball. In that inning Zolly Wright and Bill Washington hit safely, the latter's tap sending Wright to third.

Barker struck out, and Washington was caught between first and second but recovered the initial sack on a close decision. Then Miller smashed a hot one over second to score Wright, and Bergen's texas leaguer which followed drove in the winning run, Washington crossing the plate standing up.

In the second game, as the Grays and Yankees were tied 1-1 in the sixth, "Jelli" Jackson, local sandlot product, beat out a hit which rolled slowly to short, went to second on Bankhead's hot liner and to third on Spearman's fly to right field. Parker's long fly to right brought him home in a hustle after the catch.

Zolly Wright drove a scorcher at Jackson, which provided the most spectacular stop of the day, in the Yank's half of the sixth. He went to second on Washington's safe bunt and to third on a sacrifice bunt by Barker. Miller brought him home on a liner to deep second, to tie the count, 1—all.

Klein Tavern Wins National City 'A' Title

Easily outclassing Read's Pharmacy, Klein Tavern yesterday won both ends of a double-header and the National City League sandlot championship in Section A finals on the South Ellipse. The scores were 6-1 and 15-4.

Brothers shared pitching honors for Klein, William Liggitt pitching nine-hit ball in the opener and Boyd Liggitt giving up only four hits in the nightcap.

Rosenfield Hurls 2d Shutout in Two Days for Tru Blu Ten

Plaza Beaten In District Title Series

I. B. M. Eliminates Taft-Burroughs As Plaisted Hurls 2-Hit, 2-0 Victory

Abe Rosenfield, bespectacled Tru Blu ace, yesterday continued to singlehandedly pitch the Beermen to the District softball championship by recording his second 6-0 shutout victory in as many days. Lanky Abe allowed Plaza Wine and Liquor only three hits.

In the second game of the double-header at Ballston Stadium, International Business Machine eliminated Taft-Burroughs from the round robin series as Gus Plaisted pitched a two-hit, 2-0 whitewashing. The defeat was Taft-Burroughs' second in two days.

Rosenfield who blanked International Business with four hits Saturday was in even better form yesterday as he moved along without trouble and behind an ample lead. His mates clinched the game as early as the first inning when they scored a run, but to make it certain they shoved over five more in the third.

The other game was a real pitchers' duel between Plaisted and Ingrassia, of International Business Machine, who gave up only three hits. International Business scored its runs singly in the fifth and sixth innings.

At The Post

Dear Al:

We should be glad that we live in a country where the bugle call means only that the horses are coming out for another race at Marlboro. Spent Sunday morning at the Huntington Farm in company with Alan (Mowlee) Clarke, John (Aneroid) Manfuso and three of the nut-brown little Manfusos just home from camp. After a tour of the barns and a rest under one of Clarke's big shade trees, we switched on the car radio and headed back to town. Over the air came another of those important "war" bulletins. Then and there began the usual "will there be a war" conversation. Little Zelma Joan reminded her daddy of a movie short they had seen. Perhaps you saw it. About a doctor who predicted the Black Plague which swept Europe. It seems he forecast the plague and then went to work on a formula to combat it. When the plague came he was hard at work. His wife and two children died, but later this doctor's medicine helped wipe out the plague. The doctor, however, grieved so much at the loss of his family that he decided to leave his profession and devote the remainder of his life to forecasting coming events. He retired to a monastery where he worked on a book. This book, according to the movie short, predicted the discovery of America, the London fire, the crowning of a number of kings and the World War. The doctor also wrote that in 1940 Paris would be destroyed by some man-made lightning out of the sky. Zelma Joan doubtless was impressed by this prognostication for she was very thorough in her review of the movie. Last night, the Art (WOL) Browns swung around to the "war" and I repeated, as closely as I could remember, the story of "Doctor Human Crystal Ball." Art listened attentively. When I had finished, he reached for his glass and said earnestly, "Say, you know, I would like to have that guy's Marlboro selections for tomorrow.

BILL.

First race—Red Wrack suffered a slight injury and was scratched last week. I understand there was nothing serious and this one is ready to crack down. Nanci's Best has closing ability and should be a keen factor. Busy Bird turned in a neat victory at the first asking over this course and should be prominent.

Second race—Needmore will have the fashionable apprentice, H. Allagier, to do the saddle work and gets in with light weight. I see no reason for mistakes. Aster Princess showed a liking for the track last out. Gets a light assignment and draws a good rider in Root. Blue Prelude has been kidding and is about due for a good race.

Third race—Schley Buck belongs with this company and is as fit as hands make horses. If Palumbo rides, get in line at the pay-off window. Small Change should go well under 113 pounds in this field and may cause the top one trouble. Son o' Sting is underrated and deserves attention.

Fourth race—I'm going to take a shot at a good price. Prince Turley's ailing legs have been patched up. May break in front and stay there. Cornwallis has a bit of class but may go out at the turns. Tuleyries Lin is dangerous. Blablah's race to Royal Business Saturday must be considered but she is a doubtful starter.

Fifth race—Lyde is stepping up after winning for the Benningites at a healthy price. Goes a longer route here but I'm going to string along. Brooke Herod toyed with a good field last out but seldom runs two alike. Trixie Lass has speed and is a threat.

Sixth race—Schley Goree ran last Saturday and showed a fair effort in a shorter race. Goes a route today and may be the right one. Best Policy loves the track. Chalotaur gets in with a feather assignment and should go well.

Seventh race—Beacon Queen gave me the signal that she has reached top form. I understand Root will ride and I look for a winning effort. Elsie J. showed a good race and then a poor one. Deepwick belongs in the money circle.

Steel Output Holds Steady During Week

Operating Rate Remains at 63.5 Per Cent of Capacity

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 27.—For the first time since early July the steel industry's operating rate failed to climb last week, holding steady at 63.5 per cent of capacity, says the magazine Steel. Seven districts were unchanged and slight production variations in five other areas were virtually balanced.

"Reports from several points indicate ingots are going at once to finishing mills, without accumulation of raw steel," the publication adds. "In some instances bookings are less than production, but backlogs are sufficient to insure a continuation of mill activity at about the present level."

Operations held firm last week in the Youngstown district at 55 per cent, Birmingham 75, Pittsburgh 56, Wheeling 88, New England 70, Detroit 82 and St. Louis 57. The Buffalo district advanced 2.5 points to 60.5 per cent, Cincinnati 3 to 63 and Eastern Pennsylvania 1 to 44. Cleveland dropped 3.5 points to 80 per cent and Chicago 2 to 56.

Scrap Prices Firm

"Scrap prices are firm and advances in the East reflect buying for export," Steel observes. "The composite for steelmaking grades advanced 8 cents last week to $15.50, highest since the middle of October, 1937. Japan is said to be seeking to buy as much as 500,000 tons on the Atlantic seaboard."

The magazine reports further that: Revision of differentials on hot-rolled alloy steel products, effective October 1, increases base quantity from 3 to 20 tons. Effects of increased automobile output are felt in many lines. Plates are furnishing "considerable tonnage" for future rolling, maritime commission ships placed since July 1 accounting for 65,000 tons. Railroads, despite financing problems, are buying rolling stock to meet urgent needs.

Aircraft Plants Are Ready to Make Quick Deliveries

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, stated today that the nation's aircraft plants were geared to a production capacity sufficient for quick deliveries on all future orders, at home and abroad.

"The large domestic and foreign orders received during recent months," he said, "have enabled our manufacturers to operate their plants on straight line production methods.

"The heavy orders which have been flowing into the industry since last year, involving hundreds of planes to an order, have so speeded up production that the plants are not only making deliveries on time, and often ahead of schedule, but they can handle considerably more business."

He estimated that the industry was operating at about 65 per cent of potential capacity "without adding materially to factory space or installing much new machinery."

Jouett said accelerated production should result in a total of $108,000,000 in scheduled export deliveries for 1939. He estimated that to mean about $40,000,000 in wages for shop employes, accounting for half the industry's total factory pay roll.

Windsor, Wife Will Go Home if War Comes

Cap D'Antibes, France, Aug. 27 (AP).—Sources close to the Duke of Windsor indicated tonight that in the event of war, he would return to England, taking the Duchess with him.

These sources said the British government was keeping him informed on the latest developments. The former King was said to be already slated for an important wartime job.

Too Many Holidays Here? Babson Asks the Question

President's Shift of Thanksgiving Date May Be Opening Gun to Encourage Buying and Help Retailers

By Roger W. Babson

Chicago, Aug. 27.—The newspapers have been discussing both seriously and facetiously, President Roosevelt's changing of the date for Thanksgiving Day. An editorial in a New England paper closes with this sentence: "It would be historically amusing if Franklin Delano Roosevelt finally lost favor with the American populace, not because of his unorthodox political and economic policies, but because, 'by gad, he changed the date of Thanksgiving Day!'"

The problem, however, is much deeper than appears on the surface. This may be the President's opening gun to help retailers. For some time his Brain Trust has known that one of the most vital steps in creating employment is to encourage buyers. Merely raising wages does not accomplish this. Increased wages means higher prices for goods without a material change in the number of workers. The answer lies in making it easier for people to buy goods by encouraging retailers in various ways. Hence, a discussion of the date of Thanksgiving Day may open up a very important line of approach to the unemployment problem.

Too Many Holidays?

This discussion may develop into a consideration of holidays in general. Are there too many holidays at present? Are they properly distributed? Should not our holidays come either on Saturdays or Mondays? This is the way that the English—the greatest merchandisers in the world—have arranged their holidays. I sincerely hope that Governors will not hastily ignore President Roosevelt's proclamation without taking the matter up with their merchants. Retail trade—not historical societies—are the life blood of American business. They are entitled to much more consideration in any discussion of our unemployment problem.

There are, of course, a dozen causes of unemployment. To the statistician, however, one of the most potent reasons is that the number of people trained for production, versus the number of people trained for distribution, is out of balance. Formerly it took many more persons to produce an article than it required to sell it. Gradually this ratio has been cut down so that today many more are needed to sell an article than to produce it.

Merchants Handcuffed

Public authorities, however, have shown no disposition to favor the seller over the maker. Labor unions have temporarily made it more attractive to work in a shop than in a store. Taxation per dollar invested is much lighter on the manufacturer than on the merchant. The final handcuff has been to restrict the hours at which clerks may work in stores and other distributing agencies to the same schedule as the hours of those engaged in manufacturing.

The main purpose of the wage and hour bill was to give higher wages and to create more jobs. Neither total wages nor total jobs have been increased. Merchants are observing the law. However, in order to pay more wages they are hiring fewer people; and, in order to shorten hours, are keeping open fewer hours for business. Therefore, when the great need of today is to sell more goods, stores are open fewer hours, salesmen are making fewer calls, and even the facilities of our postoffices and telegraph systems have been curtailed. If we want to get out of the present mess all distributors must work harder and longer.

Suspend Wage and Hour Law

Unemployment will be solved only as more people are put to work. More people will be put to work only as more goods are sold. More goods will be sold only as distributors keep their stores open longer hours, work more efficiently and are exempt from burdensome legislation. Then, and then only, will all groups have money with which to buy goods. This means that the Government should remove the "ball and chain" on all merchants today; that the taxes on storekeepers and their sales should be reduced; and that the wage and hour law should be suspended for those engaged in selling until production and distribution are again in balance.

Meanwhile, August business is holding steady. My Babsonchart Index reads 97 per cent compared with 97.5 per cent for July and 87.6 per cent for August of 1938. During the past week I have been working my way through the Middle West. Merchants, manufacturers, and workers with whom I have talked out here confirm the statistics I have previously received from the Middle West. Business is brisk in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky and Illinois. These six States, together with Wisconsin and Minnesota, are rated as "gold" or excellent States on my sales and credit map.

Labor Fires Rekindled

Right now activity in the Midwestern motor cities is temporarily stalled. Assembly lines, in a few plants, however, have already started wheeling off their 1940 models. Labor troubles are the one sour note in the business setup in the Middle West. People are sick and tired of labor rows in the automobile business. It's time that Mr. Green's and Mr. Lewis' private war was killed. It's time that these gentlemen were stopped from putting the public, not only here but in all sections, "behind the eight ball."

Babson Will Report On Far Eastern Area

Mr Babson is off on a long trip to the West Coast, Hawaiian Islands, Japan, China and the Philippines to gather first-hand information and observations for his weekly business column.

For the next few weeks, therefore, his stories will come from Hololulu, Tokyo, Shanghai, Manila, etc. With his wide experience in observing and reporting, these articles should be a real contribution to the readers' knowledge of the Pacific area and its troubles.

Salisbury Ruling Results in Boom In Mail Boxes

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 27 (AP).—A ruling of the Postoffice Department has brought a little business boom to Salisbury and a new headache to the city fathers.

Postmaster Maude R. Toulson announced that she had been instructed that mail could be delivered only to homes that had street numbers and mail boxes.

There was a sudden run on mail boxes, with customers taking any box available in the city's stores.

Then the city hall was deluged by telephone calls from residents of the city asking for house numbers.

There came the headache, for the numbering system has not been revised for many years and a change in customs and land use has brought division of once large lots. Temporary numbers such as 101½ and other fractions were assigned to meet the emergency.

Purcellville Gardeners Meet at Leesburg

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 27.—Mrs. C. A. Seaton, president of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs, was the guest speaker at a meeting of the Purcellville Garden Club held this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Clara Briggs in Leesburg.

Winners in the exhibits were: Original and artistic, Miss Mary Simpson, Mrs. J. P. Hatcher, Mrs. Clare Briggs and Mrs. H. M. Hoge; miscellaneous, Mrs. F. W. McComb, Mrs. O. L. Emerick, Mrs. H. L. Gregg and Mrs. M. L. Herndon; roses, Mrs. Briggs, Mrs H. M. Hoge and Mrs. Franklin P. Wilson.

V. M. I. Alumni to Fete Marshall at Richmond

Richmond, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—The V. M. I. Club of Richmond will be dinner host Tuesday night to one of the institute's most famous alumni, Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States Army.

Gen. Marshall, who will be here in connection with the American Legion State convention, will address some 150 V. M. I. alumni at the dinner.

Seek Unmarked Graves

Orange, Va., Aug 27 (AP).—The Major John Hoge Chapter, National Society of Daughters of 1812, is conducting a search for unmarked graves of men who served in the war of 1812. Markers will be provided by the Federal Government for all graves discovered.

Virginia Church To Hold Annual Home-Coming Rite

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 27.—Buck Mountain Episcopal Church at Earlysville, will hold its annual home-coming service Wednesday, beginning with celebration of communion at 11 o'clock. The services will be in charge of Archdeacon W. Toy Mason, of this city.

The Preservation Association will meet in the afternoon, with W. B. Huff presiding.

The home-coming service endeavors to commemorate the clergy who have ministered in the church since 1747, and the congregations.

The Rev. Robert Bosher, rector of Grace Church, Stannardsville, will preach at the 11 o'clock service. In the afternoon there will be brief addresses by visiting clergy. Joseph Entwistle is in charge.

Berkeley Springs Rushes School Building

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Aug. 27.—The $200,000 high school building here is not 80 per cent completed, but will be ready for use when school opens September 5, school officials said yesterday.

The auditorium will not be completed, but the 16 classrooms and other facilities will be ready, they said.

Visitor Loses Dog

TEDDY WILLIAMSON, 8, of Pittsburgh, Pa., realizes it's tough to lose your dog and, what's more, it's particularly hard luck when dog and master are from a strange city. Teddy is visiting his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Omer Williamson, of 3308 Eighth street northeast. Teddy says Wiggles looks like an Airedale but is smaller.

Sheriff Balks Jail-Break At Salisbury

3 Prisoners Halted In Hand-to-Hand Fight in Cell Block

By the Associated Press

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 27.—Sheriff Marvin Gordy disclosed today an attempted jail break, involving three prisoners, was thwarted in the city's penthouse jail last night after a hand-to-hand battle.

Sheriff Gordy said the prisoners attacked Jailer Arthur Oliphant, after Oliphant opened the cell block to permit inmates to use the shower baths.

Noise of the struggle attracted Gordy and two deputies, Jesse Tollitt and Don Parks. They quickly subdued the trio.

Sheriff Gordy identified the prisoners as Daniel Cavanaugh and George Jenkins, both of Baltimore, and Melvin Price, of Pittsburgh. The Baltimoreans, he said, are awaiting grand jury action on charges of robbery; Price is serving a 30-day term on a minor charge.

Had the trio escaped, the sheriff explained, they would have had to pass through the jail office and descend in the jail elevator to the street.

Massanetta Spring Bible Conference Sessions Ended

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—A plea for evangelism in this modern world, by Dr. J. A. McLean, pastor of the Ginter Park Presbyterian Church, Richmond, today marked the close of the eighteenth annual Massanetta Spring Bible Conference with 5,000 in attendance.

"Before non-Christians can be won to Christ," said Dr. McLean, "there must be a revival of religion among church people. Before entering into a prayer that God will send a revival it would be well to examine into our hearts to see whether we truly desire it.

"The Christian Church must evangelize or perish. While intelligent people will recognize the most effective methods of evangelism are often to be found in the regular program of the church, it is true in many cases that through extraordinary appeals and emotional pressure, non-Christians may be brought to a crisis in their spiritual experience before they will return to Christ."

G. O. P. Indorses Flather for House

Shadyside, Md., Aug. 27.—The Republican State central committee, meeting here last night with the Anne Arundel County advisory committee, unanimously indorsed Henry H. Flather, of Anne Arundel County, as a candidate for the House on the Republican ticket. Forty persons attended the gathering in the Rural Home Hotel under the chairmanship of A. W. Andrews.

A resident of Anne Arundel County since 1918, Flather is a member of a brokerage firm in Washington.

West Virginia Miners Plan Labor Day Rally

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—State headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America arranged today for an attendance of 50,000 at the U. M. W. A. Labor Day celebration at English, McDowell County.

Athletic contests, boxing matches and a long list of speakers are included in a program to start at 10 p. m. Officials said 133 local unions would participate.

Speakers scheduled included Vice President William Blizzard, of the U. M. W. A. District 17 and John B. Easton, president of the Industrial Unions Council (C. I. O.).

Judge Says Dictators Imperil U. S. Freedom

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Judge John Paul, of the United States District Court, said in an address yesterday dedicating a flagpole on the Rockingham Courthouse green that "our policy of isolation and noninterference does not justify closing our eyes to what is happening in the world."

"Wherever democracy is menaced by dictators our own principles of freedom and self-government are also threatened," he declared.

Parochial Schools Announce Openings

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 27.—Leonard Hall, parochial school for boys, will open on September 11. Brother Togatus C. F. X. is headmaster.

St. Mary's Academy, with elementary and high school courses, will open on September 12. This school is conducted by the Sisters of Charity of Nazareth, Ky. Both schools are located here.

Error 'Blacks Out' Chambersburg Lights

Chambersburg, Pa., Aug. 27.—Consumers of electricity here were without current for 30 minutes yesterday. A new employe of the municipal electric plant turned the wrong switch, halting operations.

An emergency lighting system, powered by batteries, was pressed into service at the Chambersburg Hospital so that surgeons could complete an operation then in progress.

'Want to Race?' Boy Asks; Officer Wins

Richmond, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—An 18-year-old youth was fined $10 and his driving license was revoked for six months yesterday as the result of challenging the wrong man to a race.

He passed a machine driven by a policeman in plain clothes and shouted "want to race." The officer overlook him after a chase through the residential area.

Crop Insuring Simplified In Virginia

Wheat Growers Need Only Pay Premium Before Planting

By the Associated Press

Blacksburg, Va., Aug. 27.—Wheat growers who want to take insurance on wheat for harvest in 1940 need only to file an application and pay the premium before they plant their crop, S. K. Cassell, executive officer of the AAA in Virginia, said today.

The procedure for taking out crop insurance under the 1940 plan has been simplified so that the grower can insure his wheat in only one operation.

Under the new plan, the county committee figures the insurable yield and premium rate for each farmer, who then applies for insurance to cover the number of acres of wheat he intends to plant. Total premium is figured when the farmer files his application, and he pays the premium at that time.

Nothing further is required of him except to give information regarding the actual acreage seeded and to notify his local committee in case of damage to an insured crop. Once the application is completed, it is sent to the State office for checking and then the branch crop insurance office for review. If it is accepted, the corporation mails the grower an acceptance and the application becomes an insurance contract. No policy will be written.

This procedure, Cassell said, is much simpler than that followed in the 1939 crop insurance plan and does away with several operations which were necessary then for taking out crop insurance.

Methodists Meet In Richmond, Plan 100 Gatherings

Richmond, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Plans for a series of more than 100 special meetings in a nationwide Methodist advance movement are being formulated by a committee of church leaders, Dr. J. Manning Potts, Richmond, executive secretary of the committee, said last night.

Dr. Potts, who is superintendent of the Richmond division of the Virginia conference, said the movement would be launched January 15 and continue for two months.

Purpose of the movement is to bring the newly unified Methodist Church to a "realization of its new responsibility, and great opportunity" as a Christian force in the world, Dr. Potts explained.

It is expected that two-day meetings will be held in scattered cities throughout the Nation and that each meeting will be addressed by about five prominent church leaders.

Kite Family Plans Reunion September 1

Luray, Va., Aug. 27.—The Noah Kite family, which last year dedicated a monument to kinsmen drowned in the flood of 1870, on September 1 will observe the second annual reunion with a memorial program near the site of the old homestead. Robert Keyser, Mayor-elect of Luray, the Rev. A. L. Bolick, present Mayor, and the Rev. C. K. Rhodes, of Madison, will make addresses. Those on the program committee include S. M. Huffman, of Luray, and Miss Rachel Crigler, of Madison.

World War Comrades Meet at Winchester

Winchester, Va., Aug. 27.—Lieut. A. J. Wilson, of Pittsburgh, met his old commander, Capt. D. M. Sprinkle, of Winchester, today, for the first time since the World War ended in France.

Wilson served in Sprinkle's battery throughout the war. He bade his commander farewell when the latter was assigned to duty with the Inter-Allied Commission in Berlin.

Wilson's visit to Winchester this week was to renew his friendship with Capt. Sprinkle.

Moncure Home Burns

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—An early morning fire destroyed the home of Powhatan Moncure at Bealeton today. The damage was estimated at $5,000. Moncure, employed in Washington, was away with his family for the week-end.

BOUNCING BABY'S BIRTHDAY. New decorations, new instruments for the musicians, a lovely new singer from New York, a multitude of favors, a special dinner and a big and ornate birthday cake—all of these will signalize the birthday of that prosperous one-year-old, the Hour Glass on next Friday, September 1. (Isn't it funny how night club birthdays always seem to fall on a payday?)

Singer Helen Warren, whom movie scouts are said to be pursuing, will open an Hour Glass engagement on the night of the birthday party. The bandstand will be all done up in silver palms, the Cocomos will play on new white instruments. Owner-Manager Vincent Gallagher says for you and you to come up and cut yourself a slice of birthday cake.

Dick (Ha-Cha) Gardner, notable singer-saxophonist, will join Dick Koons' Mayflower Lounge orchestra shortly after Labor Day. Dick is the lad you used to see singing with Ethel Shutta in George Olson's stage orchestra. He also played with Freddy Rich.

Cocktail and supper dance sessions at the Mayflower are currently being celebrated in the east end of the Presidential room, while artisans ready the lounge for its annual "champagne and orchids" opening party.

BUDDY DROWNS — NEARLY. Lotus' favorite singer, Buddy Shaner, would be at the bottom of the Middle River now if two pals hadn't fished him out and dehydrated him the other day. He swallowed about two gallons of water, which isn't his favorite beverage. P. S.: The Muriel Kretzlow girls open at the Lotus today, also the Cassanovas, adagioteers. And other acts.

Organist Eddie Daniels and the Neptune Room's new Couriers play together so smoothly you'd think they were old associates. But they never laid eyes on each other until their meeting in Neptune.

VACATIONEERING is that doyen of maitres d'hotel, Robert, of the Shoreham. He's off to the World's Fair, has promised not to get marooned in the W. F. parachutes . . . Martin, of the Madrillon, is back from the Fair, says the General Motors exhibit is just wonderful. But we think he liked the Aquacade better . . . Huey Liang, manager of Bamboo Gardens, leaves today for the Fair and New England. He's going without a care on his mind, because the "Hollywood Blondes" and the rest of the snappy Bamboo show are being held over this week.

To Inquirers. Yes, Singer Libby Frazier is still at the Uptown cocktail lounge. But she's taking time out from singing, just making herself generally ornamental and useful around the place.

BIG "LITTLE JOE." Though he's only about 5 feet high, "Little Joe" Hart, who brings his band to Glen Echo tonight, is concededly one of the biggest band leaders in the business. He came up the hard way, winning a scholarship to get into a university but had to give it up and go to work to help support the Hart family when depression struck.

Those Tuesday eve "jitterbug contests" at the A. T. & S. Barbecue are about half over now. Better go down while you still have a chance to get in the money.

THE MUSICAL LADS. Chet de Chastain, leader of the Wardman Park Penguins, claims that his base clarinet is the only one in Washington, outside of the National Symphony Orchestra . . . If you see Eddie Whitesell bump his accordion with his chin in the Cafe Caprice, it's because he's changing to a different key and mood. And Eddie's full of moods . . . Jerry Rhoades, of the Lounge Riviera, is a double-duty musician. He plays the bass and also manages the Macias booking office . . . Sidney Boyd, of the Maryland Gardens, sings in French and German, but we're told nobody seems to be asking for German songs right now . . . Mervin, whose accordioning is proving so popular in the Harrington Tavern, is a native Washingtonian. He was recommended for the spot by Barnee, of the Shoreham . . . Bert Bernath, of the Carlton Cocktail Lounge, used to raise tropical fish. But now he's raising a family . . . Dick Ashby, owner of Dick's Grill, played trombone in the Palace Theater orchestra until 1932 when the sound films arrived . . . If you want to find Durward Bowersox, Rainbow Room's temperamental violinist, on a Sunday, just roam around Beverly Beach.

Hi Hat's Angie Rodante has a new pet name, bestowed on her by Dick Reger. It's "Walking Spanish Omelet." Dick claims she rates it because of her new red and yellow evening gown.

DERBY RENOVATION. "My, it looks fresh and nice in here. Have you been renovating?" we said to Al Simmonds, of the Brown Derby. Said Al, "Well, we washed the pictures. And it nearly killed us."

Good Teamwork

Representative John C. Kunkel seems to have mastered the difficult problem of being S. Garton Churchill's partner, and if ever a pair kept clear of disaster on a dangerous, ill-fitting hand it was these two on today's deal, played at a recent tournament.

Most of the contestants got hopelessly tangled, bidding against each other with their opposing long suits. But Churchill and his partner reached a good contract of four spades and through fine play and a little luck made it.

The ten of trumps was led by West who wished to kill heart ruffs in dummy as he held potential winners in the suit. Small was played from the board and from East, South winning with the jack. He cashed the ace and king of hearts and led a third round, ruffing with the spade eight. East overruffed with a trump honor and exited with a low spade. Churchill sensed the bad division against him and put on the spade six which held the trick. He finessed the diamond suit on the next play, losing to East's king, and East now exited with another diamond. Declarer won the ace and jack, took the ace of clubs, then led a club, trumping with the spade five. He played a heart, West won and East discarded his last club. Saddled with the lead, West had to execute the coup de grace upon his partner who, having only trumps, was forced to underplay, with his king-seven, declarer's ace-nine.

Churchill made four spades, losing one trump, one heart, and one diamond.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

The Diarist has been doing a bit of sleuthing to determine what has happened to the grievances of yesteryear. Most of them, it is pleasant to report, are nicely settled, thank you.

There is the cause celebre in the Baltimore Social Security Board offices, revolving about the Messrs. Schultz and Sumpf, allegedly fired through antiunion discrimination. They are reinstated there and are "living happily ever after."

The case involving the firing of a Miss Singer, supposedly because her boss, Conciliation Service Director Steelman, didn't like unions, is ended with Miss Singer in another job in the Labor Department. No case against Dr. Steelman on union discrimination was ever seriously prosecuted. Obviously, unions have no fairer friend at court than he, as testified by his universally praised behavior in the coal strike last spring.

The messenger in the Railroad Retirement Board who was classified as a psychotic by a Civil Service Commission physician who was not a psychiatrist, is now employed in the Smithsonian Institution. The protest which followed the diagnosis resulted in an agreement that only specialists make decisions on cases where the mental angle arises.

The union hue and cry against "exiling to Siberia" U. S. Employment Service employes, who were moved from the Labor Department Building to a remodeled garage, fell on deaf ears. The employes are still "exiled."

The most spectacular case in recent times, that of Mrs. Edna Fox Hamus, who accused the National Archives of blacklisting her after dismissal, was agreeably terminated when Mrs. Hamus found employment first in the Civil Aeronautics Authority and later, at a permanent job, in the Office of Education. A month ago she left Washington, however, to join her husband, a Marine, who recently left the Philippine station for a post in San Diego.

The most recent case, that of Morton Friedman, dismissed from the WPA allegedly as an act of antiunion discrimination, is still unsettled and the UFWA reports it is still fighting.

By a three-cornered deal, the Government recently received a check for $1,000 from the Carnegie Heroism Trust—an award for bravery to a 120-pound farmer who plunged into a swirling river and rescued a 13-year-old girl. The hero promptly had the check made over to the Farm Security Administration, which had lent him the money, the Agriculture Department announced yesterday.

The details are these: Charlie Baker, 37-year-old farmer in McLennan County, Tex., obtained a rehabilitation loan from the FSA to buy livestock and equipment for his 450-acre ranch and to get on his feet for a new start.

Not long ago he spied a young girl, Jo Ann Monsingo, swimming with friends, step into water over her head in the Bosque River. Baker plunged in, clothes and all, grabbed the girl and was pulled under and downstream with her. He broke away and tried again, but the same thing happened. Finally he got close enough so that those standing on boulders were able to pull the pair out.

The Carnegie Trust sent Baker a medal and promised him a $1,000 check. He decided to use it to pay off his loan and the check was made out directly payable to the FSA.

Principal resolutions to be debated at the National Federation of Federal Employes convention opening September 4 in San Francisco, the NFFE announced yesterday, are:

Extension and protection of the merit system; extension of classification to the field services; adoption of $1,500 minimum salary for all full-time adult workers, and corresponding increases for positions requiring greater degrees of skill and experience; stated promotion intervals; establishment of an adequately staffed, equipped, and financed central personnel agency; adjustment on a completely equitable basis of all quarters, subsistence, laundry, fuel and other similar charges; optional retirement liberalized; extra pay for night work and overtime; shorter work week; allowance for transportation when transfers are ordered; institution of proper methods of efficiency ratings; and abolition of the average restriction in appropriation bills.

Fire Volunteers Plan Littlestown Session

Gettysburg, Pa., Aug. 27.—Representatives of 2,300 volunteer firemen will gather at Crouse Park in Littlestown on Labor Day for the seventeenth convention of the Adams County Firemen's Association. President F. V. Topper, McSherrystown, will preside over morning and afternoon business sessions. Officers will be elected and the 1940 convention town selected in the afternoon.

Convention speakers will include James E. Fisher, Lebanon, president of the Pennsylvania State Firemen's Association. Five past State presidents also are listed on the speaking program. The annual convention parade will move at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Howard T. Wherley, Littlestown, will be chief marshal.

Goodwill Industries Schedules 2 Services

The Rev. George A. Ackerly, assistant pastor of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, will speak at the chapel service at the Goodwill Industries at 8:15 a. m. Wednesday. The Rev. Jones R. Miller, of the Calvary Assembly of God, will speak at the same time Friday.

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

CHAPTER XVI.

"IF THEY go far you won't get them back with that thing," I said, indicating the tiny object hanging at her breast.

DYER

"They won't go out of range," she answered, "and this whistle is better than it looks—and sounds." She put it to her lips, her cheeks puffed, and from the nickle cylinder, far smaller than a pencil, came the most ridiculous thin squeal. It sounded like an expiring peanut roaster; you could barely hear it. I estimated it would carry not more than 20 feet, but instantly both dogs burst up over the crest a hundred yards away and came toward us with the pounding rush of a cavalry charge.

"All right," called the girl, "never mind. Hie on!—They call it a 'silent whistle,'" she said, as the brothers galloped off again. "Dogs can hear a much higher note than humans, as I understand it. This whistle is pitched just above normal human hearing. But The MacGlashan has answered it, when the wind was right, from nearly a mile away along the beach."

"May I see it?" I asked, really interested. She lifted the string over her head and handed the whistle to me. "And you say you can signal to your dog even when he's right in among a group of people, and none of them will be any the wiser?"

"I've never tried it, but I'm sure I could," said the girl. "We have a second whistle like this down at the house and mother and I have amused ourselves calling the dogs back and forth between us with the two of them. I never can hear mother's whistle, and she can't hear mine. But the dogs always do."

"There might be use for that," I said, thoughtfully. "You could send notes, in the dark—" I trailed off, staring at the twig of nickle. In a moment Adriana spoke, not entirely irrelevantly.

"By the way, what did you find out about that man, and the company?"

"Plenty," said I, "and I'll know more when the mail gets in tomorrow. It appears that Mr. Raskin has been in a number of businesses, man and boy, and none of them smelled very good. He was in oil for a while; he has been a salesman and public relations man for an armament firm; he has been suspected of illegal export of worthless war materials to Spain, and at one time and another he has taken some interest in the chemical industry. This last interest was the one he sold my uncle on when he got him to put up the money to build that plant at Menemsha. According to the lawyer, those buildings really do contain the equipment to extract bromine from sea water. He doesn't know whether the company has the apparatus to get anything else, or whether, for that matter, any considerable amount of bromine was actually squeezed out of that beautiful blue ocean in front of us. Mr. Raskin couldn't be bothered with anything so banal as a financial statement, and apparently by dear Uncle Nathan never seriously asked him for more than that first fine flow of talk we heard before lunch—as long as the dividends kept up. And the lawyer thinks that as long as Raskin was able to get more money out of my uncle, he was always able to pay him back a fraction of what he borrowed, and call it dividends. Then, when Uncle Nathan died, he had to think fast, have a 'meeting,' and work some sort of monkey business to cover up. We don't know what he's done, and the only thing the lawyer can figure out to do is to start suit, and see if we can't force an accounting. Maybe he's right, but I have some other ideas I want to try first."

"You're grinning," said Adriana. "What are you planning to do?"

"IF SO, it's a grim grin," I said. "When I don't like a man as much as I don't like Mr. Raskin, or when I think a man has done me as much dirt as I know he has, I want to meet him face to face and settle the matter personally. A lawsuit is just a duel with swords at 20 paces. It hasn't any attractions for me except as a last resource, or as a smoke-screen for other action. But first I like to be sure of my ground, and the way to be sure in this case is to have a look at that factory. Why is it shut down? Is the apparatus in there? Is it the kind of apparatus we suppose? Are those tanks full, as he claims, and if full, are they full of bromine? With those questions answered, we'll know better where we stand."

"And how do you plan to get answers?"

"I had thought of sneaking over there tonight, climbing the fence and having a look around, but I have a better idea now. Tomorrow morning I should have the lawyer's letter; and tomorrow you should give me a sailing lesson. As soon as I get the letter, we start out in the Adriana, and we stay out until after dark. Then, we sail quietly into Menemsha Bight, anchor off the beach, and I row ashore in the dinghy, make my investigation, and then come back aboard. After which, we officially return from our sail and tie up to Capt. Matt's wharf. How does that sound?"

"All right, if the wind and tide are favorable to get in and out of Menemsha Creek at the exact times you want to. I'm sure we couldn't beat in against the tide with your boat, without a motor. Also, if you can get over that fence, and also if the watchman doesn't catch you and throw you out on your ear."

"Leave that part up to me," I said, "and you take care of the tides and other related matters. Is there a moon tonight, navigating officer?"

"Not 'til late, I think," she said. "And besides, there's a good chance of the weather thickening."

"You mean more fog? That would be swell, now that I have some one on the Adriana who can find our way about by feel. It would be a perfect cover for operations around the Sea Reduction Corporation's building, too. Let it fog. But," I added, staring out toward the cut-glass line of the horizon, "it doesn't look much like fog now."

"Give it a night, and wait and see what the wind does," she answered, watching the green-rimmed sound with contentment. "It is beautiful, isn't it?"

I agreed. She said:

"Did you notice the name of the tiny blue cutter made fast to the fishing boats in Menemsha Basin?"

"No. Do you mean the one that belongs to that grand old artist with the white beard? The one who looked like Zeus?"

"Does it belong to him? I noticed him at work on one of the creek-side wharfs. He did look like a nice person. I suppose his being an artist explains why the boat has such a queer name—it's called the Tout Passe Sauf la Beaute."

"The what?" I said.

"Believe it or not," she nodded. "The Tout Passe Sauf la Beaute."

"I suppose he means that anything can pass his little tub except beautiful things."

"Oh, no. It means, of course, that Nothing Endures Save Beauty."

"THAT'S a literal translation," I said, "but you can't tell me that an old guy with a face as clever and amusing as his isn't capable of a play on words."

Adriana's glance went back to the rolling waters that seemed no more intensely blue than her eyes.

"Do you believe that?" she asked.

"What?"

"That nothing lasts except beauty?"

"Oh, well, in a way . . ." I began.

And thus launched into a conversation which lasted the rest of the afternoon, and certainly outlasted beauty as a topic, the girl and I penetrated to the core of the problem of beauty, dismissed it, discussed eternity, religion, war and peace, and touched eventually (rather cautiously) on love. From this we hurried on, to how cruel women are to men, a proposition which I proved to my satisfaction, giving conclusive illustrations; but she was rather stubborn in this matter, holding rather to the ridiculous premise that men are cruel to women, which she attempted to support with several lame examples. I'm not sure we got anything settled, but I know we both had a good time. Then, when the red-hot cannon ball dropped into the sea between Cuttyhunk and Gay Head, we walked back to the house. I had supper there, and Adriana drove me to Menemsha.

Leaning against the side of the car we said good-by, until next morning. I stood and watched her drive off, and then walked slowly through what is known as the gloaming (and a persistent smell of fish) to my boat. After a day with Adriana it appeared you had a song going on inside you, or something. Whatever it was, it was pleasant and tucked away pretty deep in your chest.

I found a note stuck in the crack of the companionway door, signed by Capt. Hansen, and saying he had repaired the damage to the Adriana, without being asked, just like that. In other words, everybody in the world was nice—except Mr. Raskin, the man of mystery, over there behind the glow of the Patria's portholes, which dropped straggly yellow pencilings of light on the quiet shine of the basin. I sat on the cabin roof for a time, thinking about that plump crooked man, and watching night flow in over Menemsha.

All the fishermen were hanging out riding lights, and calling back and forth to each other in English or Portuguese, and laughing. Their voices rang across the gunmetal waters, and from time to time a dory passed up or down the basin with an even rattle of oars in oarlocks and the steady splash of the blades. Everything seemed to me peaceful and happy—except the Patria over there, in which a cabin clock sounded two bells, thin and tiny, to remind me that I'd better be turning in. Tomorrow would be a long day, and I should have work to do after that letter from the lawyer reached me.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

British Navy Takes Over All Empire Ships

Nazi Insist Bremen, With 1,200 Americans, Will Land Tomorrow

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 27.—As the "Atlantic jitters" increased tonight and the British admiralty assumed control of empire merchant shipping, two German vessels in New York prepared suddenly to speed home without passengers.

The Hamburg-Lloyd liners St. Louis, which yesterday canceled a West Indies cruise three hours before sailing time, and the City of New York, due to sail later in the week, obtained clearance papers today for immediate departure.

Three hours after the papers were issued, the St. Louis sailed under sealed orders for her home port.

Passengers who arrived today on the British White Star liner Georgic and the French liner De Grasse said they had been afraid their ships might be ordered back to Europe during the voyage.

Bremen Reported Delayed

Meanwhile, losses for major steamship lines mounted swiftly as the transatlantic shipping situation remained as muddled as ever.

No satisfactory reason for the one-day delay in arrival of the German liner Bremen could be found, and officials of the Hamburg-American line insisted the ship would dock Tuesday morning. Originally, she was scheduled to tie up Monday.

The line said the delay was due to bad weather, but the United States Weather Bureau reported that for the last few days conditions over the Bremen's position had been fairly good, with no disturbance recorded.

All radio messages were refused by the ship itself, and this was true, also, of other German vessels on the high seas.

[The German propaganda ministry advised the United Press today that it was unable to confirm the fact, but assumed the Bremen was "naturally included" in the order for German ships to return to the Fatherland. The Bremen sailed for New York Wednesday from Southampton with 1,200 Americans aboard. The propaganda ministry added that if the Bremen was returning, the Americans might be disembarked in "some neutral country" like Holland.—Editor's note.]

Italian Ships Stay in Port

Italian liners remained safely in port here and abroad as they have for the last several days, with exception of the Vulcania, which is bound eastward at sea.

The original orders have not been changed, and so the Roma, which is in New York, did not leave on a West Indies cruise. She will remain here indefinitely.

These cancellations and others plus losses of passengers have cost the lines uncounted thousands of dollars in revenue, as all passage moneys will be refunded this week.

One ship which departed on time was the Cunard White Star liner Mauretania, which sailed for Europe with 745 passengers after 262 others had canceled on the eve of sailing.

Only 169 citizens of the United States were aboard.

Oil Lack May Close Several Refineries

Austin, Tex., Aug. 27 (AP).—A prediction several refineries would be forced to close due to a shortage of crude came today on the eve of meetings that may decide whether the production holiday which has stopped nearly two-thirds of the Nation's oil flow will be continued.

The interstate oil compact commission and the Texas railroad commission, State oil regulatory body, meet here tomorrow. The shutdown, barring an extension, ends Tuesday or Wednesday night.

At Houston, D. W. Hovey, president of the Gulf Coast Refinerers Association, said "several companies will be forced to close September 1 unless steps are taken to provide them with crude oil."

O'Conor Picks Committee of 71 To Make Md. Traffic Safer

Nonpartisan Group to Study and Recommend Means to Cut Casualties On State Highways, Says Governor

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 27.—Gov. O'Conor, describing traffic accidents as "one of the greatest problems of the day," appointed a Maryland Safety Committee of 71 persons today to study and recommend safety measures for State highways.

"I believe," he said, "the State will be shirking its plain duty if every effort is not pursued to reduce to a minimum fatal and serious accidents, and the public can be assured that the full facilities of the State administration will be used to accomplish such an end."

The committee, he continued, was non-partisan and represented civic, educational, fraternal and business groups in every section of the State.

The Governor added that he hoped members of the Legislature would be influenced by actions of his "committee of 71" and would "give backing to the formation of an enduring organization" to promote traffic safety.

Committeemen include:

James B. Fitzgerald, Bethesda, elected yesterday as commander of the State department of the American Legion; Alma H. Ambrose, president, Eastern Regional Conference of the National Women's Party; Mrs. Guy R. Clements, president, Maryland P.-T. A.; Dr. Albert S. Cook, State superintendent of schools; Motor Vehicles Commissioner W. Lee Elgin; State Police Superintendent Beverly G. Ober; Police Commissioner Robert F. Stanton, Baltimore; John J. McMullen, Cumberland; Frank Lynch, Hagerstown; Mrs. Edith Shank and Mrs. Harry Haller, Frederick; Mayor George Haley, Annapolis, and Dr. S. S. Steinberg, dean of the University of Maryland College of Engineering.

Funeral Services To Be Held Today For Mrs. Graham

Funeral services for Mary Graham, 84, will be held today at 2 p. m. from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edith G. Schilling, 602 Delafield place northwest. Mrs. Graham died Friday at South River Park, Md.

Born in Dublin, Mrs. Graham came to this country in 1880, and lived in Washington for 40 years. Since the death of her husband, she made her home with a daughter, Mrs. Esther Petpler, of 621 Delafield place northwest. She was a member of St. John's Lodge Chapter of the Eastern Star and of the Fourth Presbyterian Church.

Surviving are another daughter, Mrs. Mae J. Davis, of Montgomery, Ala.; two sons, James and Edmund H. Graham, jr., of Takoma Park, Md., nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Today's services will be conducted by the Rev. James H. Miers, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Kennedy Seeks Extra Ships For Americans

Rep. Fish Caught in Border Closing; Farley Sails for Ireland

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 27.—Ambassador Kennedy extended his efforts tonight to aid Americans in obtaining transportation homeward.

Even as his own family hastened to London from the French Riviera, the Ambassador announced the Embassy was seeking to induce owners of vessels to make unscheduled visits to British ports to evacuate Americans—especially women and children.

"Recent cancellations of ship sailings have aggravated the position of several thousand Americans now in England and awaiting transportation to the United States," Kennedy said.

"There is a possibility of securing several such vessels if the owners can be assured of sufficient business to warrant taking the ships off their regular runs. All Americans who are interested in securing such accommodations are requested to communicate with the Embassy on Monday."

Rep. Fish Caught

In connection with these efforts it was learned in Amsterdam that negotiations were under way with the Nederland Company, to charter a steamer capable of evacuating 500 to 800 Americans next Wednesday.

Best estimates were that 10,000 Americans are in Europe with more than half that number anxiously seeking ways to get home. The rest, detained by business or other imperative reasons, planned to remain.

Some 3,000 Americans in France were advised to go to Cherbourg and Le Havre and await the first opportunity to sail.

Americans striving to leave Germany were handicapped by curtailment of air and rail service across the country's borders.

Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, left Berlin today for the French frontier, not knowing how he was to get across and on to Paris.

Farley Leaves France

A small group of Americans was virtually stranded in Lisbon, Portugal, by cancellation of Italian sailings.

Fresh worry for Americans in Paris came today with the government's "pressing notice" to civilians to leave the city.

The American liner President Roosevelt, in an emergency trip, sailed from Le Havre with 250 Americans. The group included Postmaster General Farley and his two daughters. Farley, however, said he would get off at Cobh, Ireland, for another week of his vacation, refusing to have his holiday interrupted.

Berlin railway stations were crowded with foreigners trying to get away. When tickets for foreign cities were demanded, officials replied:

"We do not know whether you can get through or not."

This was the reply given at Berlin's mail railway station when tickets were requested for Paris, Brussels, Amsterdam, Copenhagen, Switzerland and Poland.

Germany's Claims 'Just,' Declares Rep. Fish

Berlin, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Representative Fish said today that he believes Germany's claims are "just."

"I favor liquidation of the Versailles Treaty in the East," he added during a stopover here enroute to Paris.

Speed Flier Dies in 'Jinx' Plane That Had Injured Him Before

Ship Crashes While Being Groomed for Cleveland Air Meet

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 27.—A "jinx" plane being groomed for speed events of the National Air Races crashed today near the race course, killing its pilot, Delbert Bush, 26, of Leavenworth, Kans.

The bullet-like red monoplane took off from the Cleveland airport runway, scene of the aviation carnival starting next Saturday, and flew to the adjoining race course.

Bush roared once around the steel tower, pylons marking the course and as he came back across the airport, his motor sputtered. He straightened out and continued north beyond the field.

About three-quarters of a mile further his motor stopped. Such planes require over 100 miles per hour to stay in the air. He was only about 500 feet above the ground. The ship dropped quickly.

Bush turned slightly and his parachute fluttered out, but he had no chance to leave his cockpit.

The racer dived into a ploughed field, dug a huge hole in the ground and bounced along into the woods bordering the Cleveland metropolitan park system. It crashed into the trees and was smashed into a heap of wreckage but did not burn.

Witnessing the plunge was Bush's partner, William Tholem, also of Leavenworth. They operated the Bush-Tholen air service and flying school at Kansas City.

Bush's wife, Charlotte, and 10-month-old daughter, Chardell, were in Leavenworth.

DELBERT BUSH,

The plane had been known to fliers as a "jinx ship." Originally owned by Joe Jacobson, veteran race pilot, it was prepared for last year's air races, but it developed a "flutter" and was withdrawn. Bush and Tholen purchased it and Bush cracked up in the plane at Kansas City August 3, but escaped with slight injuries.

Edmund Platt, Former Federal Official, Dies

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chazy, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Edmund Platt, vice president of the Marine Midland group since 1930 and the first vice governor of the Federal Reserve Board, died of a heart attack at 1 a. m. today at Sunnywood, the summer home on Lake Champlain of his sister, Mrs. George Loring Hubbell. Mr. Platt was 74 years old.

A native of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., he attended Harvard and in 1891 began a 40-year association with the Poughkeepsie Eagle. After holding several civic posts, he was elected to Congress in 1913, serving for seven years before resigning in June, 1920, to accept appointment by President Wilson to the Federal Reserve Board.

He became vice governor in August of that year and held that post for 10 years. At that time he resigned to become vice president of the Marine Midland group. He was a close friend of Senator Carter Glass—although Mr. Platt was a Republican—and often voiced approval of the Virginia Senator. He was a director of several corporations and also belonged to many clubs, including the Cosmos, of Washington, and honorary societies.

His wife and daughter, three sisters and a brother, survive.

Fitzpatrick Mass To Be Wednesday At Shrine at C. U.

Solemn high requiem mass for Mrs. Mary Fitzpatrick, native of County Kerry, Ireland, and long-time resident of Washington, will be said at 9 a. m. Wednesday in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick, who died Saturday at Providence Hospital after an illness of two weeks, was the widow of Thomas Fitzpatrick, once captain of the guard at Catholic University and who rang the bell for the first mass at the university about 50 years ago.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick was 66 years old. She made her home at 1026 Otis street northeast. Surviving are a son, Edward A. Fitzpatrick; a daughter, Mrs. Stephen Pope, both of Washington, and five grandchildren.

Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Funeral Today For McGrath, Veteran of 100

He Fought in Indian Campaign, the Civil And Spanish Wars

Exactly two weeks after celebrating his 100th birthday, Hugh K. McGrath, veteran of the Civil War, Indian campaign and Spanish-American War, will be buried today at Soldiers' Home—where his Irish humor enlivened military reminiscences for many a year.

Although in bed on his birthday, August 14, he was able to receive friends and exchange reminiscences. Death came Thursday from pneumonia.

When other veterans in the home told of their exploits, "Hughey," as he was called, would relate how he was nearly scalped by the Indians and how he did lose an eye in that combat.

Until about a month ago, Mr. McGrath was able to be up and around the Soldiers' Home, with pride in his hardihood.

Services at 10 a. m. today in the chapel at Soldiers' Home will be followed by burial with military honors. A delegation from Post No. 17, Irish War Veterans, to which Mr. McGrath belonged, will march from the chapel to the cemetery.

Mr. McGrath, a native of Pennsylvania, belonged to the John Jacob Astor Camp of Spanish War Veterans and to Gen. Adna Chaffee Camp of Indian War Veterans.

Rites Tomorrow For Mrs. Compton

Funeral services for Mrs. Cora Mae Compton, 75, of 919 L street northwest, wife of Hermel S. Compton, retired accountant in the Auditor General's Office, will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. from Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N street northwest. Mrs. Compton died Friday evening in Gettysburg, Pa., where she and her husband had spent the last three summers.

Four years ago the couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Surviving, besides her husband, are a sister and two brothers. Burial will be in a crypt in Abbey Mausoleum.
